London, June 29.—Great fleets of British bombers battered the Rhineland industrial city of Cologne and the U-boat center of Hamburg last night to hit a new high in the devastation heaped upon Germany's war machine in a single month. And June still has two nights to go.

Observers said the raid was comparable with the previous heaviest attack on the Ruhr in which more than 2000 tons of bombs were dropped.

[A formation of large Allied bombers which coastal observers identified as United States Flying Fortresses swept across the Channel toward France at 9 p. m. tonight (3 p. m. Eastern war time).

[An hour earlier several other waves of Allied aircraft had crossed the Channel. Watchers along the coast said that there were heavy bombers in these formations also, and added that they possibly also had contained American craft.]

R. A. F. Loses 25 Bombers

Cologne, target of the first 1000-bomber raid that pulverized 600 acres in May, 1942, bore the brunt of the double-barreled night assault which cost the R. A. F. 25 four-engined planes.

It was the R. A. F.'s thirteenth heavy bombing operation of the month and was believed to have boosted the June bomb load well over the record of 12000 tons dumped on Europe during May.

Each heavy assault is estimated to deliver around 1500 tons. Nine such raids have been made on Ruhr targets alone this month, for a total of 13,500 tons. The R. A. F. has lost 269 bombers in the record attacks this month. Weather kept the heavyweights on the ground until June 11.

The R. A. F. also laid mines in enemy waters last night in the delayed-action warfare that, according to an official announcement, already has sunk at least 400 Axis vessels.

Huge fires were spread throughout Cologne and, although clouds prevented an accurate assessment

U. S. Aircraft Strike at Japs In Aleutians and Solomons

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

America's stepped-up Pacific aerial offensive mounted in intensity Sunday night and Monday, as Army and Navy aircraft struck at Japanese bases and shipping in the Solomons and Aleutians, without losing a plane.

Navy Dauntless dive-bombers and Avenger torpedo bombers, escorted by Wildcat fighters, savagely pounded the enemy seaplane base at Rekata Bay, Santa Isabel Island, in the middle Solomons, Sunday evening, a communique reported.

"The bombing created so much smoke and dust that observation of the attack was difficult," said the Navy.

A little later, formations of the same type planes attacked the Nipponese base at Munda, on New Georgia Island, also in the central Solomons, starting fires in the munitions dumps, camp section and shore defense positions.

Still later, American planes staged a night attack on enemy ships in the same general area. The report simply said that "a small Japanese naval disposition" was bombed, but that the results were not determined.

Officers here said there was no indication that any appreciable enemy naval forces were in the area, and that the unit attacked may have been only a supply ship or two with escort.

At the same time, Navy Ventura medium bombers and Army Liberator heavy bombers and Mitchell medium bombers were striking at the Nip base on Kiska in the Aleutians.

Six attacks were carried out Sunday and hits were scored on the main camp and coastal defenses of Kiska harbor, it was said. The col-

Italians Admit 'Very Great Damage;' All 'Forts' Return

By Noland Norgaard

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, June 29.—Reaching far into northern Italy across the width of the Mediterranean, 100 Flying Fortresses have dumped hundreds of tons of bombs upon the mainland port of Leghorn, spreading destruction in the harbor, railway yards and war plants, and leaving the whole area covered by smoke so dense as to be impenetrable five hours after the attack.

This great raid, thrown in yesterday without the loss of a single Fortress, hit an Italian light cruiser and four cargo ships and left one of Italy's oil refineries ablaze.

"Little opposition was encountered," it was officially stated today.

While the Italian high command in its broadcast communique was admitting "very great damage" in Leghorn, reconnaissance photographs showed a hit and two damaging misses on the cruiser; many hits on the port's oil tanks, railroad lines, bridges and storage depots.

The Italians reported that 175 persons were killed and 300 injured

WAVE's Attacker Given 18 Years

Charles Joseph Mannix, 33, Agriculture Department marketing specialist, was sentenced to 18 years in prison for attempting to rape a 27-year-old WAVE by Federal Judge William C. Coleman last night in Baltimore.

Mannix was convicted by a jury in Federal Court after a two-day trial.

The attempted rape occurred on the United States Public Health Service grounds near Bethesda, Md., last May 27.

An all-time record heat wave of 18 consecutive days of 90-degree temperatures in June was broken yesterday when an early afternoon rain forced the thermometer down 16 degrees between 1 and 2 p. m., bringing it to 69 degrees. Yesterday's high was 87 at 1:20 p. m.

Continued cool and moderate winds was the promise of the Weather Bureau for today, bringing relief to Washington's sweltering war workers as well as to suburban farmers who have been looking with increasing worry at the overheated soil.

One heat prostration was reported at noon yesterday, just before the rainstorm brought about the sharp drop in temperature, bringing the total of reported prostrations during the heat wave to 25. Mrs. Josephine Orsini, of 87 P Street Northwest, was said by police to have been taken to Garfield Hospital but was released shortly afterward.

Besides relieving nearby farmers, whose crops had been endangered by the continued heat and drought, the rain and drop in temperature brought some temporary relief to the heavily taxed water-supply system of Washington.

During the windstorm preceding the rain the 18-foot sailboat in which William J. Cocke, 19, of 3 Chevy Chase Circle and Cora Savin, 17, of 6152 Thirty-first Street Northwest were sailing, capsized in the Potomac River. They were rescued by Lieut. O. R. Saunders of the Harbor Police. Neither required medical attention.

Aid and Comfort

By the Associated Press

New York, June 29.—A small man with a goatee stood before a United States commissioner today and calmly admitted, with a slight trace of a foreign accent, that he had been part of the espionage system feeding the Nazi high command with American war secrets.

The prisoner was Erwin Harry de Spretter, 53, a German-educated consulting engineer who was arrested as the accomplice of Ernest Frederick Lehmitz, 57, Staten Island victory gardener and air raid warden. Lehmitz entered a similar plea of guilty yesterday to violating the Wartime Espionage Act.

United States Commissioner Martin C. Epstein held De Spretter in $50,000 bail for grand jury action as he did in the case of Lehmitz yesterday. If convicted on the charges, the men face penalties of 30 years or more in prison, or death.

E. E. Conroy, chief of the New York office of the FBI, said De Spretter, also a Staten Island resident, had supplied Lehmitz with information concerning national defense plants.

De Spretter was a specialist in heat radiation and allied engineering subjects and as a consultant to firms holding war contracts had

However, 3 Millions Voted 'Won't Permit Much of Anything In Domestic Way'

A Senate Appropriations subcommittee yesterday voted to continue domestic operations of Elmer Davis' Office of War Information on a drastically limited scale.

The Senate group restored slightly more than three million dollars of the OWI's budget request for $8,865,906 for domestic operations, after the House had denied any funds.

So deep was the cut that Chairman Kenneth McKellar of the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee told reporters it would not permit OWI "to do much of anything" in a domestic way.

Funds Are Earmarked

Clipped from the bill were all funds for OWI publications and motion pictures, targets of many a congressional attack, nor was any money provided for domestic field operations.

McKellar said funds provided were earmarked for the OWI news bureau, radio work, program requirements and the office of the director.

For OWI's noncontroversial overseas operations branch, the Senate group voted the full $27,003,590 asked by the Budget Bureau. The House had cut the overseas branch to $22,500,000.

While OWI funds were partially restored, the Senate subcommittee retained the stringent House cut in Office of Civilian Defense appropriations. The OCD had asked $5,746,522, but the House clipped this to four million dollars and the Senate group refused to grant more.

Will Force Reorganization

The reduced appropriations, committeemen said, would force a drastic reorganization of OCD and practically wipe out all of the agency's volunteer services.

Senator Lodge (Republican) of Massachusetts, made an unsuccessful attempt to amend the bill to transfer oil price and rationing authority from the OPA to the Petroleum Administration for War, making Oil Administrator Ickes in effect "oil czar."

Lodge said he would renew his attempt in the full Senate Appropriations Committee today and later on the Senate floor. He said he was convinced that only in this

CCC Bill Veto Expected

Conferees Vote to Shut Off All Consumer Subsidies

Congress Races Fiscal Deadline

As Congress neared the deadline tonight for enactment of appropriation bills before the new fiscal year begins at midnight these actions yesterday highlighted the hectic legislative situation:

The Army bill, carrying 71 billion dollars, was passed by the Senate amid criticism of "extravagance and waste" in war spending.

OWI was voted " a little more than three million dollars" by a Senate committee for its domestic operations branch which the House had voted to abolish.

OPA's fund was boosted to 177 millions by the same committee, which also removed a House-inserted subsidy ban from the bill.

Proposed restrictions on the President's use of emergency funds were rejected by the Senate.

Compromise on removal of William E. Dodd, Goodwin Watson and Robert Morss Lovett from payroll was defeated in the Senate.

NYA was voted 48 millions by the Senate, though the House has decreed liquidation of the agency.

Conferees agreed at night session to shut off consumer subsidies altogether.

The House rejected Senate amendments to the Agriculture Department bill's provisions on crop insurance and soil conservation.

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Administration's price roll-back program breathed its dying gasp last night in a House and Senate conference agreement to shut off consumer subsidies altogether.

Congressional conferees, after a day-long battle, wrote a flat prohibition on price rollbacks into a 750 million dollar Commodity Credit Corporation loan bill, forbade any new subsidy programs without the specific consent of Congress, and froze existing maximum production subsidies where they stand.

So tight was the straightjacket strapped around the Administration's price control program that many thought the President would veto the bill. Conference action came as the CCC neared the end of its life at midnight tonight. House and Senate planned to rush the bill to final passage today to continue the corporation with limited powers to buy and sell commodities for the purpose of increasing production.

Under the agreement, the corporation would be limited to a 150-million dollar loss in its subsidy operations, and could buy and sell only at levels above the Price Act's maximum farm price standards.

Conferees dealt the death blow to the President's subsidized consumers' food program while a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee, with fine irony approved all of the money for OPA that the President asked and freed the price control agency from a House ban on sub-

Roosevelt Lays Strife To Newsmen

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt, confronted with a rebellious Congress and quarrels among his own lieutenants, yesterday blamed newspapermen for the "bickering" in Washington.

He said he could give flocks of examples to snow that newspapermen, and particularly columnists, were responsible for the tumult here. The radio also was responsible, he said, but not to the same extent.

Asked about the latest uproar, the sensational dispute between Vice President Wallace and Secretary of Commerce Jones, Mr. Roosevelt said he didn't mean to blame the newspapermen for that. He said he was surprised by that battle, too.

Nobody asked the President whether he blamed newspapermen for the action of Congress in overriding his veto of the antistrike bill or for the resignation of Chester Davis as War Food Administrator.

However, these developments, as well as the Wallace-Jones feud and the coal strike, were on the minds of reporters when they went into the President's office yesterday for the regular Tuesday afternoon press conference.

The President, in shirt sleeves and wearing a polka dot tie, was in Judge Marvin Jones yesterday took office as the third War Food Administrator in four months and issued a statement in which he said farmers are entitled to a fair return on their production.

RFC Head Sees Malice In Charges; Asks Probe

(Partial text of Wallace statement, Page 13.)

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Vice President Wallace charged yesterday that Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones has progressed from a do-nothing to an outright obstructionist policy in his approach to the task of getting strategic war materials for America.

In a statement prepared for the Senate Appropriations Committee, the Vice President called for an end to the "hamstringing bureaucracy and backdoor complaining of Mr. Jones and his employes," and suggested that the Board of Economic Welfare, of which Wallace is chairman, take over from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which Jones heads, the actual job of buying critical materials.

Now, Wallace complained, BEW has full power over strategic imports, except that it is helpless to move when Secretary Jones won't sign the checks. That happened, said Wallace, with Gen. Douglas MacArthur's "urgent" plea for more quinine production. Indirectly, he suggested that it was a time for "heads to be knocked together."

Jesse Jones' Statement

Secretary Jones hit back hard at Wallace in the following statement:

The release given out by Mr. Wallace today is filled with malice and misstatements. He makes two serious charges:

(1) That RFC had failed in the purchase and stockpiling of strategic and critical materials. The facts are that not more than 10 per cent of our purchases and commitments for these materials have been initiated by BEW. RFC commitments for foreign purchases have been approximately $3,500,000,000, of which not more than 10 per cent was originated by BEW. We have actually received and paid for materials to the value of $1,600,000,000, of which less than 5 per cent can be credited to BEW initiative.

(2) That RFC and I have obstructed and delayed programs of development and procurement initiated by BEW. There has been no serious delay by us of any vital program.

I will answer the statement in detail, and be glad to have a committee of Congress fully investigate the facts.

Big-Time Battle

Although the RFC-BEW feud for the last word on strategic imports had sizzled behind the scenes, Vice President Wallace's blast, compounded of extensive documentation and white-hot anger, caught

Russia's Farms Mobilized For War

By Wendell L. Willkie

Chapter IV

Russia's farms, just as much as its factories, have been mobilized for total war, and their capacity to support a fighting nation has been one of Hitler's miscalculations and one of the world's surprises.

Day after day we flew over these farms, all the way from the front itself, at Rzhev, to the farthest limits of cultivation in central Asia and Siberia. For Russia's farming lands stretch nearly 6000 miles behind the front.

On the Volga near Kuibishev, I had a chance to see some of Russia's collective farms at close range.

I had been told in Kuibishev of plans to dam a great bend in the Volga River for the production of electric power; and on this trip we went over the part of the Volga concerned in the proposed development.

Power Development

I am not one to be easily surprised by vast governmental power developments, but when it became clear that this one development, if completed, would produce twice as much power as all the TVA, the Grand Coulee, and the Bonneville developments combined, I began to realize that the Russians dream and plan on a scale to fit their vast forests and plains.

We left the Volga bend to drive inland to a collective farm which had formerly been a hunting estate of a member of the lesser nobility.

It had some 8000 acres, with 55 families living on it, a ratio of about 140 acres per family, which is about the size of the average farm in Rush County, Indiana.

Each of the 55 families on the farm was allowed to own one cow; the scraggly herd, consisting of every known mixture as to breed, grazed together on a common near a cluster of small houses in which the families lived.

Excellent Stock

But the collectivist farm itself owned 800 head of cattle, 250 of them cows, of excellent stock and all well cared for.

The manager was the czar of the farm. He was a man of scientific agricultural training, alert and assured. He planned the crops and directed the work. Every man, woman and child on the place was under his authority.

He, in turn, was responsible for the success of the projects and for the production of the farm's quota in the war economy.

He would rise in power and in status if he succeeded; his punishment would be severe if he failed.

This farm, like most of the collective farms of Russia, rented its tractors and mechanical equipment from government-owned machine stations and payment was made from the farm's harvest, not in rubles but in kind.

Soviet Press

Then the farm had to pay taxes, which constitute almost a rental payment to the government, also in kind.

The balance of each harvest was distributed to the members of the farm on the basis of how many

WLB Backs Subsidy Plan

Rising Food Costs Threaten Wage Stabilization Program

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

The War Labor Board warned last night that rising food prices were threatening its wage stabilization program.

In a formal statement, the board announced its unanimous support of the Administration's food subsidy program and asked that it be put into effect promptly.

By implication, the board insisted that speedy acceptance of the Administration's food-price-control program was necessary to hold to present ground and to save the wage-control program.

Significantly, the board made its statement at a time when the Administration is engaged in a critical fight on Capitol Hill to save its subsidy program, and after WLB flatly denied the demands of the United Mine Workers for a general wage increase.

Asserting that the board has "effectively stabilized wage rates" in accordance with the policy announced by Congress in the October 2 Stabilization Act, the WLB statement pointedly expressed dissatisfaction with the job done on the price control front.

"From October, 1942, through April, 1943, the cost of living increased by 6.2 per cent," the statement, approved by a unanimous board and released by Chairman William H. Davis, declared.

"This increase was principally in the cost of food. Food prices in general increased 12.9 per cent. The prices of fresh fruits and vegetables considered separately increased 57.9 per cent.

"This increased cost of food has already worked a hardship on many wage earners whose wage rates have been stabilized; particularly upon those in the lower wage groups, the greater part of

Rommel Said to Lead Defense in France

War Sidelights

Iraq Orders Emergency, Rome Says

London, June 29 (AP).—The Rome radio asserted today that a state of emergency had been proclaimed throughout Iraq.

The report, heard in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press, was without confirmation, and gave no reason for the alleged action.

However, Iraq, which joined the war against the Axis last January, has figured in Axis propaganda broadcasts frequently, most recently in connection with the temporary closing of the Turkish-Syrian border.

In that connection, the German Transocean Agency reported in an Ankara dispatch on June 17 that Premier Gen. Nuri Pasha es Said of Iraq had issued an order of the day to his troops saying "the hour of decision and active service" was approaching.

The agency asserted that this alleged order, together with the Turkish-Syrian border closing, indicated "that the Anglo-Saxons in the near future will launch a military action from the Levant." Berlin also found a possible explanation, however, in "an intensified war of nerves" on the part of the Allies.

703 Poles Near Mexico

Tucson, Ariz., June 29 (AP).—A group of 703 Polish refugees, nearing the end of a journey that has carried them more than half way around the world, proceeded today in their 20-car train to Mexico.

The group was brought together in Siberia when Germany and Russia partitioned Poland. Most of them were women and children.

They will be settled in a small village as yet undesignated, where they will operate their own farms, one of the members explained.

Brazil Jails Spy

Rio De Janeiro, June 29 (AP).—A Brazilian artillery captain and two other defendants were sentenced to 30 years in prison here yesterday after conviction of espionage.

Ten others, including the former German Ambassador and the German naval attache who were tried in absentia, were sentenced to terms of 20 to 25 years.

The Brazilian officer, Capt. Tulio Regis Nascimento, once attempted to visit American munitions and arms plants through the sponsorship of the United States military attache's office, it was said.

Testimony was introduced to show that the former German Ambassador, Dr. Kurt Pruefer, frequently had been seen in a small private plane flying seaward for the apparent purpose of gathering information concerning shipping movements.

General Georges Attacked

London, June 29 (AP).—The unreliable German radio reported today that an attempt had been made on the life of Gen. Alphonse Georges, a member of the French Committee of National Liberation and formerly commander of French armies facing Germany, under Gen. Maurice Gamelin.

There was no Allied confirmation of the report.

The Ministry of Information recorded the Nazi broadcast, which said General Georges was injured slightly when several shots were fired on him in his apartment by unknown persons.

Library Plans Regional Union Catalogue Check

Regional union catalogues at Cleveland and Philadelphia will be checked against the national union catalogue at the Library of Congress beginning tomorrow, it was announced yesterday.

The union catalogues indicate for scholars' use the location of books available in the larger libraries of this country and in some foreign libraries and are compiled under the direction of the Library of Congress.

Officials expect the checking with the Cleveland library at Western Reserve University, which has 2¾ million cards, and with the Philadelphia library at the University of Pennsylvania, to add nearly one million entries to the national catalogue. The national catalogue now contains 12 million cards.

In addition, several million new locations of books are expected to be added to the national union catalogues files here in Washington.

350,000 Troops Reported Ready For Invasion

By Frank Brutto
Associated Press Staff Writer

Bern, Switzerland, June 29.—Axis nervousness increased today amid ever-growing reports of intense defensive preparations both in Italy and in France's central Rhone Valley, where Nazi Field Marshal Rommel was reported concentrating an estimated 350,000 troops as a barrier against Allied attempts to reach the German heart of Europe.

Italy expected the start of the battle at any hour, said the Gazette De Lausanne, adding that the Italians believed an Allied fleet was ready to attack the coasts of Sicily.

Around Lyon, on the Rhone River in France, each morning German troops wearing diverse uniforms, including some of Rommel's Africa Corps, are seen, said a Lyon dispatch to the Tribune de Geneve. Rommel was reported stationed in a chateau at Montdore, where he frequently is said to set out down the Rhone Valley to inspect "vast aviation fields under construction."

In "Unending Lines"

Frenchmen going to work at dawn in that sector were reported attracted by "unending lines" of artillery and tanks, giving rise to an opinion among the population that a new campaign in France was in prospect, the dispatch said.

Uneasiness grew in Italy, said the Gazette de Lausanne, and certain fears were evident. The paper added that it was easily understood that the prospect of an Allied landing "covered by dozens of warships and thousands of planes, cannot bring comfort."

The neutral Swiss paper added that even the "most ferocious" Italian defenders were not able to deny that initial Allied successes were probable. The editor of the Frankfurter Zeitung, writing from Istanbul, predicted that Allied forces would strike at Italy and not at the Balkans.

Italy was pictured as no longer a land of lemon blossoms for tourists, but as an embattled protrusion on the European southern shores, where everything was subordinated to the deployment of troops, and where military traffic took precedence over all other. The country from Rome south was reported closed to all foreigners.

Gayda Makes Comment

Meanwhile the Fascist press and radio worked feverishly to counteract Allied propaganda which Basel's National Zeitung said was effective "because of the deadly seriousness behind it."

The extent of Allied propaganda was demonstrated by Virginio Gayda, Fascist mouthpiece, who compared Italy to an obdurate donkey belabored not only by the cudgel of Allied bombings, but also by the blandishments of carrots—leaflet appeals from President Roosevelt and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower—in an effort to induce Italy to cease fighting and accept a separate peace.

German propaganda was effective only so long as it was backed by the blitz, said the National Zeitung, but now the Allies have a "decisive advantage, since their reports are accompanied by facts, such as the taking of Tunis, Pantelleria and the smashing bombs in the Ruhr Valley and on southern Italy."

Allied Bombers Attack Japanese Barges at Lae

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Wednesday), June 30 (AP).—Allied planes bombed and strafed Salamaua and Lae, New Guinea, yesterday, the high command announced in the noon communique.

Attack planes were used against Lae. They dropped to low altitude to strafe enemy installations at Labu Lagoon, where the Japanese often attempt to hide their supply barges.

Over Dutch New Guinea, big Allied bombers on reconnaissance bombed and damaged the enemy's barracks area in a midday attack.

Bad weather hampered operations elsewhere.

Revised figures concerning Monday's raid by 18 Japanese planes on Darwin raised from two to three the number of Zeros definitely shot down by the interceptnig Spitfires.

Army to Make Wilson Grandson Officer Today

Woodrow Wilson Sayre, a grandson of the late President Wilson, will receive a commission today as a second lieutenant in the United States Army at the graduation exercises of the Adjutant General's School, Fort Washington, Md.

He is the son of Francis B. Sayre, High Commissioner of the Philippines at the time of the Japanese invasion, and now an Assistant Secretary of State. His mother, the late Mrs. Jessie Wilson Sayre, was a daughter of President Wilson.

Steinbeck Tells How Air Gunners Keep Weapons in Tiptop Shape for Raids

John Steinbeck, the distinguished novelist and playwright, now on an assignment in England as a war correspondent for The Washington Post, continues his description of the life of the crew of an American bomber.

By John Steinbeck

Copyright, 1943, New York Tribune Inc.

Bomber Station in England, June 29.—It is almost 11 o'clock and dusk is falling. The armor room is a lean-to against the repair hangar. There on the racks are the rows of .50-caliber machine guns, oiled and cleaned, lying side by side. When the mission is completed and the ships come back, the gunners dismount their guns and bring them in. There they clean them carefully and after that the armament men cover them with oil to keep them from rusting. The combination of cold of the altitude and heat from firing and of moisture makes the guns rust very quickly. Here they lie in oil until a new mission is alerted.

Corporal Harpold of Dallas, is the armament man. He has been in the Army for nine years and during that time he has sometimes been a sergeant and sometimes a private. Right now he is a corporal. The things that happen to Harpold can happen to any one. He was a civilian ground crew man for the Flying Tigers in China a little while ago. He knows his guns thoroughly. He has even been a gunnery instructor.

It would be possible for a goldbrick gunner to have his work done by the ground man except that they aren't gold-brick gunners for very long. If your life and the life of your ship depend on those long steel snouts, you are likely to want to see that they are all right yourself.

The men bring their only guns to the work benches. They strip them completely and then with clean cloths they go over every part, rubbing and rubbing with new cloths until the cloth shows no sign of oil. It takes a long time. There is no way of doing it quickly. Every part of breech and recoil action must be dry and smooth.

The gunners of the Mary Ruth come into the gun room, for now they have a very delicate operation to perform. They must wipe every bit of oil from their guns. Where they will be flying tomorrow at 30,000 feet the temperature will be at 40 below zero. If any oil is left on the moving parts of the machine guns it will freeze at that temperature, the gun will jam and then the "man with the red beard" will get in close enough to make his kill and you and your crew will find yourselves in a prison camp, if you are lucky.

Sergeant Brown, the tail gunner, has had his gun jam on the last two missions and he is worried. He has worked over them for hours. He has taken them out on the testing range to fire them and they have worked beautifully. Yet they jammed in the air. This is a mysterious thing. He says: "If they jam again tomorrow I'm going to put in for new guns."

There are magics in the air. You get as near as you can to causes with your sense and after that there are things that happen which you can't get near to and yet they happen. You must accept them because they affect you life and the probability of its continuing. These are things which cause what might stupidly be called superstitition.

Take Boogie Boogie, for instance. She is a good ship, but she never gets to a target. And every bit of mechanical skill available has been expended on her. They have even changed her engines.

The care of the guns is slow and tender, almost motherly. The parts are held up to the light and inspected and polished again. Grooves and slides are rubbed over and over. When the gun is reassembled the gunners work the slides by hand, over and over. The Mary Ruth has two flexible guns in the nose. The top turret man has two. The tail gunner has two. The waist gunners have one each, and the ball turret, in the belly, has two. The Mary Ruth bristles with guns and when they are all working they can throw a lot of fire.

Now the guns are ready. The gunners wrap the working parts very carefully in clean dry cloths to keep out any possible moisture. They place them carefully back on their racks. Brown holds up a bleeding finger. "For a week I had whole hands," he says, "and that's the only time they've been uncut since I enlisted. I've been wounded so much handling these guns I'm going to put in for the Purple Heart."

We go into the mess hall for a cup of coffee—the only good coffee obtainable in England. Sergeant Crain folds low over his aluminum mess cup, which holds a full pint.

"A few days ago I killed my first man," he says. He takes a big swallow of the scalding coffee. "I've been wondering about it. I'm not a killing kind of man. I don't get angry that way. I've been thinking about that man. I poured my guns into him and he died. I've kicked out all the things I've been told I ought to think about, like it's good to kill Germans and all the other things like 'thou shalt not kill.' And when those things are kicked out I find I don't think anything about it at all. It's just something that happened. I'm not glad or sorry. I don't have any feeling about it at all. Isn't that funny?" He looks up. His eyes are the washed-blue of Texas. "Don't you suppose I ought to have some kind of feeling about?" he asks.

Conferees Indorse Broader Training For the Disabled

Senate and House conferees yesterday agreed on legislation broadening the Federal-State program for vocational rehabilitation of the Nation's disabled.

Under it, the Federal Security Administrator would have authority to advance funds for administration of the program to any State unable to appropriate matching funds up to July 1, 1945, because of the adjournment of its legislature.

The measure, introduced by Senator La Follette (Progressive) of Wisconsin, also would extend provisions of the veterans' rehabilitation program to the Merchant Marine, Civil Air Patrol, Aircraft Warning Service, Civilian Defense and some other classes.

Boisson Resigns As Governor of French W. Africa

Algiers, June 29 (AP).—The French Committee of National Liberation today accepted the resignation of Pierre Boisson, who as Governor General of French West Africa, repulsed a British-backed de Gaullist attack on Dakar in 1940 but subsequently joined his forces with the Allies after the African campaign began.

The action was regarded as another concession to Gen. Charles de Gaulle, who had placed Boisson high on his list of men he charged with subservience to Vichy.

YOU MAY HAVE TO STAND
if you travel July 2-3-4-5-6

More than a third of our coaches—and half the Pullmans—are on the go day and night moving troops.

That equipment, therefore, is not available for civilian travel.

With what remains, it is all we can do to provide berths and seats for essential travel and the large number of Service Men who will be returning home over Fourth-of-July week-end on short leaves.

Consequently, if you plan to travel between July 2 and 6 the only space available may be standing room.

We know standing is not pleasant, and it is not the way we like to serve our patrons. But we feel sure everyone realizes that in these wartime days our first duty is to the military forces, and we can provide for civilians only to the extent of remaining equipment.

If you must travel, plan to make your trip before or after the dates indicated or, if you cannot, try to take a train leaving early in the day.

Invasion Due Soon, MacDonald Says

Sub Losses Average 1 a Day for 2 Weeks, He Also Discloses

By the Associated Press

Ottawa, June 29.—An Allied assault on Axis territory in the very near future was predicted today by Malcolm MacDonald, Britain's High Commissioner to Canada, who disclosed also that enemy U-boats had been knocked out at the rate of one a day for the last two weeks.

Preparations for the blow at Germany or German-held territory were well advanced, he told a press conference, and it was unlikely that "we will have to wait very long" before the effort to crush Hitler on land is launched. He suggested that comparatively small assaults might serve as a prelude to the opening of a full-fledged second front.

The Allies "obviously are approaching another great crisis of the war," he said.

Allied Claims Emphasized

The promising picture of anti-submarine activity served to emphasize recent Allied reports of anti-U-boat successes. Recent London reports said submarines had been sunk at a rate of better than one a day for the past two months and MacDonald declared "we have had a dead submarine served up for breakfast every day for the past fortnight."

Air protection, more cargo ships with escort vessels to protect them and U-boat location devices were responsible for the gratifying improvement in shipping losses, the high commissioner said. He added that in a large measure the improved condition could be considered permanent.

MacDonald prefaced his remarks concerning a land offensive against Europe by saying that "the Allied powers were determined not to launch a second front campaign until preparations were complete." Those preparations are now "well along," he added.

Holds German Morale Still Good

"Coupled with the improved shipping position was the effect of heavy air assaults on Germany, Italy and occupied Europe in paving the way for invasion," he declared. These raids carried out what he described as a deliberate policy of crippling war-making facilities rather than destroying enemy morale, but it was apparent, he said, that the raids had weakened the confidence of the German people in their leaders.

"But there is no evidence that the German people's morale has cracked or is reaching the cracking point," MacDonald warned.

5 Men Spend 6 Days Adrift In Pacific

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, June 29.—Six days of "hell on water" were described today by five members of a Navy armed guard crew who saw a Japanese submarine torpedo their Liberty ship and send her to the bottom in a huge explosion.

The attack occurred late in April in the South Pacific and the five drifted for six days on a storming sea and then spent 10 days on an uninhabited island where, with emergency rations gone, they lived on snails, eels, shell-fish and coconuts.

The five were Robert R. Turner, seaman first class, Alamo, Tenn.; Benjamin Candelaria, signalman, second class, Redlands, Calif.; Kenneth I. Bell, seaman, first class, Nebraska City, Nebr.; Arthur L. Alden seaman, first class, Kerrville, Tex., and Sam J. Surian, seaman first class, Biloxi, Miss.

It was 7:15 a. m., when Bell, on port watch, heard the bow watch cry to the bridge "torpedo wake approaching off the port bow!"

Blast Threw Him to Deck

Bell had time only to turn for a glance before the torpedo hit the heavily loaded vessel. The great explosion threw him to deck. It was pouring rain as it can only in the South Pacific. The men paced to their guns and stood by until the skipper ordered the ship abandoned.

Alden said the vessel still was making about 3 knots when the men went over the side. Every man got off safely, within 30 minutes after the torpedo struck. The shipwrecked sailors were about 15 miles from their vessel when it finally exploded and plunged into the sea. They said fire hung in the air for several minutes after the ship blew up.

The gun crew and the merchant crew split into three groups in two lifeboats and one raft. In one lifeboat 23 men, consisting of Lieut. (j.g.) B. E. Harkey of Oklahoma City, the armed guard officer, the five seamen interviewed here, and members of the merchant crew crowded together for six miserable days and night. They rigged a sail to take advantage of strong winds. When that failed, they took turns rowing.

Hayes, Symphony Manager, Joins Navy Supply Corps

J. P. Hayes, manager of the National Symphony Orchestra for the past two years, was sworn into the United States Navy Reserve yesterday afternoon as a lieutenant, junior grade, Supply Corps, by Commander O. J. Gullickson, Office of Naval Officer Procurement. He will be on leave from his position with the symphony for the duration.

HAYES

Walter Bruce Howe, chairman of the administrative committee of the Symphony Orchestra Association, announced yesterday.

During his absence, J. Erwyn Mutch, former musician and business man of New York City, will take his place.

Hayes will report Monday, July 5, to Babson Institute, Wellesley, Mass., for training following which he will be assigned to active duty.

McNally Confirmed As N. Y. Area Attorney

The Senate yesterday confirmed the appointment of James B. M. McNally as United States attorney for the Southern District of New York, succeeding Mathias F. Correa, resigned.

'Serious Errors' Found, Court Orders New Trial of Chicago Treason Cases

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 29.—The first case of treason ever tried in Illinois collapsed today in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, where three judges ruled unanimously that there had been serious errors in the proceedings and trial.

Three men were saved from death in the electric chair by the Appellate Court's opinion. Their wives were spared from 25 years' imprisonment and $10,000 fines.

The defendants, all middle-aged Chicagoans who came to this country from Germany after the last war, were Hans and Erna Haupt, Otto and Kate Wergin and Walter and Lucille Froehling.

They were convicted of treason by a District Court jury last November 14, accused of sheltering and assisting the Haupts' 22-year-old son, Herbert, who was one of the eight Nazi saboteurs smuggled into the United States aboard submarines a year ago. Young Haupt and five fellow conspirators were executed in Washington last August 8.

Defense Raises Issue

The conviction of his parents and their friends was reversed by the appellate court today and their cases remanded for new trials.

In appealing, the defendants raised 65 issues, but the court held that many of them could be disposed of as frivolous and without merit.

"There are a number, however, which raise serious questions concerning the validity of the proceedings and the trial," the appellate judges stated. "Most serious are the attack upon the indictment, the admission of statements procured from the defendants, the refusal of the court to allow a severance, and the court's charge to the jury."

After finding the indictment valid, the court turned its attention to 14 written statements "or confessions" which were introduced into evidence. "We think there is no escape from the conclusion that the statements admitted in the instant case were improper under these recent holdings of the Supreme Court," the judges said.

Rehearing Sought

"At no time were any of the defendants advised by counsel or otherwise as to their legal rights or what rights they were being deprivde of by the failure of the arresting officers (FBI agents) to immediately take them before a committing officer."

On the question of separate trials, the Appellate Court ruled that the District Court erred in not granting them and added:

"If we indulge in the rather violent assumption that the verdict of guilty as to all defendants was not produced by passion and prejudice, it must have been the result of the inability of the jury to segregate from the mass of evidence introduced that relevant to individual defendants and properly limit it thereto. Such was the inevitable result, under the circumstances of this case, of a joint trial."

United States Attorney J. Albert Woll, who directed the prosecution, was preparing a motion for a rehearing which will be presented to the Appellate Court within the next 10 days.

Herbert Pell Made American Member Of War Crime Body

The White House announced yesterday that Herbert Pell, one-time member of Congress from New York, and former American envoy to Portugal and Hungary, had been designated the American member of a United Nations commission which will sit in London to investigate war crimes.

Presidential Secretary Stephen Early issued this statement:

"It is hoped the commission, which will have its headquarters in London, will be able to take concrete steps looking to the punishment of agents of the Axis powers who have perpetrated atrocious crimes against innocent victims."

President Roosevelt has said on several occasions that enemy leaders would be duly tried and punished for crimes against civilians.

House Firm Against Hiking Farm Funds

By the Associated Press

Standing pat in the face of Senate objectoins, the House refused yesterday to boost funds for the Agriculture Department's Federal crop insurance payments or to permit use of a 400-million-dollar soil conservation allocation for "incentive" payments.

By a standing vote of 142 to 82, the House declined to accept the Senate figure of $7,818,748 for the crop insurance program in the 1944 Agriculture Department appropriations bill, and decided to insist on its own figure of $3,500,000. Retention of the incentive payment ban was by roll-call vote, 187 to 177.

The House turned thumbs down also on a Senate amendment which would have eliminated a House provision designed to liquidate the crop insurance program altogether next year.

A conference committee probably will tackle the job of ironing out incentive payment and crop insurance disagreements between the two houses before the end of the fiscal year at midnight tonight.

The House made one concession to the Senate yesterday. By roll-call vote of 197 to 174, it retreated from its stand limiting use of the 400-million-dollar conservation fund to soil building and water conservation practices.

The Senate language which the House adopted will allow the Agriculture Department to use the funds also for production payments to farmers.

The decision came despite a last-minute appeal by Representative Dirksen (Republican) of Illinois, who contended the Senate provision would allow the money to be used for subsidies.

Representatives Cooley (Democrat) of North Carolina, Case (Republican) of North Dakota, and Tarver (Democrat) of Georgia, argued that the House must make the money available for the production payments to "redeem the good faith of the Government" in promising farmers the funds in order to stimulate war production.

Pickle Packer Permitted To 'Pinch' Purchaser

By the Associated Press

Pickle purchasers will pay a pretty penny more for pickles in 1943 than for pickles packed previously.

The prospective pickup prices will reflect a 30 per cent increase in cucumber quotations, said the Office of Price Administration. In other words, pickle processors will have to pay cucumber producers about 25 cents a bushel more than last year and will be permitted to pass the cost increase on to the public.

access to information of great value to the Axis, Conroy said. This information he turned over to Lehmitz at secret meetings, the FBI chief said, and added to it his observations of ship movements in New York Harbor and shipping preparations on the busy Staten Island waterfront.

Lehmitz forwarded De Spretter's data along with his own by writing in invisible ink between the typewritten lines of apparently innocent letters sent to "friends" in neutral countries, and the material was forwarded from Switzerland, Spain and Portugal to Germany, Conroy said.

On one occasion, the FBI said, De Spretter was able to furnish Lehmitz with detailed specifications and photographic drawings of the planes made by an aircraft manufacturing company which were contained in a confidential book it had published and for which he received $100.

Other information, pooled with that obtained by Lehmitz, relayed to the Nazis the movement of war and merchant ships, destinations and cargoes of convoys and troopships and shipbuilding progress, Conroy said.

There was a marked difference in the appearance of the men. Lehmitz, who the FBI said was trained in the Gestapo espionage school, dressed shabbily, worked as a porter in a waterfront restaurant and frequented bars and restaurants popular with sailors, Army men and men of the Merchant Marine. Although born in Germany, he was a United States citizen.

De Spretter, when he appeared in court, was well and expensively dressed. He received his degree in engineering at Heidelberg after studying in other German schools. Born in Uruguay, De Spretter was the son of a German father and a Spanish mother. He came to the United States in 1923, after serving in the Germany army in the last war, but never became a citizen.

Russians Aim New Blows at Nazi-Held Orel

By the Associated Press

London (Wednesday), June 30.—Russian airmen, continuing their steady pounding of German rail centers and supply depots in the pivotal sector around Orel, attacked that important junction Monday night for the third time in a week, Moscow announced early today.

A special Soviet announcement, broadcast by the Moscow radio ahead of the regular midnight communique, said Red Army bombers caused at least 15 big fires and explosions in Orel and went on to blast enemy ammunition dumps at Karachev, 40 miles to the west.

Other Russian planes were said to have attacked the Caucasian port of Taman on the southern shore of the Sea of Azov for the second consecutive night.

Nazi Train Shelled

Soviet ground forces also joined in the offensive against enemy installations in the Orel sector, where the Germans are believed to have amassed some of their heaviest concentrations of troops and materiel.

The midnight communique, recorded here by the Soviet monitor, said Russian gunners shelled a train in the area of Sevsk, about 90 miles below Orel, wrecking several cars. A scouting party also penetrated German communication lines and killed a number of enemy troops, it was said.

While the communique mentioned no aerial activity, Moscow dispatches quoted battle-front sources as saying violent air battles had taken place over the approaches to Leningrad, with the Germans losing "a big number of planes" in the last 25 days.

Artillery Duels

The midnight war bulletin reported intermittent exchanges of artillery fire on the Volkhov front below Leningrad. German troops who approached front-line Russian positions were said to have been dispersed by Soviet gunners.

Other artillery exchanges were reported on the Central Front west of Moscow, where the Russians were said to have wiped out about a company of Germans and silenced several artillery and mortar batteries.

The noon communique reported an aerial battle over the Belgorod sector and said Soviet fliers shot down three of five German planes.

U.S. Radio in Africa Transmits News to Europe, Whether Favorable or Unfavorable to Allies

By Noland Norgaard
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, North Africa.—The United States is employing the most powerful radio transmitter in Africa to tell the people of Europe the plain and simple truth about the war in a calm, matter of fact manner.

Here is the way it's done:

1. Allied victories are described in the simplest terms, with a policy of understatement rather than the exaggeration and bragging of Axis spokesmen.

2. Announcers avoid any attempt to excite the listeners with bombastic utterances and superlatives are seldom employed. They speak plainly and broadcast almost in a monotone.

3. There is a deliberate policy of telling the unfavorable as well as the favorable news. Every development of the American coal strike which threatened to curtail war production was given the people of Europe the same as in the United States.

4. Axis leaders are never villified by announcers, but in the words of one of the station's officials, "we let them villify themselves by recalling in connection with current news their claims of the past." As an example, a few nights ago the announcer reminded his listeners of Hitler's declaration two years ago that the war in the west was finished, and then told of the Anglo-American bombings which are curbing vital German war production.

5. Extreme care is used to avoid any extravagant claims of damage by air attacks on enemy-controlled areas or of other occurrences within enemy territory. This eliminates the danger of having listeners lose faith in the station's credibility because of scenes before them.

6. Editorializing on the news is minimized. Notable exceptions to this rule were broadcasts of warnings to the Italians to stay away from war factories, communications centers and other targets of Allied air attacks, and warnings to people of occupied countries to avoid premature demonstrations or actions which might cause them to face Nazi punishment.

Musical accompaniments and other trappings of the commercial radio art are dispensed with.

"We work on the theory that our audience listens with an eye on the door through which a policeman might come at any moment," an OWI official explained. "Therefore we strip the program to essentials which are easily understood and quickly grasped."

The station's signature tune is "Over There." That favorite of the first World War was chosen, an official said, "because it is already widely known in Europe and because everyone who hears it a few times finds himself humming or whistling it. Hitler's cops surely cannot arrest everyone who forgets himself for a moment and whistles a snatch of 'Over There.'"

Leghorn was attacked on May 28 by a fleet of fortresses only slightly smaller than yesterday's huge force.

(A German D. N. B. broadcast quoted the Giornale d'Italia as reporting that the main weight of the newest fortress raid was concentrated on the center of Leghorn, an area described as "relatively unharmed" in the previous big attack.

(The Axis broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press in London, said the Monday attack was "even more violent" than the May 23 raid from which, the Italian newspaper reported, the city was gradually recovering.

("Especially roads leading to the railway station and near the station were hit," the newspaper was quoted as saying.)

While Leghorn was shuddering for the second time under great weights of Allied bombs, Allied medium bombers and fighters resumed the almost unending punishment of Sardinian airfields. In the whole of the day's operations 12 enemy planes were destroyed against 2 Allied craft lost.

Sicily, too, was again under attack by fighter-bombers based on Malta. Factories and a railroad at Licata on the island were hit, as was the Comiso Airdrome.

ABOARD A JAPAN-BOUND SUBMARINE
with the Post's Pete Martin

SPECIAL! IN THIS WEEK'S SATURDAY EVENING POST

THE NICE VOICE on Pete Martin's phone said, "out of town on business." It didn't say he was several days off the mainland in a Tokyo-bound U. S. sub, getting the thrill-charged story of life on a deadly steel fish.

No in-shore cruise—this first lap into the U-boat infested waters of the Atlantic. But a real action picture of life aboard a sub when she's "playing for keeps".

You'll want to know this crew of seventy—who may be dealing the kiss of death to Jap shipping as you read.

You'll learn what it's like to be mistaken for a U-boat by your own mine-sweeper. And how it feels to be disabled—and easy prey of the U-boat pack.

And you'll have a healthy respect for these men who are less than one percent of navy personnel—yet have accounted for more than forty percent of all Jap ships destroyed.

It's a great story of a great experience. A story that took eleven weeks to get and write.

Ickes to Appeal To Miners Tonight

139,000 Still Idle Despite Back-to-Work Trend; 18th Blast Furnace Closed Down

Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, Government operator of the coal mines, is expected to make a radio address at 7:05 o'clock tonight urging the miners to resume the production of coal, as an estimated 139,000 miners continued their "unauthorized" coal strike.

Another blast furnace—the eighteenth since the start of the strike at midnight, June 20—was shut down yesterday because of dwindling coal supplies.

Over the Nation, the number at work was 16,000 higher than on Monday, although a few new walkouts developed in some areas.

Pennsylvania anthracite production at 54 per cent of normal, represented the Government's chief worry. The anthracite tri-district scale committee representing 83,000 miners urged a resumption of work "in the best interests of all concerned."

Thomas to Assist Newton

Meanwhile, Ickes took another step toward creation of an organization to supervise management of coal mines for the Government pending their restoration to the private owners with the appointment of Thomas J. Thomas, associate solid fuels administrator, to act as chief assistant to Carl E. Newton, the new Federal mine director appointed Monday by Ickes.

Thomas started in the coal business as a miner and is now president of the Valier Coal Co., Valier, Ill.

Full-scale operations were resumed today in both Kentucky and Ohio. The last 9000 of Kentucky's 60,000 miners returned to the pits as did the last 2300 of Ohio's 15,000. Six Ohio mines had been out of production yesterday.

Meanwhile, the Republican Steel Corp. closed its No. 1 blast furnace at Gadsden, Ala., after having banked two others in Birmingham last week. Fourteen furnaces operated by the United States Steel Corp. In the Pittsburgh area and one operated by the Shenango Furnace Co. at Sharpsville, Pa., also closed last week.

As Republic announced the new closing, another 2000 workers in Alabama captive mines joined the stoppage, leaving only 3000 of the State's 24,000 United Mine Workers' members on the job.

In Pennsylvania another 10,000 reported for work, leaving about 100,000 idle out of the State's 200,000. The number still out in the rich soft-coal fields of western Pennsylvania was 51,000, compared with 60,000 working.

Another 3500 stopped work in eastern Pennsylvania's anthracite fields, source of the Nation's entire supply of hard coal. The new idleness, however, was offset by back-to-work moves in other anthracite sections. About 50,000 of the 83,000 anthracite workers thus remained out of the pits. Anthracite U. M. W. leaders renewed efforts to end the stoppage, but with little immediate success.

The outlook for steel production in Pittsburgh was improved as 2000 bituminous workers ended their walkout in southwestern Pennsylvania's captive mine region, but about 5000 of the area's 21,500 remained out.

Steel Output Gains

Output from United States Steel-owned mines in four States was estimated at 63,000 tons today, cmopared with 43,000 tons yesterday. The normal total is slightly less than 100,000.

Compared with the 139,000 still out today, 226,400 were idle on June 24, two days after the United Mine Workers' policy committee ordered work resumed under a third truce in the coal wage dispute.

Typifying defiance of the order by some U. M. W. members, workers in the Midland local of the Pittsburgh Coal Co., voting today to remain idle, declared they intended to stay out "until about October 31, when we gather John L. Lewis expects to have a contract signed." The third truce—called in a controversy over the miners' demands for a $2 a day wage increase—expires October 31.

'Government Girls' To Set Up Formal Group Tonight

Government girl workers and the Guard of Honor, representing all Federal agencies, who in an unparalleled campaign obtained $159,000 to purchase and equip two warplanes for the Army and Navy during April, tonight will effect a permanent organization.

At the meeting scheduled for 8:30 o'clock in Perkins Hall of the Universalist National Memorial Church, 1810 Sixteenth Street Northwest, officials will be chosen, a program outlined and further suggestions as to how the Government employes may again aid in the war effort will be heard, Lenora Haag, temporary chairman, announced.

Miss Haag of the White House secretarial staff was named temporary chairman of the Government Girls at the first meeting of the group following the presentation ceremony May 9.

Resolution Authorizes Condemnation of Elk Hills Land of Standard Oil

A resolution authorizing the Navy to condemn privately owned properties in the Elk Hills (Calif.) petroleum reserve was submitted yesterday to the House Public Lands Committee by Representative O'Connor (Democrat), of Montana.

Requesting early consideration of the resolution, O'Connor told the committee while it was investigating the abrogated contract between the Navy and Standard Oil Co. of California for joint development of the reserve that Standard is continuing to withdraw Government oil.

"The purpose of this whole transaction," declared O'Connor, "is to conserve oil. If this is so, isn't it best for the Government to step in and take over by condemnation."

The Undersecretary of Interior, Abe Fortas, told the committee that Interior Secretary Ickes concurs with him in the belief there was no "improper conduct or unworthy motives" in the contract negotiations.

Fortas told the committee he does not believe the Government should "enter into an agreement which assures to any one company the exclusive right to purchase, process and dispose of the products of this field."

Referring to a clause by which the Navy could take payment in refined products of the Standard Oil Co. at Standard's current market prices, Fortas said such an arrangement would prevent submission of competitive bids by other companies which in the past have "substantially" undersold Standard in their prices on products the Navy needed.

Meanwhile a jurisdictional dispute between the House Naval Committee and the Lands Committee concerning rights to investigate the Elk Hills transaction appeared near settlement with the announcement that arrangements would be made for joint hearings and an exchange of information on the subject.

$10 Fine Suspended For Driver of Horse

Judge Armond Scott yesterday tempered justice with charity by suspending a $10 fine for James D. Davis, 60, who was charged with driving a horse and wagon through a stop sign at Thirteenth Street at V Northwest.

Davis told the judge he could pay the $10 later, but he had only enough money to buy the horse's feed. The judge told Davis to buy hay and forget the fine, but watch the stop signs in future.

FSA Denies Buying Farm Land As Edward A. O'Neal Charged

By the Associated Press

C. B. Baldwin, Farm Security Administrator, yesterday categorically denied an assertion by Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation that the FSA was buying land in defiance of the "express mandate of Congress."

"We are not now using funds made available for rehabilitation purposes to buy lands or to make loans for the purchase of lands," Baldwin told the Cooley subcommittee of the House Agriculture Committee in reply to a statement made June 17 by O'Neal.

Baldwin said O'Neal's criticism of the FSA was "honeycombed with misstatements and twisted testimony," adding:

"The national leadership of the American Farm Bureau Federation has been busily and vigorously engaged in trying to prove to the Congress for the past two years that the FSA believes in land socialization and is engaged in a whole series of nefarious activities respecting land tenure arrangements for low income families.

"It has often been said that by a careful selection of the proper chapter and verse one can prove anything from the Bible.

"It appears that the American Farm Bureau has followed this plan in leveling its attacks at the Farm Security Administration. It has carefully and laboriously lifted sentences out of their context in order to prove points which had no relation to Farm Security Administration policy."

Baldwin declared that "with the exception of the few cooperative farms . . . every single land tenure activity of the Farm Security Administration has always been directed toward aiding individual farm families to become owner-operatives of their farms or to have equitable, fair and secure leases on family-type farms."

"There are certain areas of the country, however," he said, "where it is impossible for low-income families to either purchase or lease good land without in some way obtaining use of large tracts. We have made loans to cooperative associations of farmers with which to lease large tracts of land. It is not the desire of the Farm Security Administration to enter into the financing of cooperatives that has lead to these activities.

"It is, on the other hand, virtually mandatory that techniques of this general nature be used if we are to aid low-income farmers to become family-type operators in certain areas because of the land ownership patterns which exist in those areas."

George Ade Ill; Humorist Is 77

Brook, Ind., June 29 (AP).—The death of his life-long friend, Davis E. Ross, president of Purdue University's board of trustees, disclosed today that George Ade, 77-year-old Indiana humorist and writer, is ill.

An attendant in the Ade home here, who said Ade was too ill to comment on the death of Ross, explained that the humorist had been ordered to bed Saturday "in a state of near exhaustion."

Jap Aleutian And Solomon Targets Hit

lowing day the weather closed in, but the Mitchells and Venturas bombed not only Kiska, but scored hits on some huts on Little Kiska Island, which lies about a mile off the larger island. Fog prevented complete observation of results.

No U. S. Planes Lost

No American planes were lost on any of the Solomons or Aleutian raids, indicating that little opposition was encountered. Repeated pounding of the Munda and Kiska runways had prevented them from being put into action as defensive fields for fighter planes, and evidently the recent heavy attacks have greatly weakened the antiaircraft defenses of the middle Solomons bases and the lone remaining enemy base in the Aleutians.

Reports from the latter area report that a new type of aerial attack is being used against Nipponese ack-ack batteries by our airmen. Speedy and highly maneuverable Lightning fighters, declared an Associated Press dispatch from the Alaska Defense Command headquarters, are used doubling in brass as bombers.

"The converted fighters, able to make steeper dives than regular dive-bombers, go down through the fog at high speed onto the heads of the Japanese, drop bombs and get away before the Jap gunners have a chance to do any effective work," it was stated.

The new technique is said to have wreaked havoc on antiaircraft batteries in the last few raids.

R. A. F. Bombers Again Heap Devastation on Cologne and Hamburg of the damage, the tone of German complaints about a "'terror" attack indicated that it was equally as destructive as other R. A. F. saturation raids.

Cologne, third largest city in Germany, harbors a large assortment of war plants, including chemical and dye works. Their importance is indicated by the fact that the city now has been raided 117 times.

Germany reported, without Allied confirmation, that the Cologne Cathedral, which lifts its spires out of a cluster of railway, industrial and business targets, was hit by high explosives.

"Heavy bombs smashed through the roof of the cathedral and exploded inside the church, causing heavy devastation," said a Berlin broadcast heard in London.

German propaganda has concentrated on such stories of destruction of churches and other cultural objects and losses to the "civil population."

The regular communique of the German high command spoke of "heavy damage" to the cathedral and reported that propety was destroyed in both Cologne and Hamburg.

The German news agency, Transocean, went beyond the claims of the Berlin communique, and declared "the cathedral at Cologne was destroyed by a bomb hit in the central nave which wrecked the whole building."

Other Berlin broadcasts said the City Hall the Community Building and Guerzenich Hall, which dates back to the Hanseatic period, were "completely destroyed."

The British Air Ministry said the Germans began an intensive effort to reconstruct the damaged industries of Cologne immediately after the 1000-bomber attack last year.

Reconnaissance, it said, showed that the Germans "had not the slightest intention, even up to a few months ago, of moving industries from districts in and around the Ruhr." Even some of the smallest factories, workshops and administrative offices were said to have been rebuilt.

Stockholm dispatches said the Cologne raid blasted German hopes that new defensive measures in western Germany might force the Allies to slow up their aerial offensive.

The Berlin correspondent of the Stockholm Tidningen had reported that after a 48-hour let-up in heavy attacks on the Reich, some sources had expressed hope that "the next few days and weeks will be the same and there will be a change in the bomb war."

The Germans had based their hopes for a relaxation of the bombings on stiffer antiaircraft defenses and stronger fighter forces, the correspondent said.

British fighters also were active during the night, damaging a small supply ship and two escort craft in an attack on enemy shipping in the Channel, and intruder patrols shot up railway targets in France.

Two British fighters sweeping over northern France on offensive patrol today were reported authoritatively to have bagged six German planes—two Junkers 88s and four Henschel 126s.

St. Nazaire Locks Hit by U. S. Bombers

London, June 29 (AP).—Flying Fortresses rendered a "perfect example of high altitude precision bombing" yesterday from 5 miles above St. Nazaire, the German submarine base on the French coast, U. S. headquarters said tonight.

A statement from the European theater of operations of the U. S. Army said of photographs taken during the bombardment by the large force of heavy bombers:

"Bombs from almost every plane were bunched across the aiming point."

"Several hundred tons" of bombs were showered on installations at St. Nazaire and many direct hits were observed on two old locks and a new one the Germans had almost completed.

The locks are the only entrance to the submarine basin capable of sheltering 25 to 30 U-boats. The Germans had built a bomb-proof concrete roof over the new lock which the Fortresses struck.

Maj. Theodore Milton, Washington, D. C., a group operations officer who piloted "Ain't It Gruesome," said: "Fighters, mostly the yellow nose boys, hit us. However, I'm sure we got what we were going after."

Signs of Peace
and you'll want to be there!

What if Peace brings new cars promptly or not? You'll be yearning to get away from headlines—rations—hours of volunteer war work...to get around again with your weary, happy soldier boy—home at last. And with driving restricted now, your car should have plenty of miles left, just so you're not tossing them away these days, by half-ruining your engine with acid.

That's no "new scare." You never yet stopped any auto engine without acid products of combustion trapped inside. But formerly, the frequent fast driving that fully heated the engine kept expelling acid. So the hazard was mild compared to what it is today, when acid works while your rationed engine rests.

One great recognized precaution against this is to OIL-PLATE your engine by changing to Conoco Nth motor oil. Its special added synthetic acts "magnet-like"—to attach OIL-PLATING direct to precious inner parts. Much like body parts plated against atmospheric corrosion, the cylinders, rings, bearings and other parts now hard to replace are OIL-PLATED against internal acid corrosion. The close-surfaced OIL-PLATING that combats acid while the car stands, will help your essential transportation today. And may a happier tomorrow see you right off quick on your well-earned Victory tour! Change to Conoco Nth oil now. Continental Oil Company

Aircraft Carriers To Shield Convoys Surprise Germans

Stockholm, June 29 (AP).—Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering's Essener National Zeitung said in copies received here today that the Allied use of aircraft carriers to protect convoys "came as a surprise to the Germans" who have been forced to alter their submarine tactics.

The newspaper said the German admiralty was attempting to devise new methods of attack and this explained the reduction in U-boat activity.

"In a long war, the superiority of big powers will alternate," the paper said. "German U-boat pack tactics were a surprise to the Allies. Then the use of airplane carriers came as a surprise for the Germans."

The paper significantly gave no figures on June sinkings, but said that, prior to June, submarines had sunk 31 million Allied tons (a figure nowhere else confirmed).

(United States Navy Secretary Knox said some time ago that "dozens" of new auxiliary aircraft carriers were in action and that many dozens more would be in operation by the end of the year.

Pew Will Back Justice Roberts for Presidency

MOST IMPORTANT subterranean leak to come from Republican cloakrooms of late is the declaration of Philadelphia's powerful G. O. P. Boss Joe Pew to groom Justice Owen J. Roberts of the United States Supreme Court for the Presidency.

Pew is reported by close friends to have finally decided to throw his millions behind his fellow Philadelphian Roberts as the ideal choice for the Republican Party and the only man who could defeat Roosevelt, should he run for a fourth term.

Pew, who controls the Sun Oil and Sun Ship millions, has not been renowned for his success as a political picker in the past. Nevertheless, his political influence in Pennsylvania—a highly important key State—is now greater than that of any other man, and his power inside G. O. P. smoke-filled councils is not to be sneezed at.

Pew was not too enthusiastic a Willkie man at the last G. O. P. convention in Philadelphia, and has not been since. However, his grooming of Justice Roberts, according to friends, is not aimed entirely at blocking Willkie.

He figures that the G. O. P. Convention is likely to reach a deadlock between Willkie and Dewey, and that a safe, sound middle-of-the-road candidate will then be needed to step in.

In the opinion of Joe Pew, Justice Roberts fills that role. He has supported the President's foreign policies, has cooperated with the White House in probing the Pearl Harbor scandal, and was not as much of a bitter-ender as other Republican Supreme Court justices in opposing New Deal philosophies. Roberts is also a forceful speaker, tall, handsome, and should be a good campaigner.

From a physical viewpoint his only handicap is his age.

World Peace Promoter

JUSTICE Roberts has always suffered from a slight touch of "presidentitis" and was talked about as Republican candidate as far back as 1936. Recently he has been called to the White House for conferences about the idea of heading up a nonpartisan commission which would begin now to study postwar peace.

The President's idea is to select a Republican to head this peace-planning group so that he could not be accused of playing politics; also so there would be Republican support for the peace treaty. The President considered Roberts the ideal man for this job, wanted him to help in heading off what befell Woodrow Wilson.

White House intimates expected this plan to go through some time ago. It may be, however, that Joe Pew's ambitions for Justice Roberts have sidetracked it. Obviously the justice could not afford to get himself into a position where he was serving the President and then running against him.

Noncontroversial Henderson

LEON HENDERSON, too tough former OPA administrator who some people wish was back on the job, will go on the radio soon. Before his contract was signed, his program was offered to Columbia Broadcasting Co., which, however, threw up its hands, flatly refused to sell Henderson any time on the air, even at the juicy price of around $3000 per 15 minutes.

"Too controversial," was Columbia's horrified reply.

Henderson has now signed a contract with a more liberal radio network, but later he bumped into William S. Paley, head of Columbia Broadcasting. Paley once had studied under Henderson when the former OPA administrator was a professor at the University of Pennsylvania. So Paley undertook to give his former teacher some advice.

"Leon," advised purist Paley, the thing for you to do is be absolutely noncontroversial. Just read the news as it comes over the ticker. Don't comment on it. Don't inject your own personality. Just be a straight news commentator. You must avoid controversy."

"Thanks, pal," replied the man who has spent most of his life telling the public what he thinks in no uncertain terms. "I've signed up with another network which isn't scared of me. And, thank God, we still have newspapers in this country. They aren't afraid of controversy."

Good Neighbor

MANY a State Department official wishes we could fix up Argentina as neatly as Comrade Stalin thinks we can.

When Willkie was in Moscow, Stalin raised a question about Argentina, describing it as the Axis source of information about ship movements. He couldn't understand why such a condition should be allowed to exist.

"If you have so much power," Stalin told Willkie, "why don't you clean up the Argentine government, or take over the country—do something to turn the Axis out of there?"

Willkie found it somewhat difficult to explain that the good neighbor policy would prevent such interference, in time of war as in time of peace.

NOTE: State Department experts expect that, despite the new Argentine government's reactionary attitude on domestic questions, it will be driven to break relations with the Axis, in order to get lend-lease supplies from the United States. This is what Latin generals want most.

Merry-Go-Round

Secretary of State Hull thinks there is too much talk and too many agencies dealing with postwar planning. He has one of his own . . . Hull still smarts under Walter Lippmann's criticism of the State Department's pro-Vichy policy in North Africa . . . Senator "Happy" Chandler of Kentucky says it's as futile to try to persuade him that Japanese-Americans can be loyal to the United States as to persuade him that "General Bob Lee and all our boys shouldn't have cleaned up on the No'therers."

Rita Johnson Gets Divorce From Kahn

Reno, Nev., June 29 (AP).—Rita Johnson, movie actress, was granted an uncontested divorce today from L. Stanley Kahn, former New Yorker now in the armed services.

The actress charged Kahn with extreme cruelty. Proceedings were behind locked doors and transcript of the case was ordered sealed. The two were married in New York City, November 25, 1940. They have no children.

Miss Johnson's latest starring role was in the film, "My Friend Flicka."

V-Mail Voting for Services Proposed in Bill

By the Associated Press

V-mail voting for members of the Armed Forces on foreign duty was propsed in legislation ready for introduction yesterday by Seantors Lucas (Demorcat) of Illinois and Green (Democrat) of Rhode Island.

To facilitate voting on State and Federal officials by soldiers, sailors and Marines, the two Senators would have Congress direct the Secretaries of War and Navy to provide the fighting forces overseas with absentee ballots that could be sped back as V-mail.

The proposed ballots would be of the "write in" form, with the voter being instructed to write in the number of his choice for President, Vice President, Senator and Representatives. If he wished to vote a "straight ticket" he could write in his choice of party.

The War and Navy Departments would be required under the measure to submit complete lists of candidates to commanding officers, who would be charged with the responsibility of seeing that every man in their units had an opportunity to vote.

Voting by members of the armed forces within the United States would be carried out on regular absentee ballots obtained from secretaries of state, with commanding officers directed to distribute postcards to troops on which they could request the ballots.

Green told reporters that experiences in the last election indicated that the laws now governing soldier voting could be improved greatly.

"It is important not only to legislate to give the men and women in the armed service the vote, but to make sure that such legislation is enforced regardless of where they are," Green said.

While aimed primarily at making it easy for members of the armed forces to vote, the Lucas-Green measure also would direct military commanders to make ballots and election information available to American civilians outside the continental United States.

Fat Collection For May Shows Increase Here

Washington housewives turned in 55,980 pounds of fats during May, representing 55.7 per cent of the District quota of 100,500 pounds per month, it was announced by the District Salvage Committee.

Collection results showed an increase of 12,945 pounds over April. James Colliflower, committee chairman, praising the effort of the housewives said:

"It must be realized that there has been a considerable shortage of meats throughout the District of Columbia for the past several months. It is very evident that the increase is a definite indication that larger numbers of housewives are participating in the program."

First Apples Picked

Hagerstown, Md., June 29 (AP).—The year's first Washington County apples, transparents, were picked today and growers predicted they would bring a record price.

Soviet Farms Are Geared to War Machine

"workdays" each had accumulated on the records.

What each member received in this final distribution of the harvest could be traded for manufactured goods at a small store on the farm property, or it could be sold.

I learned later that this farm was somewhat above the average in physical equipment. But it was run much like 250,000 other collective farms in the Soviet Union.

And I began to realize how the collective farms constituted the very backbone of Russia's tough resistance.

One night in Moscow I had a chance to check the kind of thinking and emotion that goes into the Soviet press. The American newspapermen there assembled a group of Soviet writers and turned us loose in a big room with food and drink and interpreters, but no officials, and let me ask the questions I wanted, with no holds barred.

Among those present were Simonov, a dour-faced young Russian who is author of the play, "Russian People," and the most popular newsman in the Soviet today.

Two things deserve to be reported. The first was what I can only call a quality of intransigence. These fellows were uncompromising. Train a man from boyhood in a system of obsolutism, and he will think in blacks and whites.

For example, I asked Simonov, just returned from Stalingrad, whether or not the German prisoners taken on that front made the same poor and shabby impression I had got from Germans I had interviewed a few days before on the Rzhev front.

My question was translated into Russian. But there was no answer. Someone else picked up the ball and carried it.

Repeated Question

After living for a few weeks with interpreters, you learn to be surprised at nothing. So I repeated the question. Again, there was no answer.

This time I waited until the conversation had come full cycle on itself and reached a pause. I asked the question a third time. General Ignatiev, a courtly and cosmopolitan gentleman and the only Russian present, by the way, who spoke a little English, finally answered me:

"Mr. Willkie, it is only natural that you should not understand. When this war began, we all sought out German prisoners. We cross-examined them. We wanted to find out why they had come to invade our land.

"We found out many interesting things about the Germans, and about what the Nazis had done to them.

"But now it is different. Since the offensive last winter, when we pushed the Germans back and recaptured many towns and villages they had taken, we feel differently.

"We have seen with our own eyes what the Germans did to our people and our homes. Today, no decent Soviet newspaperman would talk to a German, even in a prison camp."

Or take another example. I had been suggesting for a few days, as adroitly as I could, that it would be a good move for the Soviets to send Dmitri Shostakovich, their great composer, to the United States on a visit.

The night before, had sat in the packed Tchaikovsky hall Moscow's great concert building, and listened to his Seventh symphony.

Understanding

"We have got to understand each other," I said. "We have got to learn to know each other. We are allies in this war, and the American people will not let you down until Hitler has been defeated.

"But I would like to see us work together in the peace as well as after it." This will require great patience and great tolerance and great understanding on both sides.

"Why can't Shostakovich be sent to the United States where he already has a host of admirers and where he could help immeasurably in this job of understanding that we both face?"

It was Simonov who answered me this time.

It was Simonov who answered me this time.

"Mr. Willkie, understanding works both ways. We have always tried to learn about America. We have borrowed a lot from you, and sent our best men to study in America.

"We know something about your country, not as much as we would like to but enough to understand why you extend this invitation to Shostakovich.

Life and Death

"You should send some of your good men to study us. Then you would understand why, perhaps, we do not respond warmly to the invitation.

"You see, we are engaged in a life-and-death struggle. Not only our own lives, but the idea which has shaped our lives for a generation hangs in the balance at Stalingrad tonight.

"To suggest to us that we should send a musician to the United States, which is also involved in this war and where human lives also hang in the balance, to persuade you with music of something that is as plain as the nose on your face, is in a funny way insulting to us. Please don't misunderstand me."

I don't think I misunderstood him.

The second quality of the evening which deserves reporting was one of calm, quiet confident pride and patriotism.

It is hard for us Americans, who have read more horror stories about Russia than anything else for many years, to realize that a generation is running the Soviet Union today which knows its own strength.

I was to be immensely impressed with this later, in central Asia and in Siberia. It is a quality which I have often know in America, especially in the West.

Conferees Sound Death Knell Of Price Rollback System

In the light of CCC bill conference action, the Senate unit's OPA subsidy clearance was virtually meaningless. But the OPA fund victory was a real one, granting Prentiss Brown's slashed and battered agency the full $177,335,000 asked by the Budget Bureau. The house had cut OPA funds to 130 million dollars, prohibited payment of salaries for subsidy operations, and denied funds for enforcement of grade labeling orders. These last restrictions were wiped out by the Senate group.

Senator Lodge (Republican) of Massachusetts, one of the Appropriations committeemen, said the committee felt that despite criticism of OPA, it was the Administration's last weapon for battling inflation.

"Until there is something to take its place, it ought to have funds with which to operate," said Lodge.

But the victory was a hollow one. The Administration's chief price control stake was tied up in the CCC bill battle for a subsidized rollback and holdback of consumer food prices. There the Administration received a flat and apparently final congressional "no."

In the CCC bill conference the Administration made its last stand for limited consumer subsidies based on the Taft amendment permitting the rollback of prices on meat, butter and coffee to continue under a 500 million dollar ceiling.

When the conferees adjourned at 9 o'clock last night the rollback was dead and the rigid House and Senate consumer subsidy bans had been welded into a prohibition leaving the Administration no loophole to further cut prices.

While the CCC was granted an additional 750 million dollar loan authority—250 million dollars more than voted by the House—new restrictions were thrown around CCC buying and selling operations.

The corporation could continue subsidy operations on existing programs, such as cheese, sugar and vegetable fats and oils, but is limited to a 150 million dollar "loss" on these programs. The conference specified that farm commodities must not only be bought above price act and support price maximums but must be sold by the corporation at prices above these levels. CCC purchases could be made only from the farmer or in the open market place and only to increase production. Approval of the war food administrator would be required for all such operations.

Roosevelt at Press Conference Blames Newspapermen for Bickering in Washington

Asked about the Wallace-Jones scrap, he said he had just read the headlines five minutes before, but had not had a chance to read the detailed story.

A reporter reminded the President that one of the jobs assigned to War Mobilization Director Byrnes was to eliminate interdepartmental friction. He reminded him also of a memorandum which the White House had sent out last August to heads of all departments, asking them to cease bickering and to bring all disputes to the President.

Mr. Roosevelt said he still thought that suggestion of last August was a good one.

"Mr. President," a reporter asked, "can you comment on reports that while everything is going well on the foreign fronts, everything is not going well on the Administration front?"

"Get your illustrations from around the country," the President suggested, and he asked if his questioner didn't think that the was was running pretty well, that the Nation was getting the stuff out.

"I was refering to things here in Washington," the reporter, Merwin H. Browne of the Buffalo Evening News said.

The President wanted to know who was encouraging that, and somebody in the rear replied, "Everybody!" "Yes," the President agreed, "everybody in the room except perhaps a few.

A press association reporter told the President that when he arrived at his desk at 9 a. m. yesterday he found a copy of Vice President Wallace's attack on Secretary Jones. He said he hadn't asked for the statement; that it was a complete surprise to him.

The President said he didn't have that particular case in mind, and he added that the Wallace-Jones fight was a surprise to him, too.

"If I understand you to mean that internecine bickering was started by newspapermen," the President was asked, "could you give us a few illustrations?"

The President said that he could give flocks of them. Read almost any columnist, he said. Go back to the files.

"Would you include radio in that?"

To a certain extent, the President said, but added that the percentage would not be as high as in the case of columnists.

"Do you differentiate between reporters and columnists?"

Reporters, the President said, stick closer to the news and are not commentators except in some cases. Then, he said, it is usually on instructions from the publisher. He said he knew of a good many cases right in the room where reporters had to write in accordance with orders, or else lose their jobs.

The President said it was a tough job for the reporter who had to write colored news. Sometimes, he said, it was intolerable, but there was the matter of a livelihood.

Asked specifically whether the press was to blame for arguments going on between Government agencies and officials, the President said he wouldn't fix the blame. He said say, however, that he felt that the war effort had been injured by a great many people. Mothers and fathers, he said, have been very much upset by what they read is happening in Washington.

One example, the President said, was an effort by several newspaper owners to spread the word about the morals of the WAACS. That, he said, was a deliberate newspaper job, a shameful thing. It made a great many hearts burn, he said, and many families were hurt. The fault was not necessarily the reporter's, he said; the orders came from the top, and everybody knew it. Even so, he said, that didn't make the thing any less shameful.

The story the President apparently had in mind appeared in a half dozen newspapers, possibly fewer. There are something like 1974 daily newspapers in the United States.

Fighting now is winning the war...
Thinking now can win the peace

Today millions of service men are fighting for "a better world to live in." Other millions of individuals are performing miracles of production through the united efforts of management and wage earners—all of one mind—for "an unconditional surrender."

Tomorrow these millions will be permanently employed in peacetime pursuits provided they—all of one mind—dictate sound peace terms calling for sustained prosperity.

If the world is to prosper, there must be the same cohesion among the United Nations during the transition period and thereafter as now exists during the world-wide conflict. Internal stability here and in other nations can be gained and maintained only by sustained industrial production and by economic interdependence.

The people of this country, in common with the people of other lands, will prosper materially and spiritually when this war is ended but only if insistence, world-wide in scope, is now voiced for A JUST AND DURABLE PEACE.

Sour Stomach Jerky Nerves
Loss of Appetite Underweight
Digestive Complaints Weakness
Poor Complexion

Improper diet, overwork, undue worries, colds, the flu or other illness often impairs the stomach's digestive functions and reduces the red-blood strength.

A person who is operating on only a 70 to 75% healthy blood volume or a stomach digestive capacity of only 50 to 60% normal is severely handicapped.

At such times Nature needs extra help to restore its proper functions and balance. Undigested food places a tax on the system...insufficient blood strength is a detriment to good health.

If you are subject to poor digestion or suspect deficient red-blood as the cause of your trouble, yet have no organic complication or focal infection, SSS Tonic may be just what you need!

SSS Tonic is especially designed to build-up blood strength when deficient ...and to promote those stomach juices which digest the food so your body can make proper use of it in rebuilding worn-out tissue.

8-Million Subsidy For Alcohol Setup

Rising Corn, Wheat Prices Require Plan OPA Announces

An eight-million-dollar-a-year Defense Supplies Corp. subsidy of ethyl alcohol was announced yesterday as a means of nipping in the bud a price spiral which could have pierced existing price ceilings on hundreds of military and civilian items.

Rising prices of corn and wheat used in the manufacture of the industrial alcohol required the subsidy, the Office of Price Administration said. The War Production Board will allocate all ethyl alcohol produced in the country to the Defense Supplies Corp., under the plan, and DSC will resell it to industrial consumers at a fixed price of 48 cents a gallon, the present ceiling price.

Allowing for costs and a profit of about 4 cents a gallon, DSC expects to pay about 60 cents a gallon for the alcohol, OPA announced.

The potential spiral existed because of the fact that alcohol is a major raw material for a large variety of items. It is used extensively in the manufacture of such articles as lacquers, antiseptics, vinegar, pharmaceuticals like tincture of iodine and green soaps, and military items, including explosives, smokeless powder, tetra-ethyl lead and synthetic rubber.

OPA said that the subsidy actuallly will effect a price saving of about 16 million dollars, a large proportion of which will go to the Government as the main purchaser of many of the items involved.

"The new arrangement," OPA said, "has been necessitated by the fact that the Commodity Credit Corp. discontinued sales of corn on April 1, and will discontinue sales of wheat to alcohol producers at the previously existing low prices on July 1.

"Since April, alcohol producers have been compelled to obtain corn at the higher open market prices, and it is expected that on July 1, their wheat costs will rise to at least the corn ceiling levels."

OPA added, "As a result, the direct costs alone of producing alcohol will approximate the 48 cent ceiling price. The action definitely forestalled an increase in the 48 cent alcohol ceiling and averted pressure on the price of many consumer and cost-of-living articles."

The 4 cents a gallon profit margin fixed by the subsidy compares with a 2 cents a gallon margin during the prewar years 1936 to 1939. OPA explained that it took into consideration the fact that seaboard producers have been deprived of molasses, their customary raw material, and suffered considerable expense to convert to the use of grain.

Gallup Poll

Soldier Vote Seen Leaning To Democrats

Princeton, N. J., June 29.—Politicians of both parties are worried over the soldier vote in next year's election.

Two questions, specifically, are giving them concern. First, how many soldiers will cast ballots in the presidential election? Second, which party will have the majority support of those soldiers who do vote?

Last November, in the congressional elections, only a tiny fraction of the total armed forces took the trouble to cast absentee ballots. In New Jersey, for example, the rate of voting among the armed forces was only one ninth the rate among the civilian population. In the Chicago mayoralty election in April of this year it was only one-twelfth. A leading press association estimated that in the November congressionals throughout the country only 2 per cent of the men in the armed forces voted.

Low Balloting Seen

Obviously, unless something radical is done to change the situation, balloting among soldiers next year will be phenomenally low. Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois, a Democrat, predicts that Congress will soon act to facilitate Army and Navy voting.

That the Democrats will probably take the lead in trying to remedy the situation becomes clear when one analyzes the political party preference of the men in service. All current evidence points to the fact that the majority of them lean toward the Democratic Party. Hence, the larger the soldier vote, the better off the Democrats will be.

There are several recent indications of soldier preference for next year. The views of the men already in service abroad obviously cannot be ascertained directly, but a general idea can be gained through their immediate families.

Interviews by the Institute with such families indicate no shift in sentiment toward the Republican Party among the men abroad.

Same as in November

As for soldiers and sailors here in the United States, such evidence as is available also tends to confirm the fact that sentiment among servicemen continues predominately Democratic. Nothing in the evidence would indicate any basic change in party preference since the election of last November, when the Democrats had the advantage in the soldier vote.

In the New Jersey congressional elections last November, for example, the soldiers who voted were 6.7 percentage points more Democratic than the average for the civilian population. In Rhode Island, the vote of the armed forces was 6.2 percentage points more Democratic than the vote among civilians.

New Bi-Racial Study Group Organized

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., June 29.—A collaboration committee of 33 white and 33 Negro leaders from Southern States meeting here for a searching analysis of the principal issues involved in race relations, has agreed that some affirmative action is needed and has named a continuing committee to work out methods and practical means of approach.

The continuing committee, composed of from 12 to 14 members from each race, will meet at Atlanta on August 4 and 5 and in turn will name subcommittees to consider the various phases of such broad problems as political and civil rights, industry and labor, service occupations, education, agriculture, military service, social welfare and health.

"We urge especially that efforts be begun to prepare the postwar world for a wise and successful reception of our returning soldiers and to prepare both our soldiers and the people for attitudes and procedures adequate to carry the great load of postwar needs," the collaboration committtee said in a statement, unanimously approved, which was made public today.

"In all of these, we urge the public to a new sense of the meaning of these needs as they accord with our professed principles of Christianity and democracy," it said.

The statement referred to the problem of readjustments to meet the demands of present and postwar conditions with reference to the Negro and future development of the South, as the great crisis, exclusive of the war, faced by the South and the Nation.

Senate Restores Funds to NYA, Previously Dropped by House

The Senate passed yesterday a $1,238,000,000 Labor-Federal Security appropriations bill containing $48,800,000 in funds for the National Youth Administration (NYA) which the House previously voted to liquidate.

Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, abandoned plans to seek another vote on the NYA amendment which the Senate added to the measure yesterday by a count of 41 to 37.

Final passage was by voice vote.

The measure goes back to the House and a joint conference committee for an effort to reconcile differences between the two chambers before the fiscal year's deadline tomorrow midnight.

Self-Help Group To Drop Work Till After War

The Self-Help Exchange, an organization founded in 1937 to enable the needy to help themselves through work on salvage materials, will be suspended today for the duration of the war or until the service is more urgently needed, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, executive director, said yesterday.

Holding its funds in escrow so activities may be resumed when the need arises, the organization is looking forward to providing training and work at the close of the war during the adjustment period between military duty and civilian employment

According to a report released by Mrs. Doyle, the Self-Help Exchange has aided 5,813 persons during the past six years and has obtained approximately 10,000 outside jobs, temporary and permanent, for its participants.

Gene Krupa Tried On Drug Charge

San Francisco, June 29 (AP).—Gene Krupa, drummer and band leader went on trial in Juvenile Court today on a felony charge of using a minor for transportation of narcotics.

Krupa has been serving a 90-day sentence in the county jail for possession of marihuana cigarettes.

Federal agents charged that Krupa's 20-year-old property man and valet, John Pateakos, was carrying cigarettes when arrested in a hotel here. Earlier, agents had arrested Krupa as he left a theater. Pateakos vanished before the case was brought to trial.

Memorial Service For Roland L. Taylor

A service of Holy Communion in memory of Roland L. Taylor of Philadelphia will be held today at 9 a. m. in the Children's Chapel of Washington Cathedral. A benefactor of the cathedral, who provided both the Children's Chapel and the Pilgrim Steps at the south approach to the edifice, Mr. Taylor died in Philadelphia on May 23.

The service will be conducted by the canon chancellor of the cathedral, the Rev. Charles W. F. Smith, assisted by Canon Albert H. Lucas.

Tire Ban Ordered on Holders Of A Books as Supplies Slump

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

Supplies of tires for nonessential driving were disclosed to be "near bottom" yesterday following an OPA announcement ordered by Rubber Director William M. Jeffers that holders of A gasoline books will not be granted tire replacements for some time.

The tire ban on A book holders, who previously were entitled to used or recapped tires, is to start July 1 and continue for a period of about 90 days, the announcement stated, until additional supplies of used tire carcasses are put into serviceable condition.

Although there was disposition to view the order as a result of Jeffers' "overly generous" allotments of tires to civilians in past months, Jeffers' office described the move as part of a logical program.

July Quota Cut Sharply

While admitting that stocks of used or recapped tires were practically gone, Jeffers' office supported its past allotment practice by stating that any other action would have forced cars off the roads, causing transportation congestions as well as a certain amount of absenteeism.

Critics, however, pointed out that only the serious gasoline shortage, which has cut A driving to a mere 90 miles a month, has ironically warded off more serious consequences from Jeffers' "generous" allotment program.

Jeffers has told OPA that the July quota of grade 3 tires—used or recapped for passenger cars—is 414,931 as compared to 690,000 for June.

Under the tire ban, A book holders in the Northeast gasoline shortage area will be able only to recap their present tires. Outside the gasoline shortage area, where an A book is good for 240 miles a month, replacements will be granted if the applicant shows that he uses his car for essential purposes and also belongs to ride-sharing groups.

Relief Within Three Months

By the end of three months, it was said, supplies of recapped tires plus slowly mounting output of synthetic tires is expected to eliminate the present squeeze.

Grade 3 tire quotas for the six months are: July, 414,931; June, 690,000; May, 600,799; April, 598,000; March, 644,000, and February, 690,475.

Also indicating the serious turn in the tire picture was the issuance by Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown of a telegram from Jeffers urging that local rationing boards be instructed anew to stress need for all tire conservation measures.

Senate Group Restores Part Of OWI Fund

way could Congress guard against "a fuel famine."

Representative Priest (Democrat) of Tennessee, former managing editor of the Nashville Tennessean, in a House speech defended the domestic branch of the OWI, listing its activities and warning that if it is abolished "the costs of every Federal war agency unquestionably will rise."

Priest said that most of the debate which preceded the recent vote of the House to eliminate the domestic branch was on the "so-called propaganda phases," with very little attention being paid to "the broader effect."

The domestic branch, he said, "provides the central clearance facilities which are necessary to give the public an accurate, ungarbled picture of the war activities of the Government as a whole."

He recalled that a year ago "there was a recurring refrain from both sides of the aisle" that a central information agency be established to coordinate news releases. At the same time, he said, the press was attacking conflicting statements emanating from Government agencies.

Wallace Accuses Jesse Jones of Obstructing BEW War Effort; RFC Chief Sees Malice in Charges, and Invites Investigation

Washington, even President Roosevelt, by surprise. The President told his press conference that newspaper headlines had brought him the first word of the open warfare between the two titans of his official family. Mr. Roosevelt said he wished such things would be brought to him, as he suggested that the heads of all Government agencies do last August.

The battle broke into the open within 24 hours after War Food Administrator Chester Davis had closed a chapter in Washington's food policy war by resigning, to be succeeded by Judge Marvin Jones.

In the rank of the personalities involved, the Jones-Wallace scrap outclassed either the Davis fight or such top-flight battles as the one between Rubber Director Jeffers and Undersecretary of War Patterson and Undersecretary of the Navy Forrestal, over priorities for rubber, high octane gasoline and naval escort vessels.

Wallace Scores Victory

Wallace struck as Congress prepared for final action on the Board of Economic Warfare's appropriation for the next fiscal year, and late in the day he scored a victory when a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee rejected a plan which would have given Jones veto power over the BEW.

It was against such a threat that Wallace had drafted his blast, but ironically the statement failed to reach members who turned in the decision to leave the BEW the top word in determining imports policy.

Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee was understood to have proposed an amendment to the BEW appropriation that would have required its directives to receive indorsement from the Secretaries of War and Navy, and Secretary of Commerce Jones.

This was modified to provide simply that procurement of materials abroad would conform to normal economic programs adopted by a majority of the BEW's board. Members of both parties said that while phrased as a limitation, the proviso would not materially change the present system. The subcommittee decision is subject to review today by the full Appropriations Committee.

Charges Nothing Was Done

Wallace charged that Jones and the RFC did little or nothing about getting stockpiles of a dozen critical materials when that agency had the job to do, before April 13, 1942, when authority over the imports program was turned over to the BEW. In contrast, he declared, that from April 13 to the end of last year the BEW either made substantial progress, or exceeded the original war production quota for the same materials.

Wallace said that a speech by Senator McKellar early this month, based on statements of Jones to a Senate committee, prompted him to prepare his own statement for the Appropriations Committee. He wrote it, he said, then after "sleeping over the matter for several nights I decided not to make it."

But recent "misrepresentations" about the BEW made him change his mind, Wallace declared. "There are times when the sense of public duty outweighs the natural, personal reluctance to present facts of this nature. This is such a time," he explained.

Wallace said that Jones had "never been willing to accept the fact" that the President had given the BEW complete control of all public purchase import operations on April 13, 1942.

"He has instead done much to harass the administrative employes of the board in their single-minded effort to help shorten this war by securing adequate stocks of strategic materials."

Wasteful Feuding

He said that Jones' reluctance to accept BEW authority had resulted in destructive and wasteful feuding. Jones and his personnel, said Wallace, "have thrown a great many obstacles in the way of our exercise of the powers given to us to carry out our war-time assignments.

"Some of these obstructionist tactics have been minor and annoying, and some have been of major consequence in this gigantic job of waging total war."

With programs to obtain both quinine and quartz, Wallace said that Jones was able to hold things up when "as our banker," he refused "to sign checks in accordance with our directives." Minor RFC delays, said Wallace, showed "bureaucracy at its worst," and were "utterly inexcusable in a Nation at war."

Declaring that the BEW was willing to rest its case with Congress Wallace said, "It seems to me that we could end this wrangling and improve the administrative efficiency so essential to winning this war, in program by which money were appropriated directly to the BEW for its purchase and development of all imported strategic materials."

Although Congress authorized an "aggressive Government stockpiling program," Wallace charged that Jones had "failed dismally" to build the stockpiles authorized 18 months before Pearl Harbor, following instead a "timid, business-as-usual" policy.

As one example, Wallace said that "virtually nothing was done by Jones to build a Government stockpile of fats and oils even after Pearl Harbor, when the Japs were conquering the Far East from which we had been getting tremendous supplies."

Other materials as to which RFC policies produced little or no results, said Wallace, included beryl ore for copper alloys, castor seeds for hydraulic oil, cobalt for high-speed cutting steels, corundum for grinding lenses, flax fiber for parachute webbing, jute and sisal, the latter used in binder twine for harvesting grain, tantalite for contact points in radio tubes, and zirconium for use in flares and ammunition.

Wallace said that on the quinine program, "whatever his reasons may have been, the facts are that Mr. Jones disregarded the constant proddings by the BEW, and for a while he ignored the fact that I, as chairman of the BEW had personally investigated the matter and recommended immediate action."

Jones "considered" the program, said Wallace, "right on through the battle—with malaria and the Japs—at Guadalcanal."

Wallace declared that despite the fact that the President had given the BEW full power over strategic imports, "we are helpless when Jesse Jones as our banker refuses to sign checks in accordance with our directives."

To correct this, Wallace proposed that the BEW be given cash directly to carry out the strategic materials imports program.

He said that the RFC officials were fighting the war with "peacetime red tape, corporate technicalities, and with what seems to us to be an unnecessary caution."

Among tactics which he labeled "maddening" and "exasperating," Wallace listed the following maneuvers during the past four months by an RFC subsidiary, the Metals Reserve Co.:

1. The agency took four weeks to execute three BEW metal contracts which the sellers had returned in 10 days.
2. It held a copper contract five weeks because one letter had been left out of one unimportant word and two minor clauses "could have been more clearly stated."
3. It wrote three letters to the BEW protesting that a form clause without legal effect referred to the BEW's "direction" that a contract be entered into.
4. It demanded that a simple five-ton contract for tantalite be broken into two contracts so that RFC attorneys might draft one.
5. It refused to sign a Nigerian tantalite contract before the producer signed it, although it meant a three-week delay in getting a new mine into production.
6. It refused, on a legal technicality, to honor a directive authorizing the "loan or rental" of equipment to the Brazilian government because Government representatives in Rio de Janeiro had sent word that the equipment would be rented and not loaned.
7. It held a Brazilian tantalite contract for four weeks because it had been entered into without a formal approval required by the Secretary of Commerce.

Winter Petroleum Needs Will Be Met, Sen. Mead Says

Senator Mead (Democrat) of New York yesterday predicted that all essential petroleum needs in the District of Columbia and the rest of the Eastern Seaboard would be met th' winter.

Mead made his prediction from figures furnishe' the Senate Small Business Committee by Joseph B. Eastman, director of defense transportation, showing that for the week ended June 12 overland transportation was moving 1,369,000 barrels of petroleum products per day into the Eastern Seaboard area.

The Senator also said that the 24-inch crude pipe line now under construction would be completed all the way to the Eastern Seaboard by August and a 20-inch line would be ready by February, 1944.

Mead predicted that by February, 1944, the Eastern Seaboard would be receiving 1,600,000 barrels of petroleum products per day, well over the norms' requirements. The barge construction program for transportation of oil through the Great Lakes and Erie Canal, delayed by late spring ice, is now well under way, he added.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES
This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Made from Fresh Apple Juice

The Eastern Regional Research Laboratory of the U. S. Department of Agriculture developed this new moistening agent, extracting a tasteless liquid from pure apple juice. We named it Apple "Honey."

Protects Old Gold's Famous Flavor

Apple "Honey" is sprayed on Old Gold tobaccos, including delightful Latakia, until it reaches every single shred! This protects the moisture so very important to freshness and flavor.

Join the Crowds

Every day thousands of smokers are turning to Old Golds. See for yourself how successfully Apple "Honey" replaces glycerine now needed for war materials . . . how much it does to keep Old Golds FRESH!

Waste Protested As War Bill Passes

Extravagance Attacked by Senators, Voting Army 71 Billion Unanimously

By the Associated Press

A storm of protests that the Army and Navy are guilty of "waste and extravagance" accompanied unanimous Senate passage yesterday of the $71,500,000,000 "decisive budet" War Department bill.

Senator Maloney (Democrat) of Connecticut, a member of the Appropriations Committee, told his colleagues he was "certain" the measure embraced "waste and extravagance," but that he "didn't know where to cut it." Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia announced that his Joint Economy Committee would conduct an investigation into Army-Navy spending.

Declaring that experts should be assigned to congressional appropriations committees to assist Congressmen in analyzing the needs for all requests for funds, Maloney declared:

"We can not much longer delay such a step without a great danger of disaster."

Only Minor Changes Made

The House previously had approved the measure, 345 to 0, and the Senate made only minor changes which did not affect the total. The bill went back to the House for action on these changes.

As approved, it contains funds for an outlay of more than 50 billion dollars for Army aviation, including the purchase of 99,740 new airplanes.

The Appropriations Committee made public this week testimony from Lieut. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, deputy Chief of Staff, that the United Nations are "rapidly approaching final victory" and that the Japanese Empire soon will feel the war's impact "in a most violent and destructive way."

203 Billions on Hand

While he said he would not deny the military leadership a single dollar needed for the prosecution of the war, Senator Byrd declared enactment of the bill and a previously passed Navy measure would leave a total of $203,782,009,264 on hand at the Treasury for Army and Navy expenditure.

This total of unexpended balances from appropriations voted this year and previously, he declared, is "more than twice as much as has so far been disbursed for our war activities."

Asserting the time had come for "closer scrutiny on the colossal appropriations," he announced his joint committee on reduction of nonessential Federal expenditures would institute an inquiry shortly to "determine why it is necessary" to have so large a fund on hand.

Greater Care Urged

It is not difficult, he declared, "to visualize a debt far in excess of 300 billion dollars unless greater care is taken in the expenditure of these public funds."

Byrd asserted expenditures for war production "have been unnecessarily extravagant and wasteful," a view in which he was joined by Chairman Truman (Democrat) of Missouri of the War Investigating Committee.

Truman declared the Army and Navy "know how to waste money better than any organization I have had anything to do with."

"I've almost gotten to be a pessimist in the job you've given me," he told his colleagues. "It seems where public funds are to be expended, nobody has much interest in saving money."

Minority Leader McNary of Oregon said the bill involved a sum "hardly conceivable in its magnitude," and Senator La Follette (Progressive) of Wisconsin said: "This war could be carried on another year or two if Congress refused to appropriate another dollar."

U.S. Ends 80 Billion Year; Now Real Outgo Begins

The Treasury was casting up balance sheets yesterday on an 80-billion-dollar year—most costly fiscal period in the world's history—and making ready to go into really big business in the new fiscal year beginning tomorrow.

Total actual spending during the year fell some five billion dollars short of budget estimates. Direct war spending totaled $71,500,000,000 against estimates of 74 billion dollars.

The Treasury's income also fell below expectations—by nearly one billion dollars. The 22 billion dollars in receipts, however, far exceeded the $12,300,000,000 collected during the preceding year.

The debt itself jumped during the year from about 76 billion dollars to more than 140 billion dollars.

Man Accused By WAVE Gets 18-Year Term

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, June 29.—Charles Joseph Mannix, 33, a marketing specialist for the United States Department of Agriculture, was sentenced by Federal Judge William C. Coleman tonight to serve 18 years in a Federal penitentiary for attempting to rape a 27-year-old member of the WAVES

Mannix was convicted by a jury in Federal Court at the conclusion of a two-day trial, and Judge Coleman imposed the sentence shortly afterward.

The jury recommended that the judge use mercy in sentencing Mannix, who denied the attempted rape, said by the Government to have occurred on the United States Public Health Service grounds near Bethesda last May 27.

Recommendation Unheeded

Judge Coleman declared, however, that he was not bound by the jury's recommendation, and imposed a sentence just two years short of the maximum permitted under Federal law.

On the stand Mannix denied charges that he molested or attempted to rape the 27-year-old WAVE.

However, Mannix testified he seized the young woman, pushed her to the ground and slapped her once to keep her out of danger when a building guard, summoned by her screams, fired shots.

The marketing specialist told Judge Coleman that the WAVE screamed when she injured her knee in a leap from his car. He asserted she jumped from the car when he pulled into a dark driveway while motoring her to the Bethesda Naval Hospital, where she was stationed.

Denies Wrong Intention

Mannix added he meant to stop momentarily and had no intention of molesting her.

Earlier, a Federal Bureau of Investigation agent told the court that Mannix said he was "too drunk to remember" whether he attacked the WAVE.

The agent told the court he asked Mannix if he had tried to assault the WAVE, a pharmacist's mate second class.

Mannix denied the charge, but said he couldn't be absolutely sure because he was not in full possession of his faculties the agent related.

The defense contended the alleged offense was not committed on Federal property and therefore the Federal court had no authority to hear the case.

3 Jobholder Row at White Heat

By the Associated Press

Flat disagreement of the Senate to a conference report restricting President Roosevelt's use of his emergency funds and calling for dismissal November 15 of three Government employes accused of membership in subversive organizations, promised one of the heaviest engagements between the two houses before the fiscal year expires tonight.

Conferees put the restrictions back in a 143-million-dollar urgent deficiency bill late in the day, but the Senate voted them out again, 35 to 32, shortly afterward.

The three employes immediately affected were Dr. Robert Morss Lovett, secretary of the Virgin Islands government, and Goodwin Watson and W. E. Dodd, jr., employes of the Federal Communications Commission. A House committee had made the accusations against them.

The Senate action came on a compromise proposal under which dismissal of the three would have been delayed until November 15 at which time reappointment and Senate confirmation would have been necessary to continue them on the payroll.

The House-approved restrictions would deny the President the right to use emergency funds for any agency for which Congress appropriates, except the War and Navy Departments, and three other agencies.

Past-due salaries of hundreds of Government employes are tied up in this controversy, which involves a deficiency appropriation measure.

Knell Sounded For Legal Board Of Civil Service

A Senate Civil Service Subcommittee yesterday rang the death knell for the Board of Legal Examiners by tabling a House-accepted measure to give it statutory authority for another year.

All functions of the board revert to the Civil Service Commission, although lists of ungraded eligibles compiled by the board still remain active, until exhausted by appointments.

Committee action taken yesterday means the Board of Legal Examiners will cease to function after tonight when its appropriation expires. Another appropriation of $86,600 for the new fiscal year has been delayed by the House pending Senate action on authorization for the board to continue.

Clorox offers still another valuable service...
IT NEUTRALIZES WAR GASES
(LIQUID MUSTARD AND LEWISITE)

Clorox, familiar friend to millions of housewives, is recognized by scientists as a most effective agent for neutralizing liquid mustard and Lewisite war gases.

Numerous local defense councils and individuals, following the recommendations of war gas authorities, have included Clorox among their first aid supplies. The same qualities that have made Clorox America's favorite bleach and household disinfectant enable it to neutralize liquid mustard and Lewisite war gases. Clorox is ultra-refined, free from caustic, permitting fast, efficient action . . . it has uniform high strength. Clorox is always pure, safe and dependable.

While it is hoped that the occasion will never arise whereby Clorox is needed for fighting war gas, this advertisement is published as a public service to familiarize the American people with the protective values of Clorox in case of emergency.

Recommended Treatment with Clorox
If liquid gas has splashed on skin quickly blot up all liquid possible with absorbent material. Then gently bathe affected area with undiluted Clorox to neutralize remaining liquid gas; rinse. Take shower, lathering thoroughly. Dry skin by patting.

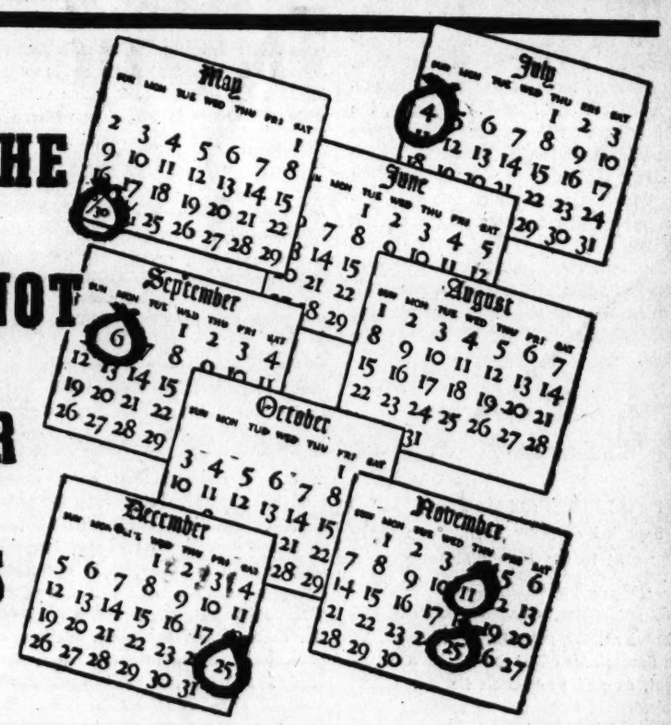
FIGHTING THE WAR DOES NOT CEASE FOR HOLIDAYS



In peace time telephone users make many Long Distance calls in the several days preceding a national holiday—before Independence Day, for example—planning weekend trips or inviting out-of-town folks to visit them.

But let's not do it this year. War calls will be crowding Long Distance lines before and on the Fourth of July just as at other times. So, to clear the way for these essential calls, please use Long Distance only when it is really necessary—before the holiday and all the while we have a war on our hands.

WAACS

It is profoundly reassuring that the demoralizing and vicious rumors circulated about the conduct of women in the armed forces, and more particularly about the WAACS, have been greeted with incredulity and aversion by the public at large. There has been no hysterical mail from the parents of the girls. The press, Congress and high-ranking War Department officials have all spontaneously and unanimously repudiated these irresponsible and malicious reports. As for the recruiting, the past few weeks have seen an increase in applicants.

We are not a militaristic nation. The American people have never taken easily to the necessities and discipline of military life. Even the male civilian fits himself into his uniform with some self-consciousness and misgiving. Subconsciously and even consciously we are suspicious of military dress. Possibly a part of this distrust has found an outlet in rumors about the WAACS which are not even novel or original. For the same hackneyed tales were already full-fledged in Britain during World War I, came to life again in 1940 and, we dare say, may even have been whispered in barrooms about the nurses who went with Florence Nightingale into the filth and suffering of the Crimea. They are but another ugly symptom of war psychology.

It has been said that women in the services are "no better and no worse" than the women of the country. In a sense this is true enough. For their manners and mores are, of course, those of our sisters, daughters, neighbors and friends. After all, the WAACS didn't fly in from Mars; they came from next door and across the street. At the same time, these women were not inducted without passing mental, physical, and character tests which automatically act as a check and set them apart from the great majority. We would say it would be impossible to find among civilians 65,000 American women as well disciplined, as hard working or as dedicated to their country as the WAACS.

Devious Diplomacy

Were it not for the devious and disingenuous policy our officialdom has pursued toward France and the French people over a period of many months, the forthcoming visit to the United States of Gen. Henri Honore Giraud would be deserving of only perfunctory comment. Gen. Giraud is a brave soldier, a sterling French patriot and a devoted friend of the Allies. On that account, as well as because he was and is commander in chief of the French forces in North Africa who helped drive the Axis out of Tunisia, he deserves and will receive a hearty welcome from the American people.

Under existing circumstances, however, it would be taking far too naive a view of the matter to assume that President Roosevelt's invitation to General Giraud is the product solely of American gratitude toward and respect for a worthy Allied military leader. Given the drift of our French policy, the suspicion will not down that General Giraud's forthcoming visit is designed to provide the setting for still anotner American (now, more accurately, Anglo-American) effort to strengthen General Giraud's hand and weaken that of De Gaulle in the still unresolved political struggle in North Africa.

It is instructive to note in this connection that the announcement that President Roosevelt has sent an invitation to General Giraud to come here coincided with a new barrage of abuse directed against General de Gaulle by certain American officials who conveniently hide behind a smoke screen of anonymity. A case in point is the extraordinary interview of one of these unnamed officials with Kirke L. Simpson of the Associated Press. In that interview General Giraud is pictured as the paragon of virtue and the indispensable man, while De Gaulle is portrayed as a wholly disturbing force about whom "the fiction of Free Fighting French" has been built. It is also suggested in this interview that American authorities are impatient of any French solution of the political tangle in North Africa, and in the name of military necessity are prepared to find solutions of their own, even though, to quote Mr. Simpson again (in a second article on this subject) "both General Eisenhower and Washington authorities are standing aloof from French factional wrangling precipitated by De Gaulle and his adherents."

The attitude of these unnamed high officials whom Mr. Simpson has interviewed and whom he quotes shows a degree of misunderstanding of what is involved in the French situation that is as bewildering as it is frightening. But if theirs is the view of our Government, the visit of General Giraud may well prove not a pleasant interlude, but the prelude to disaster. It means that our Government out of ignorance, irritation, or stubborn adherence to a misguided policy is widening and deepening the barrier that has been created, but need never have been created, between us and the French.

The fact is that despite all our professions to the contrary, we have never stood aloof from "French factional political wrangling." General Giraud was our nominee, and nobody else's, for the post of commander in chief in North Africa, even though, at the time of our landing there, it soon became apparent that he commanded no following in that area. By insisting for a long time—much too long a time—on the maintenance of the status quo in Africa, we made ourselves responsible for the continuance in office long after they should have been eliminated of men who by any objective standards should have been expelled summarily. They have since been eliminated, no thanks to us, however, but to pressures from others quarters, particularly from the Fighting French. And by these and other tactics the prestige and following which General de Gaulle had among the French people has been enormouly increased. Regardless of the views of Mr. Simpson's informant, the "Free Fighting French" movement is not a fiction we can dismiss with a wave of the hand, but a reality. We had better become reconciled to and deal with it if the peace we hope to win will be a peace that can be saved.

Mr. Jesse Jones

The latest explosion of the Board of Economic Warfare-Jesse Jones feud calls for prompt action at the White House. How in the new circumstances the Vice President and Mr. Jones can continue to work together in Mr. Roosevent's official family has become a minor problem. The real issue is how this country can prosecute the war successfully with men like Mr. Jones in positions of authority. Mr. Wallace is chairman of the BEW. He has been stung into another expose of Mr. Jones' so-called war effort by the misrepresentations about the BEW which Mr. Jones is circulating in the Senate. Evidently the Vice President held his peace till his sense of public duty compelled him to bring the record against Mr. Jones up to date. The statement is so damning that it should suffice to disinfect the trail which Mr. Jones is spreading with an assiduity worthy of a better cause. But it is not enough in wartime to spike rumormongers who at the same time are holding up the war by obstructionism. Mr. Jones's usefulness must be regarded as seriously in question.

The origin of Mr. Jones' vindictiveness, of course, goes back to the time when the President decided that Mr. Jones had been the Pooh Bah of this Administration long enough. On April 13 of last year he vested in the BEW complete control of all public purchase import operations which had formerly been conducted by Mr. Jones. The directive had long been needed. Under Mr. Jones the program of building up stockpiles of critical materials had failed dismally, though Congress had authorized the program nearly 18 months before Pearl Harbor. The economic consequences of Mr. Jones have been written in the story of our material shortages which the BEW is now working with might and main to correct. However, Mr. Jones, according to Mr. Wallace, "has never been willing to accept" the transfer of his import function. This would not have mattered if Mr. Jones had been divorced of power over the BEW. But he still retained the role of banker. In other words, Mr. Jones held authority to sign the checks without which the BEW could not pursue its program for the procurement and development of necessary materials.

It is Mr. Wallace's charge that this authority has been exercised to the hurt of the BEW's program. He mentioned two instances of obstructionism in quinine and quartz crystals. One of them is destined to save American lives now exposed in all tropical lands to malaria, the other to keep our arsenal going. Mr. Wallace's story of the obstructionism on the quinine program winds up:

> The Reconstruction Finance Corp. thus held up the vital quinine program while it objected to the "tone" of our letters, mislaid papers, forgot about officers, and hand-picked its suppliers from the "right kinds of people," instead of making a desperate fight to buy every pound of cinchona bark [the source of quinine] it could locate from any source whatsoever, regardless of the financial risks involved.

The delay in the quartz crystal program is equally a story compounded in part of ineptitude and in part of obstructionism. They are major charges. But Mr. Wallace arraigns Mr. Jones on general grounds which are summed up in this indictment:

> He has [instead] done much to harass the administrative employes of the board in their single-minded effort to help shorten this war by securing adequate stocks of strategic materials . . . The Board of Economic Warfare has tried for over a year now to do its job in spite of the obstructionist acts Mr. Jones has employed from time to time.

Mr. Jones's mania for personal power has quite obscured in his mind the fact that this Nation is fighting a war of survival. He has already done harm enough.

Clipped Wings

The young men of our Navy have learned to fly. They have learned that the striking range of a ship can be tremendously extended by planes. They have added a new dimension to naval warfare. But the older men of the Navy, their feet planted firmly on the decks of battleships, have clipped the flyers' wings.

Naval strategy is wholly in the hands of the battleship men. They are men who, in many cases, wear wings—earned by virtue of a brief carrier cruise or an indoctrination course at a naval air station. But the surface vessel remains their first love. They are prone to see naval warfare in terms of fleet engagements, the big guns booming as opposing battle lines move against one another in stately procession. They are good men and true. But they do not love planes or believe in them.

Yet they are the men who sit in high council with our Allies. General Arnold of the Army Air Forces is at the side of General Marshall in meetings of the Combined Chiefs of Staff, while the Navy is represented by Admiral King alone. Few flyers are on the staffs which help Admiral King and Admiral Nimitz formulate plans for the defeat of the enemy. Even the few admitted to such high conclaves are subordinate in rank and discreetly silent. The men who actually fly the Navy's planes, who have faith in naval aviation, who believe fervently that it can be employed to revolutionize the winning of the war at sea, have no voice in shaping battle plans.

This dominance of the battleship men goes down the line. It applies to tactics as well as to strategy. A naval task force, even when its principal components are carriers, and its mission mainly aerial, is generally under the command of some stout blue-water sailor. The flying men simply carry out orders—the orders of men whose knowledge of aviation at best is theoretical and who are somewhat disposed to write off the plane as just another new-fangled gadget.

Under such conditions it is unlikely that the full potentialities of aviation will be realized in naval warfare. No lay critic, to be sure, is competent to declare that the Navy's air arm has been mishandled or that great opportunities have been missed through a failure to utilize it effectively. But to the ordinary layman this subordination of flying men is inescapably disturbing. We have seen the Army push its flyers forward to posts of great influence. We have seen the Army Air Forces given virtual autonomy. And the results in the air over Europe and North Africa and New Guinea and Guadalcanal—on every front—have abundantly vindicated the men who had faith in the air weapon.

The Army learned that aviation could not be used with full effectiveness if it were kept as a mere subsidiary to the ground forces. Dispersion of planes among a number of tactical ground units prevented the concentration of power to be achieved by unified air strength. In North Africa, accordingly, a strategic air force composed of British and American elements was created under Maj. Gen. James Doolittle. Its share in our Tunisian triumph was of the utmost importance. The Army learned from experience.

But the Navy has learned little and forgotten less. It has developed nothing comparable to the Army's strategic air force. Its planes are parceled out among units of the surface fleet without either the coordination or concentration essential to real power. They have been treated as nothing more than a subordinate element in an organization designed and dedicated to fighting on the surface of the sea. It is time for the Navy to take note of the fact that its airmen have grown up, time to give them a voice as adult members of the naval family.

THE NAME

It is not on the door now, nobody gets a letter
Signed with it now, it is gone from the voting list.
Yet not really forgotten, only stopped changing.
The name is still spoken, and the name's man missed.

Everything he did, especially the last usual things,
We made mean much. Alive, he would have jeered
At our waste of praise for cloudy words and work
That in the next right sunlight he would have cleared.

What is a name? It is something a live man renews,
Or spoils, or signs, it is something he can change.
People laugh at it, say yes to it, need it to get jobs.
But the name of a dead man is sad, still, strange.

After we use a dead man's name ten years,
Time does for him what he never thought to try.
We had always admired him, he had gained honors
That come to names. But he had not planned to die.

O he was busy in the hard high hurrying world! but Always his ambitions for his own name lacked one.
And now he achieves even that, the last sad honor,
Death. Even that is something he has done.

JOHN HOLMES

Food Situation

By Mark Sullivan

Can Be Made Right

ABOUT THE food situation, the first thing to be said, and the last, and the thing always to be remembered is that it must be made right. When responsible men say that failure to manage this situation wisely may lose the war for the Allies, they are not speaking figuratively nor with exaggeration. The American food supply is a dependence not only of the American civilian population and the American armed forces, but also of the civilian populations and armed forces of our Allies. Failure to arrive at sound strategy about food production and distribution would be as fatal as failure to have sound military strategy. If a food crisis should come, the probable time of it would be the worst possible. It might coincide with the time of anticipated victory by arms, and the former might undo the latter. We talk much about, and in part rely upon, deterioration of German morale, and this is expected to come about largely through inadequate food supply. It would be a tragic irony if we, very much richer in potential food supply, should be the one to suffer food inadequacy first.

THE SECOND thing to say is that the food situation can be made right. Enough men understand how the problem should be handled, and the forces of fact and logic are so much on their side, that they are bound to be heard and followed. The dissension among groups and interests is not as great as the commotion makes it seem. Groups that have opposed programs so far put forward have done so because they are convinced the programs have been wrong or incomplete, and in some cases suspicious that programs have been put forward in the interest of special groups.

THERE ARE two needs. One is production of larger crops next year—the present year is too far gone to accomplish much. The other need is to prevent excessive rise in prices of crops and hence in prices of food. Of the two needs, the first, increase of production, is the greater—from the point of view of winning the war. So far, the subsidy device practiced by the Administration attempted only to meet the second purpose, to keep down prices of food, and was far from ideal for that.

The imperative need is greater production of food next year. This can only be had by paying for it, one way or another. The farmers of the country are raising as much food as they can. No amount of energy or determination or patriotism can enable them to raise more—what one man on a farm can produce is a physical limitation. But these farmers have skill and experience, which could be spread over a larger area. This means more men to work on the farms under the leadership of farmers. In short, more labor; and to get this labor it must be paid wages comparable to the wages paid in industry. For the extra food thus produced, the farmer must receive a price to cover the wages he must pay. Either this price must be paid by the consumer—or the Government, if it chooses, can use a subsidy to compensate for the extra cost of labor. The subsidies so far practiced by the Administration had neither this intention nor this effect.

THE DOUBLE problem—producing more food and at the same time preventing high cost of food and inflation—is not to be solved by any one device. It overlaps upon nearly all the phases of the home front, including rationing, taxation, allocation of manpower, draft policy. There was good reason for the contention of Mr. Chester C. Davis that as food administrator he must have more power than he had under the existing setup of the executive branch of government. There was good reason for the disposition of Congress to give Mr. Davis added powers. That Mr. Davis felt obliged to resign is a pity, for he had the confidence of an especially large number of groups and individuals concerned in the problem.

The new food administrator, Mr. Marvin Jones, has some advantages, some liabilities. It is an advantage that he was for 23 years a member of Congress, until three years ago, and has the favorable acquaintance of many in that body. At the same time farm leaders in Congress remember Mr. Jones as an especial partisan of the Administration's farm policies during 10 years past. Some of those policies are now out of favor. One of the policies was to give subsidies to farmers, in the form of "benefit payments." The subsidies were accompanied by onerous regulations. Part of the present suspicion of farm leaders in Congress against wartime policies about crop production and food, is apprehension that the war may be made an excuse for still further regulation.

The Fifth Columns

By Paul Schubert

Axis Achilles Heel

ALL OVER Europe they are waiting for us . . . the Fifth Columns of the United Nations.

Time was when the term "Fifth Column" meant someone working against us. Back in the dark days when the Axis seemed to have all the tricks, we felt the hand of conspiracy everywhere. The enemy used the very institutions of the free countries to plot against freedom—until at one time it seemed as if the very idea of freedom meant inherent weakness of national structure.

And yet we've never been able to give up the idea of freedom. No one who has ever tasted freedom, can bear the thought of a world without it.

Back in the dark days, there was a time when we were looking for a name for this war, and a good many people suggested that it be called the War of Liberation.

AT THAT time, though, it was difficult to see how we were going to liberate the conquered peoples—difficult to see how the nations still free would manage to stay free.

Imagine what it means, this year, to the conquered peoples of Europe. If we were concerned, at one time, over the power of the relatively small enemy Fifth Column within our borders, imagine the situation in reverse, today, in Axis countries permeated by millions of people whose hatred for the Axis conqueror is deadly.

In Norway, for instance, the German has made himself unloved by affiliating himself with what to the Norwegians is treason—Norway has given us the word "Quisling" to symbolize everything the Norwegians hate about their present situation.

To the Germans, the Norwegians seem stubborn and unreasonable. The Germans have always admired the Norwegians as individuals, first because they are "Nordics," while the Germans are only pseudo-Nordics, and latterly as an offshoot of the European winter sport craze, because of Norwegian prowess in skiing. But characteristically, the Germans feel instinctive contempt for the Norwegians as members of a small—and therefore weak—nation. Part of the German doctrine that the state is all, the individual nothing, induces this comfortable feeling of superiority over all countries which happen to be smaller in numbers than the Reich . . .

To the Germans, the Norwegians should have grasped this—should have made themselves individually "stronger" by leaping at the opportunity to affiliate with the Reich.

But the pig-headed Norwegians resisted—and still resist . . . and today Germany is faced (and we are aided) by a Norwegian Fifth Column.

ANOTHER OF our Fifth Columns is in France.

Is this an organized Fifth Column, with leaders and cells, underground communications . . . with weapons?

Perhaps.

But the organized Fifth Column is only a small part of the real Fifth Column.

That's the secret of Fifth Columns. They are only really effective when they are spontaneous—when they spread through the people. The deeds that will help us are not the deeds plotted in advance and carried out by conspiracy. They are the deeds improvised to meet the occasion—and this year there will be occasions.

The French Fifth Column is the most powerful of all in numbers, strong with the submerged spirit of France, intelligent with the sharp native shrewdness of the French.

Farther east we have a third Fifth Column, whose spirit flames perhaps higher than any of the others—the Balkan Fifth Column.

From Greece on up through Yugoslavia, this group has never stopped fighting. Balkan people are primitive in spirit; the men have a warrior tradition and think of themselves as fighters. In the modern Europe of the last 100 years they have seemed an anachronism, as out of place in many ways as the gypsy. In modern Europe the art of war became the art of making and using the machines of war—and the Balkan man is no great hand at using those machines. Give him a rifle, a horse, a knife and a sack of hand grenades, and a terrain on which he can fight as Balkan men have fought for thousands of years—in guerilla warfare . . . that's something different.

The conquering Germans had little difficulty in seizing the Balkans—but have never subdued the Balkans.

Today we have a Fifth Column there and it reaches on up into Europe along the Danube Valley—into Czecho-Slovakia's Bohemia, in the heart of the enemy's Festung.

Liberation?

Millions wait for it—wait to rise and help strike for it.

Social Security

The "Beveridge Plan," like Dr. Townsend's Utopian dream, is receiving acclaim by a certain percentage of the population and no doubt will affect legislation in this country, both State and national.

When Government becomes responsible for all our social security, we will be regimented just as happened in Russia and Germany. It has been pointed out that there was little unemployment in those countries, but this condition had to be paid for at the highest possible price, namely, the loss of freedom of choice as to one's craft, trade or career. The regimentation which took place in the Communist and Nazi systems and all the intolerable discipline of the body politic and economic must be guarded against here if we as a democracy are to survive. Our very existence as a democracy depends upon the avoidance of the discontent and indignation of the workers at the loss of their freedom.

The application of scientific discoveries has given man a firmer hold on the resources of nature and we may well take pride in our achievement, but we can never have a better world until we have better men. Men who can willingly expend themselves at work and production. The law of nature is to throw out the drones. Present day public thinking tends to less work and more play, to let Government provide for everything. To think that the Government can provide them for all alike, including the drones) is a modern fallacy which will not work. SAMOHT YENEWS.

Dogs And Gardens

I would like to say to C. L. Chapin, whose letter attempting to condone the brutality of one Thomas Ross in setting two steel traps in his victory garden and catching therein a German shepherd dog, on the ground that the dog was doing damage to Ross' garden, appeared some days ago in this column, that such cruelty can never be justified; it is absolutely inexcusable.

It is quite true that dogs should not be allowed to run at large and come into other people's gardens but that they do is no excuse for torturing them in such a fiendish device as a steel trap. The dog was lured into the trap by a piece of meat suspended between two stakes. As seen in a photograph taken at the scene it was a large and juicy steak that might well tempt any dog in these days of meat rationing. A perfectly innocent dog that had never been in the garden would have been enticed by it. J. E. DAVIS.

Ad Absurdum

The title "Ad Absurdum," over a recent editorial, while it does not and cannot apply to the proper action of the Kerr Committee of the House, certainly does to the editorial and those responsible for it. It not only is utterly misleading, possibly purposely so, but patently is wanting in logic.

Your contention that the assailed amendment is "patently unconstitutional" does not make it so. It, you will admit, is the constitutional duty of Congress to appropriate for salaries of public servants. They can, and do, at times refuse to authorize salaries for "unnecessary" public servants, therefore can properly refuse to appropriate for the few they find "unfit" to fill public positions. At that it is for the courts and not for an omniscient editorial writer to decide the question of constitutionality.

The Post rather carelessly denounces the intransigence of a congressional committee but carefully refrains from affixing such opprobrious term to certain bullheaded heads of departments. If "thousands of Government employes" are denied their earned salaries, that clearly is not due to Congress exercising its proper functions but to the mulelike insistence of certain appointed little czars that "unfit" officials be retained and lavishly rewarded from the national treasury.

Workers' Shopping

Keeping stores open just one night each week is a "drop in the bucket." To accommodate several hundred thousand warworkers in approximately three hours of shopping, one night a week, is an impossible task and means that after battling with the crowds, running here and there, the usual result is "nothing" in the way of accomplishment. The girls go home weary and disgruntled because in most instances they did not have enough time to shop around for what they wanted.

The answer to this problem is to have the stores in Washington agree to keep one store open each night of the week. That would make it easier on everyone concerned and would solve the problem of the warworkers as far as their shopping is concerned. Any woman knows that when she really has shopping to do, three hours is not enough, especially when the shopping is done after work, when one's vitality is at a low ebb.

Why don't the stores consider this plan?

The Once Over

Imaginary Interviews: Benito and Adolf in July

Benito—Well, what do you advise me to do now?

Adolf—I have nothing to suggest at the moment.

Benito—This is a elluva time to reach that decision. You were plenty free with suggestions in the past.

Adolf—Things have changed since then.

Benito—You're telling me!

* * * *

Adolf—What makes you so irritable and nervous. We haven't lost MY war yet.

Benito—You used to call it OUR war.

Adolf—Pull yourself together and look like a Roman emperor!

Benito—I keep pulling myself together but I don't get any results.

Adolf—You don't even talk like a Caesar any more.

Benito—Every time I talk like Caesar these days I imagine I hear laughter.

Adolf—What makes you think it imagination?

* * * *

Benito—Oh, woe is I!

Adolf—Be grammatical. It's Oh, woe is me!

Benito—Let's split the difference and just say, Oh, woe is US!

* * * *

Adolf—Looking at you today I can't reconcile you with the Mussolini you were when I first met you.

Benito—Neither can I!

Adolf—You seem to have shrunk.

Benito—If you think you look bigger you're nuts.

* * * *

Adolf—I never knew a man could look so much like a Roman conqueror one minute and a singer midget the next.

Benito—Have patience! You'll find out!

Adolf—What's this I hear about you wanting peace. You can't quit. You're in up to your neck.

Benito—Why don't you make it "OUR" neck?

Adolf—One neck will be enough.

Benito—Not from what I hear!

* * * *

Adolf—Must I keep asking you to stop shaking?

Benito—I'm afraid you must. If what's happening to me was happening to you, you'd shake.

Adolf—I think not. I can take it better.

Benito—You'll get your chance to prove that.

Adolf (as Benito turns to leave)—Where are you going now?

Benito—I can't even tell you approximately!

* * * *

Adolf—Come, come, things can't be as bad as you think.

Benito—They can be as bad as we BOTH think.

* * * *

Adolf—You're a pessimist. Every cloud has a silver lining.

Benito—Not any more. Every cloud I see has 100 bombers and a fighter escort.

* * * *

Adolf—Have some sense. Try to be like me.

Benito—It's trying to be like you that made me what I am today.

Adolf—Whenever things look bad, think of Napoleon.

Benito—You can have Napoleon. I'll take his horse.

Housing Shortage

On page B-1 of yesterday's Post I noticed a heading entitled "Homes Appeal Made to Assist New Workers."

Frankly I don't think there is a shortage of homes or rooms for the incoming warworkers. I know of several rooms, nice ones, clean and nicely furnished in Arlington that have been for rent for weeks. In fact, I have a nicely furnished, comfortable room, near bath, which bath must be shared with the owner, a lady. This room has been for rent most of the time for nearly a year. I have advertised in the papers—Post and Star, and got practically no inquiries. Have advertised my room through the Arlington Housing Board and also registered with the War Housing Center. These two boards don't send anyone out to see the room nor have they ever inquired about its being rented at any time.

With my experience in renting rooms I think such an appeal as was in The Post yesterday is quite unnecessary and I shall rearrange my home as it was before the war and enjoy the comfort of plenty of room for myself. Two people in a seven-room house should be plenty comfortable. A READER.

Appetites

This is in reference to the letter signed "A Civilian Warworker," which was published in your column under date of June 15, 1943.

We consider ourselves girls of normal appetite. Our experience has shown that an allowance of $1.50 a day for food would leave us not only hungry but emaciated.

Where is this "cleanest cafeteria" and how much would they charge for a breakfast consisting of: Fruit juice, cereal with half and half, one egg, one strip bacon, two slices of toast, coffee. That's what we eat every morning. An average breakfast is 35 cents, not 15 cents.

We are not WAVES—but our appetites are normal, too.

Judicial Impasse

By Ernest K. Lindley

Supreme Court Quorum Bill

ONE OF the current mysteries about Congress is why the Senate Judiciary Committee has not reported favorably the Supreme Court quorum bill. This bill simply changes the quorum for the Supreme Court from six to five justices. Five is the normal, or common law, quorum for a body of nine members.

LINDLEY

The need for the change is plain and urgent: the Supreme Court is now unable to pass upon two important cases because it lacks a qualified quorum. That is, more than three of the members of the court have disqualified themselves from taking part in each case.

The first of these is the anti-trust suit against the Aluminum Co. of America, begun in 1937. This is the case perhaps best remembered by the lay public as giving rise to a trial which lasted 356 days and a decision which its author, in the Southern District Court of New York, required 10 days to read aloud. He dismissed the Government's suit. Under the Expediting Act, the Department of Justice appealed directly to the Supreme Court. There Chief Justice Stone and Associate Justices Reed, Murphy and Jackson disqualified themselves—the latter three having had part, as Attorney General or Solicitor General, in the prosecution of the case.

The second case, North American Co. vs. SEC, the test case on the validity of the "death sentence" provision of the Public Utility Holding Company Act. The SEC ordered the holding company to divest itself of all utility properties outside the St. Louis area. The company appealed to the Circuit Court of Appeals, which sustained the SEC.

THE COMPANY now has petitioned the Supreme Court for a writ of certiorari. Again four justices feel themselves disqualified: Associate Justices Reed and Jackson, each because he argued the constitutionality of the act as Solicitor-General, Associate Justice Douglas, because he was formerly chairman of the SEC, and Chief Justice Stone.

So in two major cases, the Supreme Court is unable to perform its appointed duties. In one case, the Government, in the other a private company, is unable to obtain a review by the highest judicial body. Under the present law making six a quorum, the judicial channel is blocked until at least one new member is appointed to the court—and even then he may have a reason for disqualifying himself in one or both of these cases.

The obvious remedy is to reduce the quorum from six to five, a simple majority of the Supreme Court. That is what Attorney General Biddle and Solicitor General Fahy have asked Congress to do. Chief Justice Stone and other authorities on judicial practice and the history of the Supreme Court have testified for the bill.

The present provision, making six a quorum, appears to have been a sheer historical accident. Charles Warren, historian of the Supreme Court, has traced the lineage of the quorum. From 1789 to 1869, a quorum was always a simple majority of the court. The size of the court changed several times, but the quorum rule did not.

The quorum was raised to six in 1863 when the court was enlarged to a membership of ten. This was in accord with the long-standing practice that a simple majority should be a quorum. But three years later, when a vacancy occurred, Congress decided to cut down the size of the court again as rapidly as vacancies should occur. One purpose, if not the only one, was to prevent President Andrew Johnson from making nominations to fill existing or future vacancies.

BY THE Act of 1866 the court was to be allowed to shrink, by death or resignation, until it had reached a membership of seven, of which four were to be a quorum. But the act neglected to fix the size of the quorum while the court was undergoing its shrinkage from ten to seven members. So until the court got down to seven members, the old quorum provision in the Act of 1863—six—still stood.

Before the court had shrunk to seven, Congress changed its size again. The act of 1869 restored its old membership of nine. But instead of restoring the old quorum for a court of nine—five—it retained the quorum for a court of 10 stipulated in the act of 1863.

Mr. Warren is of the opinion that the quorum clause was simply copied from the act of 1863 without any consideration of the fact that while six was a majority of 10 it was more than a majority of nine. In short, he believes it was an historical accident.

Until now the historical accident has made no difference, since the court has been able to get a quorum of six. Now, owing chiefly to the large number of seats recently filled by promotion of an Attorney General or Solicitor General or, in Mr. Douglas' case, the chairman of the quasi-judicial SEC, several justices frequently disqualify themselves.

In each of the two highly important cases cited above the number of disqualifications has reached four.

No weighty argument has been advanced for requiring six, instead of five, to be a quorum. The historical accident can be so quickly and safely corrected that one wonders why Congress hesitates.

Partial Text of Wallace's Accusations Against Jesse Jones and RFC

Following is a partial text of the statement of Vice President Wallace to the Senate Appropriations Committee accusing Secretary of Commerce Jones of "obstructionist tactics" in relation to Wallace's Board of Economic Warfare:

On June 4, 1943, the chairman of this committee discussed the work of the board on the floor of the Senate. His statement contained certain inaccuracies for which the Senator was not responsible. He was basing his comments on testimony which he said Mr. Jesse Jones had given before the joint committee on the reduction of non-essential Federal expenditures.

I realize that when the distinguished Senator from Tennessee made his remarks on the floor of the Senate he felt he had been correctly informed by the Secretary of Commerce. The actual facts are at variance with the information given the Senator, however, and I feel compelled to state the correct information for the record.

The board has never obtained money for administrative purposes from the Reconstruction Finance Corp., nor has the board ever directed Mr. Jesse Jones or any Reconstruction Finance Corp. subsidiary to furnish money to pay the salaries of any of the board's employes or any of its administrative expenses. All such salaries and expenses are paid from funds appropriated by the Congress to the Board of Economic Warfare.

Corrections Not Enough

It is not enough to make these corrections. The false impression which Mr. Jones created before the Byrd committee is similar to the impression he created in early December before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee. It is time to prevent further harmful misrepresentations of this nature.

On April 13, 1942, the President vested in the Board of Economic Warfare complete control of all public purchase import operations. Mr. Jones has never been willing to accept that fact. He has instead done much to harass the administrative employes of the board in their single-minded effort to help shorten this war by securing adequate stocks of strategic materials.

The President's order of April 13, 1942, provided for "clear leadership" in programing the import of strategic materials. As a consequence of Mr. Jones' reluctance to accept that leadership there has been too much "destructive, wasteful feuding." The Board of Economic Warfare has tried for over a year now to do its job in spite of the obstructionist tactics Mr. Jones has employed from time to time.

The Congress showed great foresight, very early, in authorizing Government stockpiling of strategic materials by passing legislation and by making funds available for this purpose way back in 1939 and 1940. In June of 1939, the Secretary of the Treasury was empowered to purchase and stockpile strategic materials as directed by the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy. This program was comparatively small. Then in the summer of 1940, the Congress made substantial funds available to the Reconstruction Finance Corp. for carrying out a program for purchasing and stockpiling all critical and strategic materials.

From the summer of 1940 until well past December 7, 1941, the Reconstruction Finance Corp. failed dismally, so far as the import field was concerned, to build the Government stockpiles authorized and directed by the Congress nearly 18 months before Pearl Harbor.

During this period, of course, private purchasing of imports continued on a somewhat increased scale due to better business, and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation entered into various underwriting agreements with some countries under which we agreed to take surpluses if they were not bought privately. This seems to us to have been a timid, business-as-usual procedure; at least it was a far cry from the aggressive Government stockpile which the Congress directed and authorized so that this Nation might have a margin of security in its imported raw materials inventories.

On December 8, 1942, Mr. Perkins and I testified before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee and gave partial evidence of the delays to our work for which we felt Mr. Jones was responsible. We gave testimony on his failure to meet the Office of Production Management's directives to stockpile industrial diamonds and block mica. We gave evidence on the extent to which he had delayed the foreign rubber program and cited specifically his stalling in the gathering of wild rubber in South America and the planting of rubber plantations in Africa and in the planting of cryptostegia for natural rubber in the Caribbean.

Cites Months of Delays

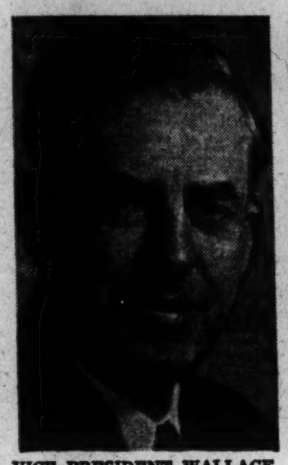
We also presented evidence on the months of delay in starting a preclusive buying program in European neutral countries to prevent strategic materials from going to the Axis. These delays took place before Pearl Harbor and extended beyond Pearl Harbor right up to the 13th of April, 1942, at which time the President transferred import powers from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and its subsidiaries to the Board of Economic Warfare.

The fats and oils group includes approximately 25 different products, ranging all the way from sunflower seeds to ouricury nuts and whale oil. These products are critically needed in the war effort for a variety of industrial uses as well as for human consumption.

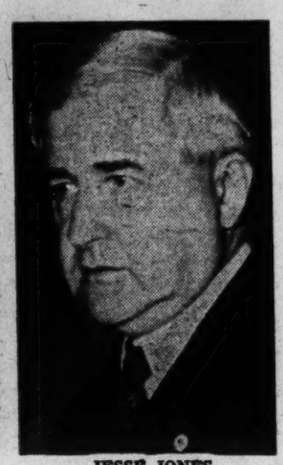
There is one large group of edible oils, needed for Army, Navy, lend-lease and civilian uses.

One would think, in view of the critical military urgency of going out to get these imported raw materials, that Mr. Jones would have moved aggressively to build Government stockpiles of these fats and oils, and yet here are the facts:

In October, 1941, the Office of Production Management recommended the purchase by the Reconstruction Finance Corp. of approximately 30,000 long tons of various types of fats and oils from foreign sources. In November this total was increased to 208,571 long tons; in January, 1942, to 308,571 tons; in February to 317,499 tons. (The total has, since April 13, 1942, been increased much beyond this last figure.)



VICE PRESIDENT WALLACE



JESSE JONES

As of April 13, 1942, the Reconstruction Finance Corp. had purchased (according to the best information we have) only 2200 long tons (rape-seed oil); none had arrived in this country. The purchases were all spot; no development program had been even devised. There may be a minor error in this particular figure due to the inadequate commodity accounting records of the Reconstruction Finance Corp., but we believe the figure to be substantially accurate. For all practical purposes, however, virtually nothing was done by Mr. Jones to build a Government stockpile of fats and oils even after Pearl Harbor, when the Japs were conquering the Far East, from which we had been getting tremendous supplies.

The Board of Economic Warfare, shortly after it was given its responsibility in the import field, on April 13, 1942, shifted the financing of the fats and oils program to the Commodity Credit Corp., but retained general administration of it.

As of December 31 1942:

1. Two hundred and seventy-six thousand, six hundred and twenty-two tons of foreign fats and oils have been bought on a spot purchase basis.

2. The Board of Economic Warfare had negotiated and the Commodity Credit Corp. had entered into development and long-term purchase contracts calling for the delivery of 500,000 tons. Several additional development contracts beyond this total were subsequently renegotiated.

As to Flax Fiber

I now want to discuss flax fiber which is used for parachute webbing, and which is also used as industrial thread for high-tension purposes.

On October 27, 1941, the Office of Production Management recommended the purchase by the Reconstruction Finance Corp of 6500 tons of flax.

As of April 13, 1942, the day the President transferred import powers from the Reconstruction Finance Corp. to the Board of Economic Warfare, no purchases had been made.

As of December 31, 1942, contracts had been made for approximately 8000 tons annually from Canada, Peru and Egypt under Board of Economic Warfare directives.

Jute is another commodity which must be imported from abroad. On September 5, 1941, the Office of Production Management had directed the purchase of 80,000 long tons of jute, nearly all of which comes from India.

As of April 13, 1942, over four months after Pearl Harbor, the Reconstruction Finance Corp. had done practically nothing to fulfill this important directive, having bought only 1210 long tons, although the situation in India during this period was highly uncertain.

Jute Purchase Made

As of December 31, 1942, the Board of Economic Warfare had arranged for the purchase of the full 80,000 long tons, plus another 8000 long tons to cover a supplementary directive. Moreover, most of this jute was shipped from Indian ports by the end of 1942.

The Board of Economic Warfare's insistence on maintaining in Calcutta, India, a special agent with a full business background in this industry, has been an important factor in the establishment of this performance record.

I now desire to discuss zirconium which is so important in the manufacture of flares, signals, tracer ammunition, and blasting caps.

On September 5, 1941, Office of Production Management recommended to the Reconstruction Finance Corp. the purchase of "reasonable amounts" of zirconium from Brazil.

As of April 13, 1942, the day on which the President transferred import powers from the Reconstruction Finance Corp. to the Board of Economic Warfare, no purchase contracts had been made under the Office of Production Management directive.

As of December 31, 1942, contracts had been made for the purchase from foreign sources of 21,575 short tons of zirconium ores, of which 16,500 short tons were from Brazil. This was done under Board of Economic Warfare directives.

For Military Security

As previously indicated, I have deliberately given figures of the Board of Economic Warfare accomplishments through December 31, 1942, only, for the purposes of military security. The progress in the foreign field for the first six months of 1943 is even more encouraging, considering the difficulties we have faced, than it was during the last six months of 1942. As an overall figure for this committee to bear in mind, I should like to point out that total purchases of imported raw materials subject to Board of Economic Warfare directives will run roughly a billion and one-half dollars for the 1943 fiscal year and slightly over two billion dollars for the fiscal year of 1944. Over 200 critically needed strategic materials will be included in these public purchase programs. Contracts will be made in over 30 foreign countries.

Although the President, on April 13, 1942, transferred full control over the programing of imported strategic materials from the Reconstruction Finance Corp. to the Board of Economic Welfare, which operates under broad directives received from the War Production Board, Mr. Jones has never fully accepted that authority. He and his personnel down the line have thrown a great many obstacles in the way of our exercise of the powers given us to carry out our wartime assignments. Some of these obstructionist tactics have been minor and annoying and some have been of major consequence in this gigantic job of waging total war. I now desire to inform this committee and the Congress, and the public at large about some of these delays, which have not yet seen the light of day.

Attacked on Quinine

First of all I desire to discuss quinine. Brig. Gen. H. C. Minton has informed us that "antimalarial preparations derived from cinchona are of course essential to adequate control and treatment of malaria in conjunction with the accepted synthetic antimalarials."

Far East cinchona bark contains 7 to 10 per cent quinine sulphate, Latin America bark about 2 per cent.

On April 14, 1942, General MacArthur wired Washington that two million seeds of a high grade strain had been brought out of the Philippines (on one of the last planes leaving for Australia); adding that they must be planted without delay."

I am sorry to have to inform this committee that Jesse Jones and Will Clayton stalled for months on this program.

Lieut. Col. Arthur F. Fischer, who brought those seeds from the Philippines to the United States, came to the Board of Economic Warfare with his proposal—to plant the seeds in Costa Rica—on August 24, 1942. Within three weeks the Board of Economic Warfare had worked out a detailed plan and submitted it to the other interested agencies. Reconstruction Finance Corp. representatives at first acquiesced in the proposal when it was discussed with them on September 11 and 29. Undersecretary of War Patterson approved it formally on October 7, 1942.

Then, on October 10, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation notified the Board of Economic Warfare that "the matter requires further consideration." These "considerations" continued for four months.

Called Postwar Planning

Mr. Jones said our proposal was postwar planning because of the time it takes for cinchona trees to come to full maturity for profitable stripping. The Fischer trees couldn't be harvested for 2½ years at the earliest, normally, seven years pass before stripping of bark begins.

During 1941 Mr. Jones may have felt that this would be a short war in which we wouldn't become involved; in any event he did not buy quinine during that period in adequate amounts for Government stockpiles; during 1942 he acted as though the war might be over by 1944 if we can take his attitude toward this quinine project as a criterion.

It was not until January, 1943, that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation finally announced that it would spend some money for this quinine project. For all the power the President has given the Board of Economic Warfare over imports, we are helpless when Jesse Jones, as our banker, refuses to sign checks in accordance with our directives.

Project Now Underway

Colonel Fischer is now in Costa Rica and the quinine project is underway . . . It will be 1946 before quinine from the seeds brought out of the Philippines by Colonel Fischer can be put to work fighting malaria in the tropics. Even so, our armed forces may need it desperately by that time if they are still fighting in the malarial regions of the Southwest Pacific.

We and the Army would be quite willing to strip a greater part of the young trees at the end of 2½ years if we have to do so to get quinine for our soldiers, even though the Reconstruction Finance Corp. may lose a little money through not waiting seven years to let the trees mature for the most profitable period of stripping.

It seems to me that we could end this wrangling and improve the Administration efficiency so essential to winning this war if program money were appropriated directly to the Board of Economic Warfare for its purchases and development of all imported strategic materials, just as money is now appropriated directly to us for administrative expenses in connection with our imports work.

Engle Blames Administration For Excess Wages and Profits

Reporting to the House after a personal inspection of 47 war plants, Representative Engle (Republican) of Michigan declared yesterday that "excess wages and profits were being encouraged by Administration policies.

He cited as examples of high wages the payment of $55.80 weekly to girls "learning to mend shoes which are worn by men in the service receiving only $50 a month," and factory machine-gun assemblers who were paid more in some cases than top-ranking Army officers.

Engle made the inspection as a member of the House Appropriations Subcommittee Handling Army Expenditures.

Encourages Waste

He blamed "the Administration" for "its policy of measuring the progress of war production by the sums expended," and said "this not only discourages economy but actually encourages waste."

"We should measure the progress by telling the public frankly how many planes, how many tanks, how many guns, and how much of the various types we are making," he declared.

"Fear of having the enemy know these facts is no longer a reason for not doing so."

Up to $8740 Year

Engle said machine-gun assemblers in some of the factories he visited received from $4700 to $8740 per year, while "soldiers and sailors have to learn not only how to take down and assemble these same machine guns, blindfolded, but have to learn to operate them, and some get as little as $50 a month."

"When they come back they will have to pay an income tax the rest of their lives to pay back the money we borrowed so these factory machine-gun assemblers can receive high wages," he commented.

Engle said a check of payroll records showed that in many cases "farmer boys are making more money in a factory in one year "than the value of the farms their fathers are trying to clear of mortgages."

Roosevelt Asked To Halt FHA on Arundel Project

Annapolis, Md., June 29 (AP).—In a formal letter to President Roosevelt today, Senator Wilbur R. Dulin (Democrat) of Anne Arundel asked the Nation's Chief Executive to intercede for the people of the county with the Federal Housing Authority in opposnig construction of 550 housing units for Negro warworkers at Patapsco Park in Anne Arundle County.

Dulin requested that the President "ask the Housing Authority to make a further examination of the proposed project."

"Inadequate transportation facilities and an inadequate water supply" were cited by Dulin as reasons why the people of Anne Arundel County do not want these homes built.

Eichelberger Tells New Officers Japs Fight Fearlessly

Allied Headquarters in Australia, June 29 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. Robert Eichelberger, speaking today before 400 American graduates of an officers training school, warned them not to take the Japanese lightly because, he said, the Japanese are more implacable enemies than either the Germans or Italians.

"It will be a long time before you hear of the surrender of 100,000 Japs as you have about German and Italian troops," Eichelberger told the young officers after they had taken the graduation oath en masse at a camp in Australia.

"The enemy you are going to meet is one you can count on fighting to the last. You have read about soldiers in Allied armies accounting for hundreds of Japs, but I know one case where a lone Jap routed out of a foxhole was found to have killed 32 Allied soldiers before he lost his life."

James Roosevelt Among 166 Marine Officers Promoted

Marine Corps Headquarters announced yesterday that James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, has been given the rating of lieutenant colonel in the Marines' General Service.

Colonel Roosevelt, who distinguished himself in action with a Marine raider unit in the South Pacific, was among 166 Marine Corps officers promoted.

His previous rating, that of lieutenant colonel only in the status of an officer in the raider forces, was revoked, effective June 1, and the same rating awarded him for general service.

Newcomers and Oldsters Mingled in 'Ox-Bow' Cast

WHEN "THE OX-BOW INCIDENT," starring Henry Fonda, opens on the screen at Loew's Capitol tomorrow, the cast should hold as much interest for the veteran screen-gazers as for the youngsters of the present generation whose familiarity with the cinema is limited strictly to today's business.

HENRY FONDA

For the come-latelies to the celluloid audience, there will be excellent performances by Dana Andrews and William Eythe and a brief but picturesque "flash" by Mary Beth Hughes, all three presumably on their way to the heights.

The old-timers will have their nostalgia reasonably whipped up by the presence in important roles of such as Harry Davenport, Paul Hurst, Victor Kilian and Francis Ford. Many of them, no doubt, will be able to recall that the 77-year-old Harry Davenport was one of the stage's most distinguished actors long before he assumed a place of like prominence on the screen; that Paul Hurst was the Union soldier, shot in the face as he mounted the stairs by Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind," and that Victor Kilian has been a "heavy" before the cameras since a time when the memory of man runneth not to the contrary.

As for Francis Ford, now well into his 60s, he, too, was a legitimate actor of standing away back there before he began writing and directing one-reelers and serials for Edison and Vitagraph, when the motion picture industry was just breaking its shell. He later graduated to feature productions and long has been one of the films' better character actors.

Sort of takes you back a bit.

Between these two extremes, in addition to Mr. Fonda, yesterday's preview of one of Twentieth Century-Fox's starker subjects, turned up such old reliables as Jane Darwell, Anthony Quinn—who is by way of being Cecil B. De Mille's son-in-law—Matt Briggs, Frank Conroy, Marc Lawrence, George Meeker, Chris-Pin Martin and Washington's own Almira Sessions, who made her stage debut as a distinctly frightened youngster some 30-odd years ago with the Aborn Light Opera Company, at the National Theater. It is a pretty grim business they are all involved in here, as will come out when review-time comes around.

And speaking of Mary Beth Hughes, the Rose Mapen of "The Ox-Bow Incident," I note in Jessie Pulcipher's current issue of "Preview" that she will be coming along to the stage of the Capitol to headline the bill in person the week of July 29. A very engaging young woman.

A Notable Revival

It is being bruited about that the revival, beginning Monday night, July 5, of Victoria Kuhn's play, "The King Is Dead," at Catholic University, already is attracting the attention of both Broadway and Hollywood scouts. There is nothing surprising in this, if the scouts have any mind to preserve their reputation for sagacity.

When given its premiere in the University Theater last March, "The King Is Dead" elicited the unqualified enthusiasm of the local critics and public. It was a remarkably able "first play." Now, upon the basis of suggestions by the critical fraternity and observant members of the audience, certain revisions have been made in the script and the original cast, virtually intact, is in the final stages of rehearsal, with Dick Sykes and Sara Ann Moorman again in the leads.

Once again the play, based on an original conception of what might have happened to Richard III, is being directed by Walter Kerr and Dr. Josephine McGarry Callan, with unusually effective settings and lighting by Ralph Brown.

It deserves to be awaited with equal eagerness by those who have never seen it and those who will wish to again. The best thing Father Hartke's Speech and Drama Department ever has turned out, in the view of this observation post.

It seems there was a catch in it—unintentional and unpredictable, of course. However, as it turns out, Mae Murray will not be playing the role of Gay Wellington, the actress, when Fred Stone opens at the National next Tuesday night in "You Can't Take It With You." It will be Peggy Fenn you will see in the part. No newcomer to the assignment, Miss Fenn. She played it with Mr. Stone in both the Detroit and Chicago runs of the Kaufman-Hart comedy, as well as on the road. And what became of Miss Murray? Deponent sayeth not.

Learn-One-Thing-Each-Day Note

That strange stuff yesterday afternoon was rain.

An Old Favorite and Two New Stars

RANDOLPH SCOTT AND ELLA RAINES as the corvette commander and the romantic interest, respectively, in Universal's forthcoming "Corvettes in Action." But a third seagoing star, who could sleep in a hammock and hold a pipe in his mouth, was needed, so they cast "Skipper" in that part. Miss Raines, incidentally, is looked upon by Producer Howard Hawks as his "find of the year."

HEDDA HOPPER

Speaking of Backlogs

Hollywood, Calif., June 29.—Warners, which has been hitting the jackpot with all their pictures—except "Mission to Moscow"—has ready a backlog of films that would choke a horse. "Constant Nymph," "Watch on the Rhine," "Desert Song," "Arsenic and Old Lace," all made a year ago, are just waiting for a theater in which they can be put. Then there's "Thank Your Lucky Stars," "Old Acquaintance," "Princess O'Rourke," and "Devotion." . . . You'd wonder why a studio as smart as Warners could be so stupid about Marcia Winn from The Chicago Tribune, who would like to interview Jack Warner, or anybody else in authority, over there. But they haven't had the courtesy to return her telephone call. Wonder what it is they have to hide? Miss Winn says the only thing that troubles her about Hollywood, and this is purely incidental, is that they misspell her name—it's Winn. And what do you bet she will!

VICTOR MOORE

Patiently Waiting

Agnes Moorehead, who gave a superb performance in "The Magnificent Ambersons," has two long-term contracts being dangled in front of her face. But she will wait for the right role. When she gets it, she'll be a top star. . . . A new star was born for the Marcal Theater where the marquee billing is "Marilyn Harris, our cashier, in 'Henry Aldrich Gets Glamour.'" . . . Funny sight on the boulevard. Victor Moore, old enough to know better, and his 18-year-old sweetie pie window shopping. Then she went alone to Nancy's, where she bought a new summer wardrobe. . . . At a cocktail party I ran smack into Irvin S. Cobb, who greeted me affectionately with, "How's my favorite cobra columnist?"

Why Not?

Walt Disney has a request from Britain which has nothing to do with lend-lease. They're begging for another chance to see "Snow White" during the Christmas holidays. That request also comes from our men in service all over the globe. I personally don't know why he doesn't make "Snow White" an annual event. . . . A deal is cookin' for Joan Crawford to switch from Metro, where she's been ever since she came to pictures, over to Warners to stay permanently. . . . Arthuh Murray said he attended a wedding that was so quiet, only the press agents of both families were present. . . . Lubitsch's latest is his best in ages, 'tis said. It's his autobiography. . . . Mrs. Raymond Hitchcock is here visiting her father, who is quite ill. . . . When Margaret Webster, who produced "Othello" with Paul Robeson, was here visiting her mother, Dame May Whitty, David Selznick offered her a director's job. She's scared of the place.

New Attractions Offer Variety Of Amusements for New Week

After the current dark week, the National Theater presents a revival of "You Can't Take It With You," the famous comedy of zany domesticity, with Fred Stone in the leading role of Grandpa Vanderhof. With him will be three members of the Chicago company which played there for 49 weeks five years ago—Daisy Atherton, Bobbe Arnst and Cynthia Blake. Others include Hale Norcross, Ainsworth Arnold, Elizabeth Challingsworth, Donald Keyes, Peggy Fenn and Robert Bernard. Matinees, as usual, on Wednesday and Saturday. Opens Tuesday.

Willard Roof

Cross Roads

"ARSENIC AND OLD LACE." Joseph Kesselring's comedy of mass murder in the name of sweet charity begins the seventh summer season at the Cross Roads. Catharine Ryan, W. Walter Timmis and Eleanor Morgan Timmis will be seen in major roles. The play runs through Saturday and will be repeated Wednesday through Saturday of next week. Opens tonight.

Earle

"BACKGROUND TO DANGER." Drama of espionage and counter-espionage in Turkey, with George Raft, as a G-man, Peter Lorre and Brenda Marshall, as Russian agents, and Sydney Greenstreet as the head of the Nazi crew. On stage are Nash and Evans, "Two Wrangling Dudes;" Leonard Sues, "A Young Man With a Horn," and the Juveleys with a balancing act. Also the Roxyettes. Opens Friday.

Capitol

RKO-Keith's

"FOREVER AND A DAY." Four score star names head the cast of a film which tells, in the manner of "Cavalcade," the story of an English family from the Napoleonic wars to 1941 air raids. Herbert Marshall, Billy Bevan, C. Aubrey Smith, Ray Milland, Claude Rains, Ian Hunter, Eric Blore and Buster Keaton are among those on the cast list. Opens Thursday.

Palace

"STAGE DOOR CANTEEN." Forty-eight stars of stage and screen offer a super revue against a background of a love story involving Cheryl Walker, William Terry, Marjorie Riordan and Lon McCallister. Tallulah Bankhead, Katharine Cornell, Ray Bolger, Charlie McCarthy and Edgar Bergen, Georgie Jessel, Ed Wynn and Gypsy Rose Lee are a few of the stars involved. Held over.

Metropolitan

"ACTION IN THE NORTH ATLANTIC" begins a third downtown week. Telling excitingly of the exploits of the Merchant Marine, it has a cast of dependables, including Humphrey Bogart, Raymond Massey, Alan Hale, Julie Bishop and Ruth Gordon. Opens Friday.

Columbia

"CRASH DIVE" begins a third downtown week. The saga of submarine warfare stars Tyrone Power and Anne Baxter, with Dana Andrews Dame May Whitty and James Gleason. Made in technicolor. Opens Thursday.

Little

"BLOSSOMS IN THE DUST," Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon in an emotional story of a child welfare crusader. Marsha Hunt, Fay Holden, Felix Bressart and more than 400 babies are included in the cast. Opens today.

Pix

"MR. DEEDS GOES TO TOWN," first in a series of revivals of Frank Capra pictures, begins a week's run. Starring Jean Arthur and Gary Cooper, the film tells the story of a greeting card verse-writer who inherits a fortune he doesn't want. Opens today.

Trans-Lux

"RING BATTLES OF BARNEY ROSS," a compilation of films of the fighter, now famed for other battles, made especially for the Trans-Lux. Other shorts on the bill will be "Wartown," a Victory film; "Merchant Convoy," "Popular Science" and "Pluto and the Armadillo," a cartoon. Opens Friday.

Glen Echo Park

AMUSEMENT RESORT. Joan Ritter is songstress with the Paul Kain Orchestra which plays week-nightly for dancers in the ballroom. Numerous other diversions include nine thrill rides and the Crystal Pools. Cars marked No. 20 take you to the main entrance. Admission free.

Horses Harder to Find Than Actors

Hollywood.—Horsepower problems are beginning to equal the manpower crisis for Warner Bros.' "Saratoga Trunk" company. Director Sam Wood is using 165 human extra players, and 70 horses for scenes showing Ingrid Bergman's arrival at Saratoga Springs. It was easy to get the 165 humans. It took a week to round up the 70 horses.

Plays Kindly Killer

CATHERINE RYAN, among the foremost of the resident actresses, who appears in the role of Abby Brewster, who murders for sweet charity's sake, in "Arsenic and Old Lace," first offering of the season at the Cross Roads Theater.

Texas Player

Lita Ward, who plays the feminine lead in "Aerial Gunnery," most of which was filmed at the Harlengen, Tex., Army Gunnery School, came to Hollywood from her home town, Fort Worth, Tex., then went back to the Lone Star State to play her first film role in the picture.

Gossip From Gotham

New York, June 29.

Harry Bennett, the personnel director and vice president of the Ford Co., has had one maid working for his family for many years. Recently she notified him that she was quitting—this, after he had presented her with a new Ford car. "But why?" Bennett asked her . . . "I'm getting a job in defense work," the maid replied . . . "Where?" asked Bennett . . . "Near here," said the maid . . . "With what company?" Bennett persisted . . . "Out at Willow Run," said the maid . . . "Over my dead body," said the personnel director of Willow Run . . . Mr. Bennett is still alive, but his maid now works at Ford's Willow Run plant in Michigan.

JOSEPH E. DAVIES

Last December, when Henderson resigned as head of OPA, the dollar value of all stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange was 38 billion 800 million. At the end of May their value was 48 billion 400 million . . . The scholarship committee of the Howard Club of Long Island is selecting a high school graduate living in Brooklyn, Queens, Nassau or Suffolk, interested in a radio career. The youngster will be given free tuition at Harvard, paid for by the H. V. Kaltenborn Endowment . . . When Joseph Davies completes his lecture tour, he'll write another book, about the five plays written by soldiers and which the President, after seeing them, said should be preserved, will be published by Random House.

Harold Ickes, author of "The Autobiography of a Curmudgeon," dined at the Troika in Washington, read the menu and asked the waiter: "How do you pronounce this Russian dish—'Dratimirovski'?" The aggrieved Russian waiter countered: "How do you pronounce the name of your book?" . . . In the book department at Marshall Field & Co., the volume, "Maidcraft—How To Train and Treat Her," has been replaced by a book written by the same authors, "How To Manage Without a Maid" . . . Carol Dexter, who appeared with Raymond Massey in the London version of "Idiot's Delight," received a much censored letter from her lieutenant husband. He censored it himself.

The Giraud-De Gaulle factions in "France Forever" will thrash it out at the organization's national convention in the Waldorf . . . Carl Post, who played with the Paris Symphony, Brussels Philharmonic and the Manchester Orchestra, found his three-year European contract as a pianist voided by Hitler's march into Austria. He returned here, but couldn't get a symphonic engagement. He, therefore, became a press agent, for Harry James, Jimmy Dorsey and other band leaders. And because of this association, the Blue Network is arranging for Post to play with the Boston Pops Symphony . . . M.-G.-M. has asked Mrs. Danny Kaye to write the score for the new Red Skelton picture.

Last week marked the twenty-ninth anniversary of the assassination of Archduke Franz Ferdinand and his wife, in Sarajevo—which helped launch the last war. The Newe Freie Presse, of Vienna, sent its ace correspondent, Geza Herczeg, to cover the story . . . Herczeg later wrote the memorable musical, "Wunder Bar," and some unproduced shows with Jimmy Walker . . . He went to Hollywood, where he was assigned to write a movie story with a World War background. Herczeg asked the studio's research department for some newspaper clippings of the time. One of the old faded clippings was from the New York Times—a reprint of his copyrighted, by-line story in the Neue Freie Presse.

Thirty actors applied for the Hitler role in the forthcoming film, "The Strange Death of Adolph Hitler." Ludwig Donoth, a European character actor, got the job . . . Milton Berle reports that Charlie Barnett has so many 4-F musicians in his band they must be touring by ambulance . . . John Roeburt's article in the current Mercury, "Luck For Sale"—an expose of superstition rackets—was not compiled without mishap. Roeburt paid $20 to a lady noted for her occult cures, who warned him that he was a victim of an Evil Eye, and then treated him with some "High Conquering Oil." He fell down the stairs, when he left the dark place, and fractured his coccyx.

Ben Hecht read the list of notables who owe money to Paul Flato, the jeweler. "They merely owe money to a jeweler," he said. "I once owed money to a King" . . . When Hecht was a war correspondent, flying over Europe, he and his staff made a forced landing in Saxony. They registered at the inn, but had no cash. "Who's the richest man in the vicinity?" Hecht inquired. He learned of the presence of King Boris of Bulgaria, vacationing nearby. Hecht explained his predicament, and the King loaned him $5000. Hecht was reluctant to return it, later. "I like the idea of having a King, as my creditor." But his antiroyalist Bulgarian aide convinced him he should make a repayment. "When we repay a debt to royalty," he argued, "then we are again their equals."

Jones Takes Over As Food Chief

then join the team."

The nearest he came to touching any controversial part of the food tangle was when he said the farmer's fair return "must be related to other prices in fairness to all." This indicated to some observers he agreed with labor's claims that food prices are higher than can be justified by the wages of workers.

'Eating More and Better'

Judge Jones said America has enough food to assure a healthful diet throughout the war and expressed belief that "too little emphasis has been placed on one important fact—the American people today are eating more and better than ever before."

"As I view the picture,' 'the new administrator said, "several things are needed." He listed them as follows:

1. "A full allotment of materials for new machinery, supplies, repair parts, shelter and storage, as well as processing facilities. This is being done but must be followed through and continued allocation assured."

He said he intended to exericse his authority of appealing to the President if farm machinery needs presented to the War Production Board were not met.

Farm Labor Problem

2. Farm labor has been and will continue to be a problem. There is a shortage of labor in all production lines, but much has been done to keep sufficient help on the farms to produce and harvest out crops. I am confident this problem will be cared for. We must keep in mind, however, that war always creates a manpower shortage.

3. "Production requires seed, feed, fertilizer, and credits. These essentials must be planned for well in advance of planting time.

4. "A fair return must be assured the farmer for his production. This must be related to other prices in fairness to all."

Not many personnel changes were anticipated at WFA as a result of the Jones appointment. Jesse Tapp and William Byrd, two top advisers to Chester C. Davis, who was administrator for three months and three days, resigned yesterday. Paul Porter, in charge of rent control for the Office of Price Administration, was named associate WFA administrator. Porter was offered a WFA job by Davis and was ready to leave OPA when Judge Jones was named.

Porter has recommended to Price Administrator Prentiss Brown that his successor at OPA be Ivan D. Carson, who has been in the rent control section since its origin.

Representative Jenkins (Republican) of Ohio, chairman of the Republican Congressional Food Study Committee, yesterday deplored the divided authority which led to Davis' resignation and demanded that President Roosevelt "take food out of politics' 'to alleviate the "grave food crisis."

He said the food situation must be "divorced completely from the fourth term ambitions of the New Deal high command."

James Patton, president of the Farmer's Union, praised the appointment of Judge Jones as a "promising omen for the working farmers of the country in this period of great crisis" and declared him to be thoroughly familiar with food production and food management problems.

Senator Hawkes (Republican) of New Jersey declared the resignation of Davis was another demonstration of President Roosevelt's lack of understanding about the "difference between men of action and men who only plan."

"Today Mr. Justice Byrnes, Judge Vinson and Judge Marvin Jones hold probably the three most important jobs in the world," he said. "The arsenal of democracy and the home front support of our soldiers depend upon their decisions. Yet, according to their own biographies, none of this powerful trio has ever had previous economic or executive training."

Civilian Pork, Lamb Quotas Increased

Civilian quotas of pork, lamb and mutton slaughtered during the next quarter were upped yesterday by the War Food Administration to 85 per cent of the pork kill and 20 per cent of the lamb and mutton.

The beef and veal quota for civilians will remain at 65 per cent, WFA said, and the change in the other percentages "is not expected to mean any material change in the total quantity of meat available to civilians from commercial slaughter."

Cogswell Says Low-Cost Housing Would Solve Rent Problem

Adequate, low-cost housing in the Nation's Capital would solve the high-rent problem more completely than any other conceivable method, Robert F. Cogswell, administrator of the District Office of Rent Control, said yesterday.

Cogswell declared that the reduction in rents of more than a quarter of a million dollars last year would amount to only "a drop in the bucket" in comparison to what might be realized should such a plan be initiated.

"Landlords of insanitary slum dwellings would be the sole losers should a comprehensive program of low-cost housing be carried out as a part of the war effort," Cogswell asserted, adding:

"They're Frozen There"

"Tenants would leave their present disease-ridden surroundings in droves if there were any place on earth for them to go. They're frozen there until something drastic is done.

"Subject to congestion, vice, discase and crime in one of the world's most beautiful cities, their contribution to winning the war is greatly hampered due to the fact that they have a grim personal war of their own every day of the year—at their own doorstep."

Under the present plan of operations the Rent Control Office is subject to the Emergency Rent Act, setting rent ceilings at rent prices charged in January 1, 1941.

"We have that always before us," Cogswell explained, "and we must abide by it in checking complaints which come into the office continually."

While agreeing that his office was powerless to initiate procedure against either landlord or tenant, Cogswell explained that should the Rent Control Office be vested with power to "regulate and fix rates" it would probably be too much.

Cogswell also believes that prospective renters in Washington, themselves, could aid considerably in keeping prices within prescribed bounds "by asking landlords frankly while shopping for a room, an apartment, or a house if the rental fee asked was on the schedule of the Rent Control Administrator." And if not by reporting it.

Fear of Losing Out

He said:

"While these things must be realized as a part of the plan, it is probable that many people in order to get settled in a temporary room or apartment refrain from asking too many questions for fear of losing out in a place to stay."

Explaining the stand on too much power for the Rent Control Office he said that "the administrator would be subject to all sorts of pressure from both sides should he be given power to regulate and fix rates."

As it is, he believes his office can carry on.

Complaints are received from renters and landlords alike by Robert T. Smith, jr., legal assistant to Cogswell. From 35 to 70 daily are registered and looked into.

"We find in many cases only a moment's time is necessary to inform those registered complaints what they may do under the Rent Control Act," Smith said.

But Cogswell is firm in his stand that the only way to permanently clip the wings of "subletters" and landlords is by providing crowded workers and dwellers in congested areas with adequate and sanitary homes.

He concluded: "The landlords would swiftly be left holding the bag and they wouldn't like it . . . but they would be alone in that."

Save Yourself Disappointment!

The demand for hotel accommodations is great in New York today, as it is in every war-important city. So The Commodore urges you to reserve your room in advance and avoid possible disappointment. If your plans change, won't you please cancel your reservation so that The Commodore can serve others in need of rooms?

Famous Commodore service continues to give you the rest and comfort you need. You'll greatly appreciate, too, its convenience to all the city. Let us know your plans! . . . 2000 large, outside rooms, all with private bath.

THE sage philosophy of Ben Franklin comes home with great force to all of us in these days of self-denial and sacrifice.

It is gratifying to our pride in preparation, that no rationing of electricity, so far, has been required locally or nationally. However, existing conditions of war require a careful, reasonable use of this useful servant in factory, home and shop. Simply because it is dependable and cheap in Washington, is no excuse for wanton and improvident use of "Matchless Service." During the last nineteen years, local electric rates have been regularly decreased, never increased, to consumers! This Company will continue to strive by every effort to maintain the present standards of electric service to meet all reasonable and necessary requirements of its customers. Therefore, in a spirit of national teamwork, may we cooperatively remind you that every carload of fuel, or necessary material, to be used in our local business, that can be saved in transportation facilities or manpower, means extra transportation space and facility to carry absolutely necessary war materials to our fighting forces overseas.

In the hearty accord of war-conscious cooperation, let us remember that coal and the transportation of coal are war materials; hence electricity, too, is a war material, available for your sufficient but careful use in commerce, office and the home. Don't waste it!

Ex-Diva, Now Housekeeper, Hopes to Play Hotel Circuit

One of the first prima donnas to sing grand and light opera in this country is now established in the Hotel Statler as a housekeeper and, although in her early 60's, has definite ideas of doing the hotel circuit before retiring from active life.

Back in the early 1900's, Mrs. Florence Ackley Ley was billed as "one of the youngest prima donnas in the profession and has sung the leading roles in no fewer than 36 operas of the better grade."

Mrs. Ley went on the boards when she was 20 with the Boston Lyrics Company in Cincinnati, and worked two and three shows a day singing grand opera, light opera, in English and oratorios. She sang leading roles in Cavalleria Rusticana, Il Trovatore, Carmen, Martha, Faust, Amorita and sundry other operas, to say nothing of giving song recitals and concerts. One of her shows brought her to Washington shortly after World War I.

She gave her last show in New York about 1924, leaving for Harrisburg, Pa., where for 10 years she directed a community opera company and presented about 1000 pageants. Before leaving the stage she had the chance to say "No, thanks," to a Hollywood offer.

The hotel idea isn't a recent one. "Ever since I first went into a hotel I've wanted to work in one," said Mrs. Ley, who is very youngish. She lives with her daughter, Mrs. Sonya Stephenson, at 4457 Q Street Northwest.

State Refuses To Return Convict

Sacramento, Calif., June 29 (AP).—Twenty-four years of good conduct and a reputation as a model husband outweigh demands of the State of Indiana for the return of an escaped convict, in the opinion of California's Acting Governor Frederick F. Houser.

He refused extradition yesterday in the case of James J. Taylor, nted by Indiana authorities to complete a life sentence on conviction of murdering his 13-year-old stepbrother in May, 1914. Houser declcared Taylor had rehabilitated h'm lf fully.

After serving five years of his term, Taylor walked away from Indiana State Prison in 1919 and started a new life in California under the name of Charles Proctor.

STEPS GOING UP. Not only the parent of a baby girl but a new idea in baby pictures is Charlie Goldsboro, drummer with Davy Crocker in the Dubonnet Room. It involves a flight of 18 steps with baby in a movie short on the first step on her first birthday, on the second step on her second birthday and so on. The pictures have been made for the last two years but with baby's third birthday coming up, Papa Charlie is in a fix. No film! If anyone has a spare roll of celluloid, it would be a grand idea to contribute it to Charlie so that the sequence of his baby's pictures may not be broken. How about it?

On the Fourth of July—think of Glen Echo. Of splashing in its Crystal Pool. Of taking in its numberless carnival attractions. Of dining at its roof restaurant. Of dancing to Paul Kain's music . . . You can get there via trolley car.

LOCAL 802 GOES ROMANCEY. Treasure Island's Rocco Terrone is as enthusiastic as he ever allows himself to be over a new tune, "On the Sands of Time." And listen!—it was written by none other than Jacob Rosenberg, head of New York's famed Local 802 of the Musicians' Union.

INGRATIATING INNOVATIONS. By hook or crook (the latter, we think) Myles Hallett of the Starlight Roof has acquired a new electraharp, is twanging it with much dexterity . . . Vibraphonist Johnny Graham, always on the solid side, is a new star attraction at El Patio . . . Julian Richards, owner of the Old New Orleans, has invented a new tall drink that he succinctly calls the "151"—because it's based on 151 proof rum. J. R. also claims that "151" is an elixir of youth . . . Olmsted's is breaking out a succession of green and sea food salads that are perfection in summer vittles . . . The cold borscht at the Troika is angelically pink, celestially palatable—in fact, it's heaven's own gift to hot weather diners.

FELICIA SHORE, dainty star stepper of the Lotus Revue

Versatile is the word for vibraphonist Connie Howell of the Neptune Room. It's Connie who constructs those dizzy up-do coiffures for herself and accordionist. Nyda Ehrens. Also, it's Connie who designed those green frocks with sports cording that she and Nyda are wearing.

TORRID AND TERRIFIC is the singing and maraca swinging of Eddy Lopez with Carlos Molina's Band at Del Rio. You'll remember him as also being with the Madriguera Orchestra. Besides this he wears a rumba blouse to end all rumba blouses. It must have set him back at least $150.

JOURNEY'S ENDS. When Margaret Lopatin, head lady at Burt's Trans-Lux, recently returned from Virginia Beach she started at 3 p. m., didn't get to Washington until 5:30 a. m. The big gum-up occurred at Richmond what with troop trains and all . . . Virginia Dare, who greets you in Ruby Foo's, loves living out Bethesda way but says she spends almost as much time going back and forth as she does at R. F.'s.

Kavakos Grill is putting on a new "Mid-Summer Revue" that's hotter'n our town's best hot spells. Bouncey Bernie Lit, dressed in Sensible Man style (or less), is the emcee.

EAR TICKLERS. "The Fuddy Duddy Watchmaker," nutsy but nice as sung by Peggy Leonard at Hi Hat . . . Those parodies on hit songs done by George Berg at the Brown Derby. He has a million of 'em—all nifties, all naughty . . . Love seems in bloom when Ray Kyser, of Milton Davis' Rainbow Room Band, sings "It's Always You" . . . Ditto when cute Betsy Jones of Sandy Sandifer's Band in the Metronome Room gives all her vocal cords to "You'll Never Know" . . . Pete Macias' Band in the Lounge Riviera gives every ounce of sprightliness to the refreshing "Oh, What a Beautiful Morning" from "Oklahoma."

LOUISIANA IS FUN. Nestling near the Georgetown water front, but only a step from the streetcars is the Louisiana, where Bob Neal's Band and that tiny singing clown, Dick Crook, are sounding off tonight. Two dance floors, a highly picturesque setting—it's swell.

C. & P. Reports $234,034 Net During Month

By S. Oliver Goodman

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. yesterday reported net income of $234,034 in May, more than doubling the $116,771 in the same month last year.

Operating revenues of $2,054,563 compared with $1,773,090 in May, 1942. Operating expenses advanced to $1,513,194 as compared with $1,366,966 last year while taxes rose to $266,431 against $164,154 last year.

For the first five months this year, Chesapeake & Potomac reported net income of $1,197,805, against $629,602 in the corresponding 1942 period. Telephones in service at the end of May aggregated 364,549, against 343,499 at the same time last year.

Telephone calls in May declined to 40,940,000 as compared with 43,629,000 last year. In the first five months 207,133,000 calls were made here against 214,133,000 in the like 1942 period.

Charles A. Robinson, vice president and general manager of Chesapeake & Potomac here, pointed out that investment in telephone plant in May was $4,237,674 more than in the same month last year. The per cent return, despite the seemingly sharp rise in net income, averaged 4.29 on investment against 4.08 per cent in the preceding year.

Analysis of May earnings of the four Washington utilities reveals that two showed substantial increases while the others displayed decreases. Washington Gas Light Co.'s net increased $39,615 in May. Capital Transit reported a 27 per cent decline in May net and Potomac Electric Power experienced an 11 per cent drop in net income for the month.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Heitmuller Heads Controllers

Ralph E. Heitmuller, general comptroller of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co., was elected president of the District of Columbia Control of the Controllers Institute of America. Other officers elected at the annual meeting yesterday at the Columbia Country Club are:

Vice president, F. Charles Brown of the National Geographic Society; secretary, Henry A. Herzog of George Washington University; treasurer, Raymond G. Marx of Riggs National Bank.

Newly named directors are Harold G. Haydon of Potomac Electric Power Co., J. E. Heberle of Capital Transit Co., R. D. Marshall of Terminal Refrigerating & Warehousing Corp., and Raymond A. Lee of Garfinckel, Inc.

Bank Dividends Voted

Directors of the Citizens Bank of Takoma Park, Md., have declared semiannual dividends as follows: 2½ per cent on common stock and 2¼ per cent on preferred stock. Checks will be mailed in the near future, according to the announcement yesterday.

In his annual report, President L. V. Lampson said that total assets of the suburban institution on June 23 were $3,121,690, an increase of $671,152 in less than six months.

Gar Wood Offering Sold

Johnson, Lemon & Co., member of the offering group, reported yesterday that the issue of 200,000 shares of Gar Wood Industries, Inc., common stock at $5.875 a share had been sold and the books closed.

Proceeds from the sale will be matched with other funds and used to redeem the company's 128,000 outstanding shares of 5 per cent cumulative preferred stock at $10 a share plus accrued dividends.

Grains Slump

Davis Resignation Chills Trade Ardor

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Ill., June 29. — Uncertainty over the Government farm program as a result of the resignation of War Food Administrator Chester Davis chilled trading ardor in the grain pits today and prices generally were sharply lower. On the downturns there was some buying by mills and houses with Eastern connections but rallies were not sustained.

At the finish wheat was unchanged to ½ cent under Monday's close, July $1.44¾@1.44⅞; September, $1.45@1.45¼; December, $1.46⅝@1.46½. Rye was under pressure throughout the sesion and closed ⅞ to 1¼ cents lower; July, 99@99½ cents; September, $1.00¾@1.01; while oats declined ¼ to ¾ cent; July, 62¾ cents.

The Davis resignation apparently overshadowed all usual market influences. The trade felt Davis enjoyed the confidence of farmers, traders, industry and Congress because of his experience and understanding of the grain and livestock production and marketing. Many authorities were of the opinion that he was well on the way toward a solution of the problems facing agriculture.

D. C. Toll Calls Increase 275%

By the Associated Press

New York, June 29.—Mark R. Sullivan, vice president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co., said today long distance calls had nearly doubled in the past two years.

In that period the Bell System has added 150,000 new operators to handle increased traffic and for replacements, he reported in the June issue of "The Bell Telephone Magazine."

"The increase for this period alone is almost equivalent to the total level of business reached after steady and almost uninterrupted growth over a period of some 65 years," Sullivan added.

He said increases had been much greater in many places with A. T. & T. long distance calls in Washington, D. C., for example, at 275 per cent of the January, 1941, figure; in Dayton, Ohio, 355 per cent; in Norfolk, Va., 493 per cent, and in San Diego, Calif., 896 per cent.

"Despite the cross fire of rapidly increasing long distance traffic and rapidly diminishing materials for new construction," Sullivan said, "the service continues to be rendered efficiently. Over all, the results still average well—as is shown by the following comparison of results two years ago and now:

"Then, 1.4 per cent of the calls were delayed because of 'no circuit' conditions; now 5.6 per cent.

Then, the average speed of service on toll calls was 1.4 minutes; now it is 2.7 minutes.

"Then, speed of service on 99.4 per cent of the calls was within 10 minutes; now, on 96.4 per cent.

"Then, 93 per cent of the calls were handled while the calling party remained at the telephone; now, 86 per cent.

"Most of the calls go through all right, as these figures indicate. That is an important fact, for telephone service is vital to every phase of the war effort.

Visible Grain Supply

New York, June 29 (AP).—Visible supply of American grain showed the following changes from a week ago (in bushels): Wheat increased 2,515,000; corn decreased 3,003,000, oats increased 163,000, rye increased 444,000; barley decreased 134,000.

Late Recovery Trims Losses In Stock List

By the Associated Press

New York, June 29.—Many stock market leaders suffered mild profit taking chills today in one of the slow sessions of the year but spots of strength cropped up in the late proceedings and initial declines running to a point or so were reduced in most cases at the last.

Dealings dwindled following a moderately active opening and apparent selling timidity brought supporting bids in the final hour. While closing recessions were in the majority, advances were fairly well distributed and there was a smattering of 3-year highs in evidence.

After six straight recovery days, brokers suggested, it was natural that commitments should be trimmed to a certain extent. In addition, bullishness was dimmed by confusing Washington economic and political developments. Some customers continued to stand aside to wait the expected imminent Allied European push.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite was off .1 of a point at 51.9, first drop in this barometer since June 21. Transfers totaled 807,560 shares compared with 1,029,060 yesterday.

In the "new high" category were Consolidated Edison, Electric Power & Light preferred, Woolworth, United Air Lines, Westinghouse and Pullman.

Western Union and Postal Telegraph preferred were up ¼ and 5/8, respectively, as the Federal Communications Commission ordered a lift in Government domestic telegraphic rates. Santa Fe ended unchanged at 56¼, erasing an early loss when directors voted another $1.50 dividend on the common.

Chain Stores Win Antitrust Suit

Kansas City, Kans., June 29 (AP). Indictments charging the Safeway Stores, Inc., and the Kroger Grocery & Baking Co., with violations of the antitrust laws were dismissed today by Federal Judge Richard J. Hopkins.

Demurrers filed by the companies to the indictments returned by a grand jury January 20 were upheld by the court in ruling the charges were indefinite and insufficient.

The grand jury action followed an investigation by the Justice Department.

Bendix 6 Months' Sales Exceed 400 Million

New York, June 29 (AP).—E. R. Breech, president of Bendix Aviation Corp., said today new developments by the company held great promise for employment and added business after the war.

He said in a message to stockholders that sales had increased to $417,812,580 in the six months ended March 31, compared with $170,420,270 in the like 1942 period.

Breech added that a complete and fully equipped research and engineering organization was being maintained.

Canada Has Substitute 'Better Than Leather'

Montreal, June 29 (AP).—G. Elmer Johnston, Federal shoe controller, told the National Shoe Retailers Association last night that the shoe leather shortage would be relieved soon by a substitute rated 25 per cent better than leather.

Johnston said that the substitute was "vinilytez." He did not give details. Members of the association had expressed fear that the leather shortage would lead to shoe rationing in Canada, as in the United States.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

En Route to Chicago, June 29.—There's nothing smug about this Washington ball team. They aren't content to be in second place, a game and a half behind the Yankees. They're smelling the pennant, and think they can win it.

POVICH

This is the first Washington team in eight or nine years that isn't pleased with merely being in the first division. Most of the Nats will be unhappy with anything less than the pennant. There are new faces on the club. They are a different and better type of ball player than Bucky Harris had to work with. There are enough of them to put a new competitive face on the whole team.

Gerry Priddy says flatly that Washington ought to win the pennant. "I don't see any team that's better than we are," he says. "I'm not contributing a whole lot with my hitting, but I'll do better. I know I can hit .300 or close to it against the pitchers in this league. This is going to be a good year for me, yet, I'm just getting squared away."

When Clark Griffith bought Priddy from the Yankees, he bought also a lot of the old Yankee hustle and confidence. "We've only got ourselves to blame if we muff the pennant," says Priddy. "This is the year to bear down. The whole league is weak, and we can sneak in there if we are smart and keep hustling. That's the only thing that is keeping the Yankees on top—hustle."

Priddy is frankly mercenary about it, too. "This is my last year in baseball. I'll be in the Army at the end of the season. That World Series dough would help out, with a new baby coming along. This is a big chance for guys like myself to get that extra $5000 or $6000 from the World Series. That's a lot of money compared to the Army's 50 bucks a month. We ought to kick ourselves if we muff it."

For the first time in years, the Nats are not taking defeat gracefully. In the clubhouse after a losing game, they are not fit company for anybody. They are furious when they lose. They think they should have won all of the close ones. That's a healthy spirit. Every pennant contender has it. The team that laughs off a beating isn't much of a ball team.

Up in New York the other day, when Ellis Clary made a wild throw that gave the Yankees the winning runs, a Washington baseball writer cracked: "If a shot rings out in the hotel tonight, don't bother to investigate. It will be Clary, putting an end to himself." He was overdrawing it a bit, but not so very much. Clary hates to lose.

Milo Candini's pitching has given the club a tremendous lift. He stopped a three-game losing streak of the Nats by shutting out the Red Sox, 1-0, in Fenway Park, with that close leftfield fence haunting him from the rear. Lefty Gomez called it the best-pitched game he had seen in years. "I still see that Fenway Park fence in my nightmares," said Gomez.

Ossie Bluege thought he was doing Candini a favor when he withheld him from a series against the Yankees in Washington a couple of weeks ago, despite the fact the pitcher was rested and available. Bluege didn't want to put Candini on the spot by pitching him against the club that had cast him adrift. He didn't consult Candini when he withheld him.

But on the last day of the series, Candini asked Bluege bluntly to pitch him against the Yanks. He wasn't ducking any team. He wanted to work. But by that time, Bluege had other pitching plans. Candini finally got his chance to face the Yankees a few days later, in Yankee Stadium. He shut them out, hit a home run, a two-bagger and laid down two perfect sacrifices. Do you blame Bluege for liking his type.

Catcher Jake Early labored for years as one of the few hustling ball players on the Washington team, but this year he has considerable company. George Case, who must have been born aggressive, is in there giving at a great rate. He wants that pennant, too, and the extra dough. Early, Priddy, Case, Bob Johnson and Ellis Clary are go-get-'em guys who are making the Nats a tough ball team.

One of the smartest investments Griffith has made this year was his signing of Lefty Gomez. The fellow has pitched only one ball game thus far and didn't win that one, but he is contributing of himself in a dozen other ways. Gomez's chief function is to keep the Nats geared up with his running-fire pep talks in the dressing room and from the bench. He makes everything seem important. That's the way the Yankees always felt about it.

Lots of Fun for All

All Teams Will Stage Stunts For War Relief at Games Today

Steve O'Neill and Joe Cronin to Race Blindfolded Pushing Wheelbarrows

By Judson Bailey

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, June 29.—Baseball, usually disdainful of ballyhoo, is blowing its own horn finally to awaken fans to tomorrow's big "War Relief Day" in the major leagues.

This is the first of two days designated by Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis on which all clubs will turns over their entire receipts to the National War Fund and extravagant plans have been made to make it successful.

Tomorrow marks the opening of another East-West series in both the National and American Leagues, making the games themselves of more than average interest, but the magnates have dressed up these attractions with gaudy trimmings.

Every club will present either a double-header or a twilight or night game, or a combination of these, and most of them will have additional pageantry on the program.

In the National League St. Louis at New York, Cincinnati at Brooklyn and Chicago at Boston are double-headers ,and Pittsburgh at Philadelphia is a night game.

Nats at Chicago

In the American League New York at Cleveland, Washington at Chicago and Philadelphia at St. Louis are night games, and Boston at Detroit is a twilight attraction.

Ticket campaigns have been under way in all these cities for several days with fans being urged to buy ducats for servicemen if they cannot attend themselves. In this connection Boston arranged the most novel stunt—having an airplane fly over Boston Common today and drop several hundred tickets with notes asking that they be presented to soldiers and sailors.

At Brooklyn the fans will see a field meet between players of the Dodgers and Reds teams, Al Schacht's comedy act and parading by American Legion Drum Corps. In addition Dixie Walker, the Brooklyn fans, favorite ballplayer, will sing one or more songs.

A field meet—running, throwing, batting and catching—also will match members of the fleet St. Louis Cardinals and the Giants at the Polo Grounds.

The game at Philadelphia will be preceded with a concert by the Navy Yard Band.

To Play Great Lakes

At Chicago a combined team of White Sox and Nationals, with Ossie Bluege managing and Lefty Gomez pitching, will play Mickey Cochrane's Great Lake Naval Training Station team in a twilight tussle before the regular Washington-Chicago game under the floodlights.

In St. Louis, the Lambert Field Navy Wings will play the Army's Jefferson Barracks nine in a preliminary to the Browns-Athletics attraction. The service game will

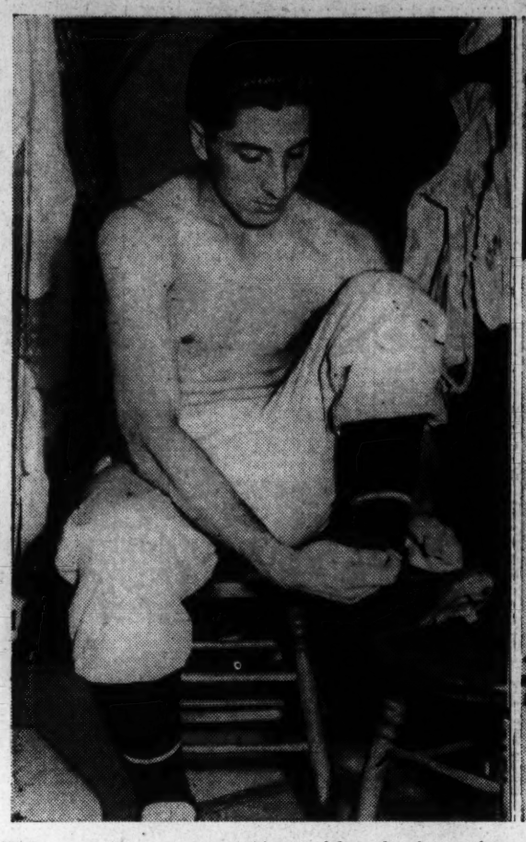
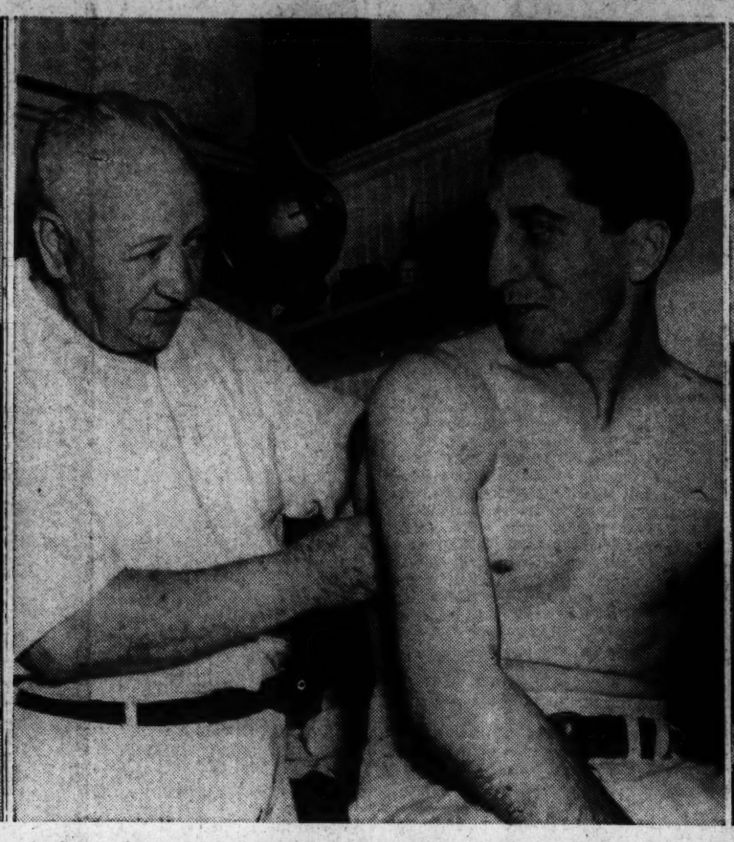
Stephens and McQuinn Rejected by Army

Milo Candini, Who Is Tall and Dark With a Handsome 7-0 Pitching Record for Nats



When a guy wins seven games without a defeat, the photographers always get one pose of him tying his shoes, for some reason. Anyway, here 'tis.



Candini says he owes it all to Mike Martin (left), white-haired trainer of the Nats, who cured his sore pitching arm which handicapped him at Newark last season. Martin worked for eight weeks on the adhesions in his upper arm.

Benny Bengough (right) is another of Candini's favorite characters. The former catcher of the Yankees is telling Milo about the league's hitters.

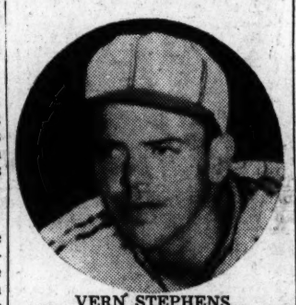
Stephens, McQuinn Of Browns Rejected

Shortstop Turned Down Due to Knee Injury; First Baseman Rejected After Hospital Stay

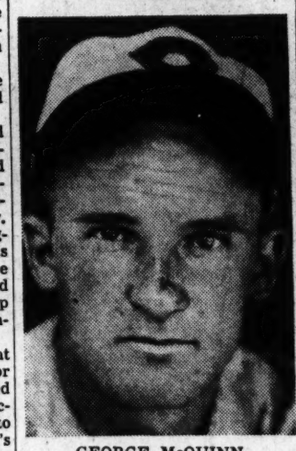
By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 29.—Vernon Stephens, the slugging shortstop, was rejected for military service today, giving the St. Louis Browns another and unexpected opportunity to take advantage of his powerful hitting and emerge from the cellar.

Stephens, tied for the American League's batting lead, apparently was turned down because of an injury to his left knee, suffered last month. There was a kneecap separation that kept him in a hospital bed for several days.



VERN STEPHENS



GEORGE McQUINN

Despite Stephens' .342 average, the Browns have been a hapless club, unable to build up sufficient hitting strength to capitalize on his work. The team's average as a whole is about .230 with Stephens the only player over .300.

May Provide Spark

However, the return of the chunky youngster may be a shot-in-the-arm for the Browns, who are facing an invasion of the Eastern clubs. Now that his continued help was certain, it was believed the team might get up and justify preseason predictions of a first-division berth.

As it is, the Browns in last place are only three games out of third place.

The team also will be bolstered by George McQuinn, its fancy fielding first baseman, who was rejected for military duty service "for physical reasons," Selective Service officials in Arlington, Va., said today.

McQuinn, registered in Arlington County Board No. 1, took his induction examination at Selective Service headquarters at Richmond last week and was sent to Camp Lee Hospital for further examination.

After spending three days at Camp Lee, the hard-hitting major leaguer was rejected and returned to his home in Arlington. Selective Service officials declined to state the exact cause of McQuinn's rejection.

[McQuinn, reached last night at the home of his mother in Arlington, said he was leaving Wednesday morning for St. Louis, but planned to drive his car and would not play until Friday, the last game of the series with the Athletics.]

Klein for Brown

Although the Army waived on Stephens in St. Louis, it accepted another major league star, peppery Jimmy Brown, captain and infielder of the world champion St. Louis Cardinals.

The Cardinals are prepared for Brown's departure. Long a fixture at one or another of the infield positions, he has not played regularly for some time. He left the line-up because of an injured finger, and during his absence Rookie Lou Klein staked an undisputed claim on second base.

The loss of Brown, nevertheless, will be felt by the Cardinals. An important reserve, he has been called baseball's most valuable substitute because of his infield versatility.

Dodgers Rehire Charlie Dressen

New York, June 29 (INS).—Charley Dressen has been rehired as a coach of the Brooklyn Dodgers, President Branch Rickey announced today.

Dressen was let out in a shakeup engineered by Rickey upon the latter's appointment as head of the club last winter. He is expected to rejoin the team upon his return from a visit at Detroit.

Yale Places Two Golfers In Semifinals

Carleton's Ulrich Scores in Upsets; Hoyas' Donohue Loses in 2d Round

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 29.—Yale University, which scored a surprise team triumph yesterday in the forty-sixth National Collegiate Golf Tournament, advanced today into position to sweep individual honors as well.

Richard Kuntz of Larchmont, N. Y., set the stage when he gained the semifinals of the top bracket by defeating Robert Fife of Michigan, 5 and 3. Walter Beckjord of Greenwich, Conn., then came through in the lower bracket, beating out James Stewart of Northwestern at the eighteenth hole, 1 up.

Marines Advance

To gain tomorrow afternoon's 18-hole finals, they must dispose of a pair of marines—Red-headed Bill Roden of Texas and Wally Ulrich of Carleton College, each of whom will report for duty with the Marines at the conclusion of the tournament.

Both Roden and Ulrich indicated today they were plenty tough.

Ulrich, unheralded 21-year-old student from Carleton College at Northfield, Minn., found par on Olympia Fields No. 1 course easy to master today. The Austin, Minn., youth toured 16 holes this afternoon in regulation figures to dispose of Jim Besenfelder of Notre Dame, 4 and 2, after a 3 under par morning performance that gave him a quick 8 and 6 decision over another Yale representative, J. G. Harris.

Recoveries Help

Roden, long shooting Texan, whose home is in Glenrose, frequently used his power to good advantage today and against Ben Smith of Michigan he exploded a succession of fine recoveries to finally eliminate the Co-Big Ten Conference champion, 2 and 1 in the quarter final round.

In his morning match, he had come from behind against Dale Morey of Louisiana State to win, one up, after Morey, another 1942 semifinalist, had led three up going to the twelfth hole.

Beckjord advanced to the quarter-finals by winning, 1 up, over Jack Donohue of Georgetown University in the morning. His fine recovery from a clump of trees near the eighteenth green enabled the Yale player to halve the hole and defeat Donohue.

Griff Offering Cash for Hurler, Shortstop and Catcher for Nats

Waiver Purchases, Deals With Minors Are Only Openings

By Shirley Povich

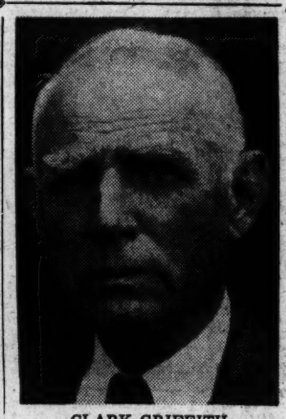
Post Staff Writer

En Route to Chicago With the Nats, June 29.—Back in Washington, Clark Griffith is maintaining an aggressive home front as his Nats head for a 15-day offensive in the West. Griffith has plans for bolstering the club.

The Nats' owner, envisioning even bigger profits and perhaps a pennant if he can add strength in a couple of positions, is in a mood to go high for more talent. He has deals pending now with both major league and minor league clubs.

Griffith is seeking a shortstop who can hit, another catcher to relieve the hard-pressed Jake Early, and a pitcher who can handle at least a relief-pitching job.

His deals with the major league clubs must necessarily be waiver purchases because the deadline on trades fell on June 15, but Griffith is hopeful that a fat cash offer will bring him at least one player from the Class AA minors.



CLARK GRIFFITH

For the past three days he has been busy by telephone and telegraph attempting to swing a deal and is hopeful that he will have one to announce before the week is out.

Griffith's money-spending moods are rare, but he doesn't trifle when he is convinced his club has a chance to win the pennant. He demonstrated that in 1924 when be bought Early McNeely for $65,000 from Sacramento, and during the winter of 1932-33, when he spent more than $100,000 and put together another pennant winner.

In his 1943 club Griffith sees another potential flag winner and he is already well heeled with money to buy as a result of the fat attendance figures for the Nats' home games. He is ready to go high for the players he wants and take the gamble that he will get it all back.

The Nats are in an enviable spot as they move toward Chicago for the opener of a four-game series with the White Sox. They are in

Palumbo Boots Plain Bill Home in Charles Town Sprint

Bart O War Nosed Out in Close Finish

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 29.—Jockeys Sammy Palumbo and Buddy Root, who have fought many a stretch battle in their day, hooked up this afternoon and Palumbo carried off first honors aboard T. Leatherbury's Plain Bill. The son of Bel Aethel won by half a length in going-away fashion from Mrs. L. M. Hanson's Bart O War, ridden by Root. A length and a half farther back came A. L. Muchlitz's Precise to be third in the field of eight going over the about 4½-furlong course.

The crowd made Plain Bill and Bart O War almost even choices in the abbreviated sprint and the winner returned $5.20 for the usual deuce. Plain Bill was clocked in 0:51 over a fast racing surface. Bart O War was first to show in front, but Palumbo soon had Plain Bill closest to the pace-making son of Jean Bart. Approaching the stretch Bart O War drew out and appeared headed for victory. However, Palumbo was rating Plain Bill. In the stretch he asked for speed and the colt responded to wear down Bart O War despite Root's strong riding. Precise closed willingly along the rail to be third.

Galt Davis' veteran Yankee Lad was the hero of a three-way photo finish in the sixth race. The Washington-owned gelding came up on the outside under good handling by Jack Mayer to break up a duel between A. A. Gray's Rough Amos and S. Delise's Miss Defiance. Yankee Lad was slightly bothered when Rough Amos went to the front but he came with a rush in the final drive to bring his backers a $12.40 mutuel.

The program opened with a Washington victory. L. S. Stewart's Laugh and Play proved the best of eight sprinters. The second event went to Saint Pyrewick, owned by John Foster of Brunswick, Md. Those who coupled these winners in the daily double received a mutuel of $15.20.

At the Post

Dear Al:

Although I haven't checked, Trainer Claude Feltner, the 24-year-old Berryville conditioner, seems well on the way to a record for saddling winners at this track. To date, Claude has sent 36 winners to the post and may make it 45 before the closing on Saturday. Feltner, who was seriously injured while trying to be a jockey, married Mary Martin, sister of George and T. P. Martin who were jockeys before going in the Army. The Feltners have a boy, Claude M. Feltner 3d, but called "Bucky. I see by the papers that Butsy Hernandez is back in the saddle at Fairmount Park. If the Maryland major tracks close in mid-November I look for Charles Town to open early. Jockey George (Pappy) Witmer put up a strong finish yesterday to win with Lena Girl in the fourth and Jockey Carson Kirk rode one of his poor races aboard Nom De Plume. Jockey Stanley Austin, suspended for the meeting, has gone to visit his home and will return to these parts with the opening of Hagerstown next Tuesday. Sam Stewart, who used to manage the Stewart photographers basketball team, has turned to horses for recreation. His stable is a winning one and he's getting a lot of laughs, plus purses, out of his laugh and play. Good card today. See you on the rail.—Bill.

First race—MISS PILGRIM has speed and should like this route. I'm going to string along. FANTASTICAL should go well. IDLE NIGHT for the minor award.

Second race—REVELRY awoke last out and needs to improve only slightly to take care of this field. ROLLS ROUGH will be a threat, especially if the track is off. AMPLIFY for the minor award.

Third race—INDIAN SEA turned in an impressive victory last out and will be a threat if not the winner. INDIGNATION gets a good figure. BARRACA could be the third one.

Fourth race—SAMPLER is better than rated and will be hard to beat in this company. NEON LIGHT had a rough trip last out. EXHORT for the show end.

Fifth race—HONEYMAID has plenty of speed and belongs on top of this gang. CHAT HOPKINS is fit enough to be dangerous. RED WINGS belongs close with these.

Sixth race—ROYAL FLEET has been shopping around and appears ready to crack down in this field. FLYING JUNIOR was unable to find racing room last out and is a threat. BROCADE for the show.

SEVENTH RACE—SUMMER STOCK gets my call in this distance affair. DURABLE'S last was a beaut. KATE SMITH should go well.

EIGHTH RACE—ROUGH EGG may be along in time to take the main portion of this purse. I'm going to take my chances. FIVE-O-FOUR is in rare form and is dangerous. LADY JAFFA gets in light.

Best bet—HONEYMAID.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LAUGH AND PLAY, $6.20, $3.20, $3.20; AIR DEFENSE, $2.80, $2.60; CANT WE, $7.80.

LAUGH AND PLAY, within striking distance from start, went between horses to take command and held AIR DEFENSE safe while being kept to a hand drive. AIR DEFENSE disposed of WATCH TIGER but could not stay with winner in stretch run. CANT WE closed well after being rather slow leaving the gate. WATCH TIGER was in front early but tired.

SECOND RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 1:48. Off at 1:46. Winner, John Foster's ch. g. (6) by Westwick—Pyroxene. Trained by H. Brown. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:16⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SAINT PYREWICK, $4.80, $3.60, $2.80; SWIRLALONG, $7.60, $5.60; CLOCK TIME, $9.40.

SAINT PYREWICK was hustled to front going to first turn, opened long lead and was never threatened. SWIRLALONG showed good speed throughout but could not menace top one. CLOCK TIME was hard ridden and had no excuses. GRANNY CAKE tired after showing brief speed.

Daily Double—LAUGH AND PLAY and SAINT PYREWICK paid $15.20

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:11. Off at 2:11½. Winner, Edward Wright's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ACQUAINTANCE, $8.00, $4.40, $3.00; BOILED BRISKET, $10.20, $4.40; FOX MEADOW, $10.80.

ACQUAINTANCE had early speed to escape trouble at first turn, was well rated while showing in front and then opened up gradually when shaken up in stretch. BOILED BRISKET was slow to begin, lost ground and closed with a rush. FOX MEADOW forced pace of winner from start and weakened in final eighth. TIPPY was in close quarters while attempting to better position in stretch run. PONE was through early.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:38. Off at 2:40. Winner, Mrs. Mary Kinierism's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LENA GIRL, $6.20, $3.60, $2.80; SIR CHICLE, $7.40; $4.80; NOM DE PLUME, $5.60.

LENA GIRL, alertly handled, saved ground early, moved to lead entering stretch and just lasted under a hard drive. SIR CHICLE, well up from start, made bold challenge in stretch and just missed. NOM DE PLUME opened long lead early, dropped back entering stretch and then came again on the inside right at the end. CELTIC KNIGHT had early speed but broke down during the running.

FIFTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400. For 2-year-olds; allowances. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:07. Off at 3:08. Winner, T. Leatherbury's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PLAIN BILL, $5.20, $2.40, $2.40; BART O WAR, $2.60, $2.40; PRECISE, $2.40.

PLAIN BILL, off well but eased back leaving backstretch, went to outside of leader to challenge and was drawing clear at the end. BART O WAR assumed command at once, was well handled but was not good enough. PRECISE came well on the outside after being in close quarters on rail. BLUE PROOF faltered near the end.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400. For 4-year-olds; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:32. Off at 3:32. Winner, Galt Davis' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—YANKEE LAD, $12.40, $4.20, $2.80; ROUGH AMOS, $4.40, $3.60; MISS DEFIANCE, $4.60.

YANKEE LAD, well placed early, dropped back after a half, was taken to outside and closed with a rush to be up in final stride. ROUGH AMOS moved with a rush to open long lead after first three-quarters but faltered right at the end. MISS DEFIANCE moved nearest leader entering stretch and hung right at the end. PART ONE was shut off leaving gate. PAVILION was through early.

SEVENTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:01. Off at 4:03½. Winner, Cedar Hill Farm's gr. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN TARGET, $8.20, $3.80, $2.80; SINGING STEEL, $2.80, $2.60; LADY LONGWORTH, $2.80.

SUN TARGET, well handled while setting pace, responded when shaken up entering stretch to draw out and win under a mild drive. SINGING STEEL raced in first flight from start and had no mishaps. LADY LONGWORTH moved with a rush after a half but could not better her position thereafter. TIME PLAY caught tired horses. SIR JEROME was in close quarters soon after start.

Pimlico Given 12-Day Meet Starting Nov. 1

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, June 29.—The Maryland Racing Commission alloted today a 12-day meeting to the Maryland Jockey Club to be conducted over that organization's Pimlico course from November 1 through November 13.

Meeting with executives of the State's four major tracks, the commission offered the additional 18 days of racing permitted at Pimlico under Maryland's new racing laws to Bowie, Laurel and Havre de Grace to be used for a collective meeting under one management.

The three tracks have until July 15 to make arrangements for the joint meeting at Pimlico. If any one track decides not to participate, the other two tracks would be permitted to operate for these 18 days, commission officials said.

Asked if Pimlico would be given the 18 days if the other tracks did not want them, Commission Chairman Frank Small, jr., said merely:

"We are practically certain that at least two tracks will get together."

Officials of Bowie and Havre de Grace after the meeting indicated they would agree to operate under the joint-management proposal for the 18-day period. Laurel officials withheld comment until they could contact their directors.

Small emphasized that the 18-day period would be conducted by one management, regardless of the number of associations participating, and said that if they were unable to agree on details, the commission would set up the necessary machinery.

Callura Fight Postponed

Hartford, Conn., June 29 (AP).—Matchmaker Charley Bennett today announced the postponement until tomorrow night of the nontitle bout scheduled for tonight between Jackie Callura of Hamilton, Ontario, N. B. A. featherweight champion, and Phil Terranova of New York.

Woman Tells Of Big Weekly Take at 'House'

Hopkins Institute. She now resides in New York.

Asked by Assistant United States Attorney Bernard Margolius what she did with the earnings at the Hopkins establishment, she said half went to the operators and that she kept the rest. The money, she said, was received by George F. Whitehead, 43, operator of the institute, who has pleaded guilty to white slave charges.

Q. Where did you meet Powell, the defendant?—A. I met Don at the famous Door Night Club in New York in 1941.

Q. At that time did you have any idea of coming to work here as a prostitute?—A. No.

Q. Why did you want to come here?—A. I wanted to leave New York.

Q. Did he say he would place you in a house of prostitution?—A. Yes.

Under cross-examination by Defense Attorney M. Edward Buckley, jr., Miss Gray, also known as Sunny Pitts, said she lived in Harlem, N. Y., when she met

MRS. DIANE CARTER

Powell and that she was a prostitute then. She admitted that she had used several names, most of which she could not remember.

She testified that her occupation was that of an actress but at present she had no theatrical connection, having left California last October when her father died and when her mother suffered a nervous breakdown.

Miss Gray then told of her experiences in New York City as a prostitute after which Buckley resumed cross-examination:

Q. What did you do with the proceeds of your prostitution?—A. I put it in an envelope and gave it Mr. Whitehead to keep for me.

Q. What did he do with it?—A. He put it in a book.

Q. Any book?—A. A special book where all the girls put their money.

Q. How much did you charge.—A. Between $20 and $50.

Miss Gray disclosed that at Hopkins Institute a book was kept in which the names of clients were written.

The, Mrs. Mildred Dianne Powell Carter, 23, testified that she was the manager of Hopkins Institute and told more about the book, stating she believed it to be in the hands of the FBI.

Buckley asked, "Were the names of Senators in that book?"

Margolius leaped to his feet shouting an objection, which was sustained.

Following this, an FBI agent testified as to the arrest of Powell. He said Powell had been willing in May to plead guilty, but that he wanted assurance he would be allowed to go to the Army rather than to jail. When this assurance was denied, Powell, he said, changed his mind and decided to fight the case. During this testimony the jury was excused.

Buckley made a motion that the evidence of the FBI agent and an alleged confession made by Powell be excluded from the evidence.

This was denied by Justice Adkins.

The Government is expected to finish its case today, with Miss Gray to take the stand again as the last witness.

Hotels Pledge Aid In Vice Drive

United States Attorney Edward M. Curran yesterday announced that as a result of the vice conditions which existed under cover in prominent hotels here and now are being brought to light, he had conferred with several hotel managers.

The result, he said, was that he had been assured that steps are being taken by operators to the end that these conditions will not occur here again.

Happy Ending

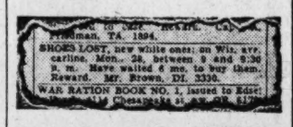
Hard-to-Get Shoes Nearly Got Away

By Helene Champlain
Post Staff Writer

This is the sort of story that grandparents will tell grandchildren of the 1960's, when they are recalling the days when it was good Emily Post to request ration coupons of dinner guests and business concerns ran ads discouraging customers.

Near-tragedy, but with the traditionally happy ending, it is the saga of a National Geographic Society auditor named Brown, a pair of shoes—rationed and white, a Friendship Heights streetcar and a curious and honest young lady named Iskowlitz.

The hero of our story is one



Friedman, TA. 1894.
SHOES LOST, new white ones; on Wis. ave. carline, Mon., 28, between 8 and 9:30 p. m. Have wailed 6 mo. to buy them. Reward. Mr. Brown. DI. 3330.
WAR RATION BOOK NO. 1, issued to Edsel

Charles Brown, who waited heroically for six months to buy a pair of summer whites while his wife, daughter and son appropriated all available 17 coupons. Came validity of coupon 18, numerous jaunts to merchandise—short shoe stores, and on Monday last our Mr. Brown finally uncovered a pair of precious white buckskins.

Warily he tucked the bundle under his arm, kept it in easy reach and quick sight, finally repaired for home—4627 Alton Place Northwest—booty safely in hand.

From here on in, the heat wave may be held fully responsible, for our Mr. Brown had shed his coat in deference to the temperature and had placed the rationed items with the coat on an empty streetcar seat. At Tenley Circle, Mr. Brown took himself from the streetcar, took his coat from the streetcar but somehow—he'll never be sure how—forgot to take his shoes from the streetcar.

Realization of the oversight came immediately, but not before the Friendship Heights car was clanging on to its destination. There was a fruitless attempt at car-faring, an equally fruitless attempt at cab-hailing, and finally a fruitless expedition to the car barns, where no shoes could be found.

Mr. Brown suspected foul play, but actually the story turned out to be one of good samaritanism. Into the picture entered Virginia Iskowlitz of the Veterans' Administration classification division. Mrs. Iskowlitz spied the bundle, with a woman's curiosity opened same, discovered the lost shoes and conscientiously refrained from turning them over to her husband, who wore Mr. Brown's size (9A).

Meanwhile, Mr. Brown telephoned a heart-rending ad to The Washington Post, and settled down to a sleepless night during which he "kicked myself I don't know how many times."

With yesterday morning, however, there came a telephone call from Mrs. Iskowlitz, who had seen the ad, identification of the shoes by a relieved Mr. Brown, and a hurried jaunt to the Veterans' Administration for reacquisition of his buckskins. Mrs. Iskowlitz received money for a box of candy, and Mr. Brown made sure of retaining his shoes this time by wearing them.

As anyone could plainly see, "it wasn't the shoes, but the coupon," Mr. Brown explained.

Living Costs Menace Wage Stabilization, WLB Declares in Statement

whose incomes is spent for food."

The broad statement was taken as a hint that WLB would be compelled to revise its "Little Steel" cost of living formula upward if the cost of living continues to rise. The wage yardstick allows wages to rise a total of 15 per cent above January 1, 1941, levels. The Bureau of Labor Statistics index reveals an increase of 24.1 per cent in the cost of living between January, 1941, and this past April.

The October 2 act calls for stabilization of wages and prices at September 15, 1942 levels "so far as practicable," the board pointed out.

The "Little Steel" formula is the board's main wage yardstick. Other measuring units are used in cases where the board feels the "Little Steel" yardstick cannot be applied.

"This increasing cost of food gravely affects the wage stabilization program of the National War Labor Board," the statement said. "The board believes that its established wage stabilization policy is effective.

"It believes that policy should be carried forward in full cooperation with the other agencies of the government responsible for the other factors of the over-all economic stabilization program."

The board's indorsement of Administration food subsidy policies which are in danger of being knocked out by Congress was contained in the following language:

Subsidy "Essential"

"But the board states with all the emphasis at its command that its wage stabilization program calls for the prompt carrying forward of the announced policies of the Administration affecting the cost of food. In the considered opinion of the board this is essential to the success of national economic stabilization.

"Subsidies are among the instruments which have proved effective to control food prices. The War Labor Board unanimously supports the Administration's intention to use these and all appropriate measures in its food price policy."

Decisions Summarized

It summarized its progress on the wage stabilization front as follows:

"The yardsticks are known, and it is known that they will be applied without discrimination to all groups of wage earners.

"To avoid injustice in the application of this wage stabilization program, certain types of wage adjustments have been approved, but these adjustments have been made without substantial effect upon prices. From October, 1942, through April, 1943, 23,779 wage adjustment cases have been decided by the board. In only 97 cases, or in 4 out of every 1000 cases, did the wage adjustment require price adjustments."

What will TODAY'S WORK buy TOMORROW?

THE nice thing about War Bonds is that there are two thrills in every dollar . . . one now and one later, when your money comes back to you with interest.

It's nice to think about that later thrill; so nice that people have given the thought a high sounding name. It's called "Post-war Planning."

When people look at their War Bonds, they don't see paper and ink. They see filling stations brimming with gasoline, super-duper new automobiles, and freedom from wanting new tires. They see new refrigerators, new rugs and air conditioned homes. They see children in college.

That is the right way for civilians to think in war. It makes them impatient to get the damned thing over with, and that speeds production.

Since personal "Post-war Planning," stimulated by a nice fat package of War Bonds, is one of the few helpful pleasures you can enjoy these days, maybe you would like to add a practical touch by thinking about post-war prices.

You will want to buy a lot of stuff after the war. So will everybody else. The competition to buy can send prices up, and the second thrill in your War Bond dollar will cool with every price rise.

Of course you don't want prices to skyrocket after the war. You'll holler your head off to Congress if they do.

▶ However, a little foresight will do a lot more good. You can help hold down post-war prices. You can do it by helping to create a better understanding among your friends (and among your representatives in Congress) of the only way to have low prices and high wages at the same time.

To be a practical post-war dreamer, you must understand prices. To understand prices, you must cut through a jungle of words, laws, theories and bureaus to these bed-rock facts:

Prices will depend upon the time it takes to make, distribute and deliver the things you will want to buy.

The shorter the time, the lower the price.

That's why machinery and mass production methods are so important in American life.

If machines and methods are constantly improved, more and more people can have good living—because wages can be high and prices low.

It's so simple that you wonder why so few people understand it.

Not all business men understand it, for there are thousands upon thousands of old machines in this country that are obsolete. Obsolete machines hold down wages and keep prices high.

Not all labor unions understand it, because some of them think the slower a job is done the more pay labor makes. That isn't true. Slow work makes high prices, and high prices mean fewer people can buy the products of labor.

▶ Government understands the need for constantly improved machines, least of all. If you want proof, just look at the hundreds of tax laws and other government regulations that gum up the works, so far as industrial expansion is concerned.

If government, and labor and management can work out a method of cooperating to equip every workman with the best possible machines and methods for shortening the time it takes to make things, your War Bonds will buy more and everybody will be better off.

How can this cooperation be secured? We know management is willing. We believe most labor leaders are willing. Government acts only in response to public opinion, and that means you.

You can help, first of all, by understanding why "Industrial Progress is the source of all good living;" second, by letting your representatives in Congress know that you believe government should foster and develop the constant improvement of American industry.

Government cannot help industry take care of its post-war task of paying good wages, hiring back millions of workers, paying off the war debt, and keeping prices down, unless government people change their attitude toward business profits.

Business profits are the only source of industrial improvement and expansion. We built our great industries through plowing back profits in constant improvement.

▶ Profits that are plowed back into a business are called "Seed Money."

Seed Money pays for research, for better production methods and for IMPROVED MACHINES.

Industry will need at least as much money to get out of war production as it needed to get in.

Right now, Industry is producing the profits that could be the Seed Money for getting back into peacetime production. But government is draining off far too much of this Seed Money in taxes.

We think government puts excessive taxes on business profits because government does not understand that Industrial Progress is the Source of ALL Good Living.

If you want your War Bonds to buy more when the time for buying comes, ask your Congressman to work for a new government attitude of helpfulness toward America's greatest asset—its industrial management and skilled industrial workers. Remind your Congressman that:

"Industrial Progress is the Source of all Good Living."

No Traffic Hazard

Refused a driver's license, a woman approached the public library's technology division recently for color-blindness tests. Ruth Todd, librarian, produced charts and found the visitor unable only to tell shades of brown and purple apart, but not troubled by reds and greens. Who cares about deep purple at an intersection, she would like to know.

Grave Situation

Dwindling labor supply and continued brisk business have forced Washington and Maryland graveyard organizations to appeal to the War Manpower Commission for relief. If granted, their request will result in declaring burying the dead "an essential industry."

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Porter Named Food Czar's Aide

Paul Porter, chief of the rent division of the Office of Price Administration, yesterday was appointed deputy to Food Czar Marvin Jones.

He'll replace Jesse Tapp, a Chester Davis man, who'll return to his private business in California. Another Davis man, Bill Byrd, also resigned. In fact, Porter himself is a Davis man. He was Davis' deputy when he was in the old National Defense Advisory Commission and Davis tried to get him to join his staff when he was food boss. However, Porter's rent division was under fire at the time and he refused to leave. The inquiry into Porter's agency revealed that he had held rents in line at a time when other prices soared. Porter's prestige shot up to the point where he was being seriously considered for general manager of OPA when Judge Jones picked him off.

Continuation of the Board of Legal Examiners will be voted on today by the full Senate Civil Service Committee. A subcommittee yesterday turned thumbs down on the board and that's a good sign it's about to fold up . . . Uncle Sam is losing two topflight executives: Pat Patterson of the Budget Bureau is leaving to join Bankers Trust of New York, and Emory Olson of the Civil Service Commission will resign to head up the personnel division at Lockheed-Vega, the giant aircraft concern . . . President Roosevelt is planning a series of fire chats on the home front. He's planning a veto of the Commodity Credit Bill which would ban price rollbacks of several food prices . . . It took White House intimates 10 days to write that letter accepting the resignation of Chester Davis.

It may be the heat, but if someone can make sense out of the War Department's many different stories on personnel needs they ought to make him Secretary of the Treasury. The tax bill would be a cinch for him. But I wouldn't trust that person to keep my bank account, not keeping it in the way the War Department maintains its personnel figures. The department's double-talk was exposed in this column 10 days ago, how Undersecretary Robert Patterson had told the Ramspeck Committee that 100,000 employes were to be cut off the rolls while at the same time other War Department officials were asking the House Appropriations Committee for funds to hire 200,000 additional employes. Patterson and other War Department officials were called on the carpet before the Ramspeck Committee and a weak explanation was made which didn't satisfy committee members.

Browne's Statement

But now look what Brig. Gen. F. W. Browne told the Senate Appropriations Committee about the same time as Patterson was trying to explain things to the Ramspeck Committee. The general was doing his best to explain the many conflicting statements when Senator Bridges asked:

"Or instead of being a decrease of 100,000, as stated by the Undersecretary, it is an increase of how much?"

General Browne: "Approximately 270,000." (That's 70,000 more than was suggested to either of the other congressional committees.)

Senator Bridges: "Well, now, General Browne, do you need that? I mean, it seems a far cry for a man who is one of the heads of the War Department to state that you can reduce the civilian personnel 100,000 and then come in here with a bill asking for an increase of 270,000."

General Browne "It requires explanation." Senator Bridges: "It certainly does . . . a lot of explanation."

Senator Thomas of Utah ordered the general to produce an itemized statement on the proposed 270,000 increase and this was placed in the record: Pay of Army, an increase of 7410 civilians which would bring the total number on that project to 30,413; finance service, 3091 increase, making a total of 20,513; Army supply, 1686 increase, 5066 total; clothing and equipage, 14,740 increase, 65,303 total; incidental expenses, 13,072 crease, 110,653 total; water transportation, 52,728 increase, 74,668 total; commercial transportation, 11,081 increase, 34,227 total; Signal Service, 8905 increase, 125,303 total; Air Corps, 109,399 increase (the Ramspeck Committee was told the other day that the corps would be expanded by 56,000), 382,194 total; medical and hospital, 63,313 increase, 119,706 total; Engineer Corps, 15,846 reduction, 145,970 total; Ordnance, 1000 reduction, 274,779 total; Chemical Warfare, 1509 cut, 4980 total, and other items, 761 increase, 6651 total. This makes a grand total of 1,400,421 for '44 compared to 1,131,495 for this fiscal year. However, the department now claims to have 1,300,000 civilians. You figure it out.

25 Hostesses to Run Own Show for Services At Stage Door Canteen Without Professionals

Twenty-five junior hostesses at the Stage Door Canteen decided Broadway talent was too far away for their local stage at tthe Belasco Theater, so tonight at 10 o'clock they will throw a show of their own.

A red, white and blue chorus, a "voices with a smile" trio of M. C.'s who all talk at once—they don't call it choral speaking—and songsters and other entertainers will present Shirley Winston's idea of "A Soldier's Dream." The dream is good. Shirley, one of the hostess, got the idea, did the continuity, arranged the plot and wrote lyrics.

Frances Rand, another hostess, who danced on Broadway for six years but now beats out for Uncle Sam, staged the ballet numbers (we like the food bar ballet, and we suppose the way to a man's heart is still tied up with that) and composed choreography.

The three M. C.'s who look as pretty as they sound are Margalee Hollingsworth, Bernice Mendelsohn, and Carol Shea. Others participating are Minnie Mae Emmerich, Jean Henderson, Shirley Hoffman, Betty Jordan, Lillian Kaufman, Virginia Marino, Gloria Mesinoff, Fae Rossi, Rose Saaristo, Betty Schlampp, Dolly Schuetler, Peggy Sharkey, Jeannette Staple, and Marguerite Willett.

Women's Press Club Installs New Officers

Elisabeth May Craig, for 18 years correspondent for Maine newspapers, last night accepted the gavel of the Women's National Press Club from Christine Sadler, Washington Post staff writer and outgoing president, at a dinner meeting at the Hotel Statler.

Guest Speaker Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information, told 300 members and guests that, although American soldiers are not "sufficiently educated as to what it is all about," they nevertheless have proved their fighting ability in battle and "I see no reason why we cannot ultimately win the victory—if we keep at it."

"We are likely to sustain considerable losses," Davis emphasized, "and there is due to be considerable unpleasantness for many, many Americans, but the fight for the liberty and self-determination of the United States will go to prove that those men 'shall not have died in vain.'"

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, No. 1 Washington correspondent in the lists of Press Clubbers on the distaff side, gave a frank appraisal of her own weekly press conferences as she confessed that "by and large, the reporters at my conferences have done a remarkable job—but I'm never quite satisfied that I get all from them that I should."

"Those gatherings should make me a better conveyor of ideas and thought," Mrs. Roosevelt declared. "I have never looked upon my press conferences as a one-way street—but I am not sure that they always are successful in giving me a source for ideas . . . I want my conferences to be used as a place for getting special angles on things affecting the women of this country, thus increasing their responsibility as citizens."

Other officers of the club who were installed last night are Ned Brunson Harris of District OPA as first vice president, Carolyn Bell of The Post as second vice president; Elizabeth Ford of the Washington Times-Herald as recording secretary; Malvina Stephenson of the Cincinnati Times-Star as corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Jessie Fant Evans of the Washington Star as treasurer.

Langer Offers Bill to Curb Inflation Spin

A bill designed to stop the "inflation spiral" was introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Langer (Republican) of North Dakota and referred to the Finance Committee.

The bill provides for a 10 per cent increase on all Federal salaries, retirement benefits and social security payments for each 10 per cent increase in the cost of living since the first six months of 1940.

The measure includes a provision to have cost-of-living indices calculated every six months, with a 10 per cent increase or decrease in Federal salaries in accordance with a like rise or fall in the cost of living.

Tells of Tour

Catholic U. Rector Feted By K. of C.

The Washington Council of the Knights of Columbus gave a testimonial dinner at the Mayflower Hotel last night for Msgr. Patrick McCormick, recently appointed by Pope Pius XII as rector of the Catholic University of America.

Leo A. Rover, former District attorney, gave the address complimenting the Washington Council on its welcoming of Monsignor McCormick, and praised the latter as an outstanding churchman and educator and for his over 30 years of faithful service to Catholic education and attainment of the high honor of rector.

The guest of honor was Francis B. Matthews, supreme knight of the Knights of Columbus, of Omaha, Nebr., who told of his recent experiences on a 10-week trip to England, Ireland and Scotland. He described an experience at an unnamed airfield in England when he saw about 100 to 150 American boys about to go on a bombing mission gather for a few moments of worship and edification, the Catholic boys about their chaplain and the Protestant boys about theirs. Quietly from their contemplation they went to their ships, one in crew and one in purpose.

About 200 attended the banquet, and among the honored guests were: The Rev. Lawrence J. Gorman, president of Georgetown University, and vice president of the university, Paul J. McNally; Dr. James M. Magner, chaplain of Washington Council of the Knights of Columbus; Senator John A. Danaher of Connecticut; Senator James Mead of New York; United States Attorney Edward M. Curran; the Rev. John Riley, director of the Shrine.

William H. Collins was the toastmaster. Lieut. James P. Casey was chairman of arrangements, assisted by Alfred A. McGarraghy.

$5 Auto Use Stamp Sales Running Behind by 50%

Sales of $5 Federal use-tax stamps on automobiles, which must be displayed by drivers tomorrow on all windshields, have fallen to about 50 per cent of last year's 50,000 at a corresponding time in the District, Postmaster Vincent C. Burke declared yesterday.

A total of 110,000 was sold in 1942, Burke added, which meant that upward of 50,000 were sold after June 29. He does not expect closing day figures to be as large this year, however, he said.

Stamps are available at all postoffices and postal stations, as well as at the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Tomorrow also is the deadline for tire inspections of automobiles bearing B ration stickers, the local Office of Price Administration stressed yesterday. Under OPA regulations all B card holders must have their tires inspected every four months and the last period ended February 28.

For C cards holders, final tire inspection does not end until August 31, the OPA said.

Citizens' Body Discusses Delinquency

Plans to consider and promote cures for local juvenile delinquency through operation of subcommittees were discussed last night at the first meeting of a citizens' advisory committee on wartime and postwar problems of the child, held in Franklin School.

Present were members appointed June 16* following a junior high school survey showing increasing delinquency here. Reports of school progress and findings so far was made.

Acting Superintendent of Schools Robert L. Haycock said that the school's concern with the whole development of the child made it necessary for them to have help and advice of other agencies.

A report on the junior high school survey was made by Assistant Superintendent Lawson J. Cantrell and First Assistant Superintendent Garnett C. Wilkinson reviewed the current guidance program in the public schools, noting that the 1944 budget appropriations provide for further guidance appointments.

In this connection, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, said it was to be hoped that during this war, authorities might find and set standards for smaller school classes and more guidance.

Block meetings to reach those who ordinarily would not attend meetings for parents were described by Valerie Chase, principal of Terrell Junior High School, as an especially effective means used by her school committee to talk to fathers whose children were delinquent or likely to become so.

Appropriations to get adequate supplies of clothing and extra equipment such as gym suits for children of poor families was cited by Hugh S. Smith, principal of Jefferson Junior High, as one way to attack bad attitudes which lead to delinquency.

Chairmen of subcommittees named were: Robert L. Haycock, schools; Mrs. P. C. Ellett, home; the Rev. A. F. Elmes, church; Melvin C. Sharpe, recreation; Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, health; and Mildred Terrett, child protection.

High Tension Wire Injuries Prove Fatal

William Hunnicutt, 40, of 1921 Randolph Street Northeast, died at Emergency Hospital yesterday of injuries suffered Monday while repairing a high tension wire in the Potomac Yards. He was thrown 25 feet to the ground and treated at the hospital for severe burns and a possible skull fracture.

Capper's D. C. Vote Bill

Senator Arthur Capper (Republican) of Kansas, will speak for today's Y. W. C. A. "Wednesday Evening" program on his bill to secure a vote for the District by amending the Constitution. The Senator will speak at 9:30 p. m. in the fourth floor assembly room of the K Street Y following a record program of Southern music at 8:30.

Laundry Crisis Here Is Averted

Swift Action by U. S. Agencies, Owners Eases Shortage Of Manpower

Prompt action and close cooperation between the United States Employment Service, the District War Manpower Commission and the Washington Laundry Owners Association late yesterday apparently had averted a grave crisis in the laundry industry of the Nation's Capital.

Following a series of conferences, the last held on Monday afternoon, between the interested groups, it was announced by K. Vernon Banta, director of the USES, that workers, needed in wholesale lots by laundry and dry-cleaning establishments to continue operation, had all but swamped the employment office and every laundry and dry-cleaning business in Washington had requested help from the War Manpower Commission.

Here is a clean chance to lick this problem," Fred Z. Hetzel, young area manpower director, stated.

1300 Were Needed

With 300 unskilled workers in the laundry industry needed immediately to avoid a collapse and the swift appraisal of every avenue of getting the word before prospective employes on the part of the WMC-USES and the laundry owners, last Saturday saw the first response.

Thirty-six were signed up at the Employment Center, Fifth and K Streets Northwest.

Ninety-five more workers were placed Monday and by yesterday noon 75 additional had been added.

The original call, according to Hetzel, had been for 300. That mark is expected to be reached by noon today. It was estimated that 60 more had responded yesterday afternoon and that the remainder would be secured this morning.

"But that does not end the laundry manpower shortage," Hetzel explained. "There is yet a shortage of skilled and semiskilled workers, and there will be a place for many more inexperienced workers. Not all of the laundry and cleaning establishments in Washington have requested help."

Others Expected to Apply

It appeared evident that those who at first did not heed the WMC-USES suggestion to "make requests" of the Government services, ill now call on these agencies for aid in maintaining and operating the businesses.

"One of the points cleared up by the laundry owners and the WMC was the widespread understanding that laundry workers were paid only 32.9 cents an hour," George Walker, executive secretary of the Washington Laundry-Dry Cleaning Association, said.

"Not only is this misleading but it has kept many workers from seeking employment," he said. "The average salary paid unskilled laundry workers is approximately 41 cents an hour.

"Qualified workers—mostly women—earn from $25 to $35 weekly."

Walker, vastly pleased with the quick turn of events, explained that those paid the 32.9-cent minimum constituted a very small segment of the total employe group.

Only those in "school" are paid that rate, he stated.

"It takes two weeks for an employe to learn to iron a shirt," he said, "and actually during this period they could hardly be placed in the productive class."

Will Try "Prescreening"

Aware of the chance to deal decisively with the laundry problem, which has harassed and plagued Senators, executives, traveling men and soda skeets alike for many months, Hetzel last night said that he would ask laundry industry representatives to maintain a special personnel worker at Employment Center to take advantage of the "prescreening" process here, as has been done successfully by the Kaiser shipyards and the Capital Transit Co.

(Prescreening is the method of conserving manpower used by the USES to find a job for everyone who applies. If a man does not appear to be qualified as a welder or a motorman, it is conceivable that he might fit in as a laundry worker.)

Youth Treated for Burns

Norbert Kraft, 19, of 4475 Reservoir Road Northwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital for shock and burns to his hand when yesterday he touched an electric wire behind the soda fountain at Schulte's drug store, Fourteenth and F Streets Northwest, where he is employed as a soda dispenser.

Play Yard Contest

Just one day remains for filing entries in the home play-yard contest with the Recreation Department, 3149 Sixteenth Street Northwest. Prizes of war bonds and play equipment will be awarded to the 10 considered most useful and safe by three judges who will inspect all entries personally. The contest will close officially at 12 midnight, tonight.

Neighborhood Bond-Buyers Sing McDermott's Praises

The neighbors toasted Michael Patrick Aloysius McDermott, 436 Park Road Northwest, Monday night because he sold them bonds —$15,000 worth.

The party was on him, and he liked it. "M. P." McDermott, as his daughter prefers, is a patriotic chap.

After Pearl Harbor, he tried to enlist in the Army. They turned him down, but he was still patriotic.

This month he started a one-man war bond selling campaign—just to neighbors and friends.

Last night he threw a party for those friends at the Park Road address where he has lived for 18 years.

"He has lots of friends," said Mrs. McDermott, County Kerry, Ireland, who married her husband, County Galway, same country, after both had moved to Washington. Four thousand dollars' worth were sold to six persons, the rest was accumulated from $25 and $50 sales—most of them made during the past week.

"Please mention the girl I married," McDermott told a Post reporter last night. "She kept things going while I sold bonds." And bonds aren't sold by telephone, according to Mrs. McDermott. Her husband used his blarney in person, she said.

McDermott has a personal interest in this war. His son Aloysius, 27, is training as a gunner in the Army Air Corps. Two of his daughters are Mrs. Ensign William F. Babington, who lives with her husband and Francis, jr., in Seattle, and Mrs. Donald Brant, bride of 1½ months, who lives at home, and whose husband is a sergeant in the Marines. Daughters Marguerite, USO hostess, and Elvira, schoolgirl, also live at home.

Asked if most of his friends are Irish, McDermott said he didn't know. Apparently they are American.

Dealer Denies Selling Meat Without Getting OPA Coupons

By Arthur Dawson

Post Staff Writer

Samuel Shanker, operator of the Country Gardens Markets in Arlington and Alexandria, Va., yesterday denied charges brought by the OPA that he had sold meat without taking the proper number of rationing coupons.

The hearing, held in the County Courthouse in Arlington, was originally slated for June 15, but was postponed until yesterday because of the illness of Defense Attorney Frank L. Ball. Held before Hearing Commissioner Ellsworth Clark of OPA headquarters in Washington, it was the first hearing on rationing violations in northern Virginia.

Shanker took the stand in his own defense only briefly late in the afternoon before the hearing was recessed to be resumed at 11 this morning.

Virginia State OPA Prosecutors Robert W. Keyser and Reginald Watt produced a battery of witnesses to testify that they had purchased meats without surrendering the proper number of ration coupons.

Marvin F. Cooper of North Washington Boulevard told the commissioner that on April 30, the date that his coupons expired, he had made a meat purchase at the Rosslyn store and had been asked for the coupons he had left over. He said that he did not give the store all of his extra coupons.

Later Mrs. Edith Peterson of Alexandria testified that on the same day at the Alexandria store she had presented expired coupons for a meat purchase and that they had been accepted without question. She said that when she later saw her error, she had reported it to the OPA.

Mrs. Ruth Gavins, a neighbor of Mrs. Peterson, related that when she bought some canned goods, the clerk had refused to take the coupons. When she protested, she said, she was referred to the boy wrapping her package, who in turn, she testified, told her to "forget it."

Mrs. Beatrice Hurley of Arlington testified that when she attempted to hand over meat coupons on April 30, she was told not to bother about it and was further admonished that any time she was short of meat coupons, "just ask for Mike at the meat counter." She said that out of about 60 coupons needed for the sale, seven "E" coupons for butter and five for lard were returned to her.

Miss Florence Gravatte of Arlington said that on the same day she had purchased meat and that the store had taken no coupons.

W. J. Dohelan, OPA investigator testified that he had inspected the Alexandria store on April 2 and had questioned the points requirements for some of the meats. He said he had been told that the operators of the store had secured permission to reduce the points because some of the meat was in danger of spoiling.

Irvin B. Huffner of the Alexandria Rationing Board testified that the store operators had sought permission to reduce meat points, which had been refused. Within an hour, after the operators left the board, he said, the stores had posted placards advertising drastic point reductions. He exhibited a large poster showing the reductions.

It was testified by Dr. L. T. Hopkins, OPA meat inspector, that he had visited the Alexandria store later on April 2, and although there was about 4000 pounds of meat on hand, none of it was in danger of spoiling within the next seven or eight days and that it would last considerably longer with proper refrigeration.

Shanker on the stand declared that he had always made every effort to abide by OPA regulations. He added that his business amounted to about two million dollars a year and that it would have been impossible for him to continue such a business or to buy the necessary produce i. he did not surrender the stamps for his own stock purchases. He had about 300 employes working in the four stores, he said.

Testifying for the defense were County Police Court Judge B. M. Hedrick, who said that he had dealt with the store since it first opened and that he had always been required to produce the proper coupons, and Dr. Ralph Beachley, county health officer, who declared that he frequently inspected the stores with his inspectors and made purchases with his wife, and he had always had to give coupons.

Treasury Warns Cars Must Carry Stamp Tomorrow

The American Automobile Association yesterday called for a moratorium on payment of the auto use tax, criticized in Congress as a "pay-as-you-don't-go" plan, but the Treasury said the law is the law, and new $5 windshield stickers must be displayed after today.

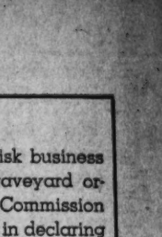
Guy T. Helvering, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, issued a formal reminder that the tax is due, and said motorists not paying it would be subject to "severe penalties."

Senator Mead (Democrat) of New York, saying the tax ought to be repealed since the gasoline-rubber shortage restricts use of cars, dubbed it the "pay-as-you-don't-go" plan.

Two Named To District Judgeships

Thomas D. Quinn Chosen to Take Newman's Place; Scott Reappointed

President Roosevelt nominated two men for judgeships in the Municipal Court of the District yesterday and sent their names to the Senate for approval.



QUINN

Thomas D. Quinn, administrative assistant to the Attorney General, was chosen to succeed Judge Hobart Newman, who announced yesterday that he had resigned informally three months ago. The other nomination was that of Judge Armond W. Scott for reappointment.

Quinn, a native of New Hampshire, and living at 3310 Stevenson Place Northwest, if confirmed, will assume his duties in August. He is now in Philadelphia attending a judicial conference.

In announcing that he had tendered his resignation to the Justice Department, Judge Newman said: "There are thousands of reasons.

To give one would be silly. But no matter what my critics say, I can say that I, during my six years on the bench, never put out a guy for politics, and I gave everybody what they deserved, no matter who they were."

Judge Newman has been criticized and at one time was investigated by the Justice Department on several grounds, one that he was temperamentally unsuited for his position. He was exonerated. Many jurists and lawyers at the courthouse yesterday said they considered Judge Newman the "fairest judge on the bench."

Judge Newman, a native of Washington, attended George Washington University for two years and received his law degree from National University in 1928. After his graduation, he was associated with the United States district attorney's office.

SCOTT

Subsequently he worked for three years with the Radio Commission, and in the claims division of the Department of Justice. He had served for nearly six years before resigning his last position. He is married and lives at 1850 Forty-seventh Place Northwest.

Judge Scott, a Negro, has served two terms as judge here. Noted for his wit on the bench, he was recently commended by a California jurist for his "judicial demeanor." A native of Wilmington, N. C, he moved to this city in 1898. He was graduated from Biddle University, a now defunct law school. His home is at 1922 Eleventh Street Northwest.

House Urged To Indorse Land Swap

Approval of a land "swap" between the United States and a District sand and gravel dealer was urged yesterday by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission at a hearing before the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee.

In order to protect the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway, the commission asked approval of a bill to accept 260 acres of land along the Potomac River south of Alexandria, from the Smoot Sand & Gravel Co. In return the commission proposed to give the gravel company a 20-year privilege to dredge 85 acres of Federal property located nearby, but not adjacent to the highway.

Because of opposition by Representative McGregor (Republican), Ohio, the committee delayed action on the request until a subcommittee with McGregor as chairman could inspect the properties involved tomorrow.

McGregor objected to the transaction because the 85 acres of Federal property involved contain three million cubic yards, or four million tons, of sand and gravel. He pointed out that at the present retail price of gravel, $1.30 a ton, the Smoot company would receive five million dollars.

Thomas P. Settle, secretary of the commission, said that 110 of the acres the company would cede to the Government also contain sand and gravel and both he and representatives of the company said that unless Congress took action to pass the requested measure the company would be forced to start dredging along the highway.

HOTFOOT FINDS

(No Coupons Needed)

By Ruth Gregory

The battle's on . . . feet vs. sidewalks. If your feet are losing out, don't heap coals on WPB . . . they're hot enough already. Because there are some cool and trim unrationed shoes around that will rub the dragged-down lines right off your face.

They aren't easy to find, that's true. There are plenty of those novelty sandals that look and feel okay beside the shining waters . . . that doesn't include the water-cooler in your office. But "playshoes" (we call them that for lack of a better name) that you can wear to work, for dates, that perk up your summer wardrobe instead of pulling it down to beach level, are just now beginning to stand upon their own two soles. We've all been shouting for them . . . here are a couple.

They're smart as anything. As a matter of fact, they look like rationed shoes. That's because they're styled pretty much like some of the better coupon shoes. That black gabardine wedgy, for instance, wasn't just thrown together helter-skelter. It was designed for your town clothes, and you'll feel dressed in it, whether at high noon or midnight . . . for about $6.

The huaraches you've seen before, but they look good all over again . . . either in all white . . . or in a three-tone color combination. What's more, they're all leather from the sole to the softly-woven upper . . . and only $3.

If (with all due respect to Kipling) you don't mind the 5 o'clock fatigue which comes from wearing poorly-fitted shoes . . . if you don't feel the heat boiling through thin-soled flip-flops . . . if you aren't aware of that "two-way" look (the top of you going neatly off to business, and the legs all set for a frolic on the beach) . . . why then . . . what then? All our shopping was in vain.

Women's Club News

By Genevieve Reynolds

It was a lively affair—hottest remarks were off the record. But Elmer Davis of OWI and Mrs. Roosevelt both had a chance to tell what they think of the way Washington reporters cover the news. Occasion—the inaugu ration of new officers of the Women's National Press Club at dinner last night in the Statler Hotel.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Recently Mr. Davis, who has had his appropriations axed by Congress, went up to Boston to speak at the annual convention of the American Newspaper Guild. In his speech before the group he stated that Washington correspondents gave too much space to bickering in Washington bureaus and too little to news of the Government's big accomplishments. So last night the press gals gave him an opportunity to set the record straight—which he did. Also, the club gathered in heads of the various news organizations to hear him so there would be no mistake this time.

Before Mr. Davis embarked on his final opinion of the Washington correspondents, Mrs. Roosevelt told how her press conference looks to her. For 10 years the women of her conference have written about her. This time she had a chance to tell how she thinks they cover the news she gives them.

Highlight of the inaugural ceremony was the presentation of the club's gift, a silver bowl, to Christine Sadler, retiring president. Mrs. Craig, incoming president, officiated and in turn received from Miss Sadler the Cora-Rigby silver bowl. The names of all the club presidents are inscribed on the bowl and each president of the club keeps it during her year of office.

Did You Know That . . .

The Washington, D. C., Chapter Special Libraries Association, won the national membership award of the organization. Mrs. Virginia Lee Wenzell, librarian of the Civil Service Commission, accepted the award for the Washington group at the recent wartime conference of special librarians held in New York City.

A number of the local members attended the conference and gave reports. Dr. Francis Fitzgerald, librarian, Office of Quartermaster General and Signal Corps, War Department, who is the incoming president of the Washington chapter, reported on activities. Phillips Temple, librarian of Riggs Memorial Library of Georgetown University, was named national vice president.

"Planning Through Knowledge" was the theme of the second wartime conference of the Special Libraries Association, which has just completed a three-day session in New York."

Miss Gretchen Felker succeeds Miss Mabel R. Cook as director of the popular USO CLUB at the Y. W. C. A. penthouse, Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest. She takes over her duties tomorrow. In the meantime, Miss Cook leaves today for a vacation. Upon returning, July 22, she will work as a national USO representative of the USO for the entire Washington area.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Contrary to Lifetime Deportment as a Gentleman, Man of 30, Member of Fine Family, Has Recently Started Flirting Promiscuously; Fiancee Is Worried

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: When you read this, I hope you won't think I am making a mountain out of a molehill. I am scheduled to be married two months from today; but something has come up which is causing me to think twice about going through with the wedding. I have been engaged for two years to a young man I have known nearly all my life. His family and mine are closest friends. His mother is a perfectly lovely person and he has been well brought up and very well educated. Both our families are in "comfortable" circumstances; and have given us practically everything.

We are not youngsters,—I being 26 and he 30. He is not in the armed forces; but for a very creditable reason. (However, that is another story and beside the point). He really is very much in love with me (and I with him); and he is very eager to be married to me. In that respect, everything is decidedly okay. We have always lived here and both of us have a great many mutual friends, as well as a good many friends whom the other hasn't met. We often meet up with these latter, and then there are gay introductions and sometimes we team up with them on a party, dancing and changing partners;—and we do have lots of fun. I just mention this to show that I am NOT one of those jealous women who doesn't want her man to see or speak to anyone else.

For the last year, quite contrary to his lifetime behavior, my fiance has commenced to give the "glad eye" to almost every woman he passes, hoping she will notice him and flirt back. The nice ones pay no attention; but he cannot refrain from trying to win a smile and a glance from every girl he passes,—even when he is in the company of the girl he is going to marry. For a long time, I thought nothing of it. Then I began to notice his grins and "goo-goo" eyes. At first, I would say, "Who is that?" It didn't dawn on me for a long time that he didn't really KNOW them. He never knew the names and would pass it off with, "She's a girl I see sometimes going down in the elevator at our office building." Or, "She sometimes comes down on the same bus." Or something like that.

Now, I am not snobbish; and count many shabby and humble people among my acquaintances and friends,—people I have met through my Settlement work. These people may look poor, but they always look respectable. However, my fiance is interested only in the flashy, cheap, perfectly obvious (to any woman) girls,—the kind who are willing to flirt with any man they can get to look at them (if only just in passing); the kind that no nice woman would want to be seen talking to. You know the kind I mean: Not the woman who acknowledges an acquaintance the moment she sees him, with a more or less dignified greetings;—but the kind who grin and ogle, etc. One day, my fiance exchanged flirtatious smiles and glances with such an obvious jallopy that I said, "Who under the sun was that girl?" And he said, "I thought I knew her, but I guess I didn't." Then I asked, "Where would you ever meet a girl like that? And if you had just barely met her, why fall all over yourself trying to attract her attention with grins and eye-work? You should be thankful for an excuse to sidestep her." He replied, "Yes, I guess so. Anyway, I don't know her."

He Offers Strange Excuses for Conduct

I got to thinking about it after I got home. I realized then clearly for the first time that he never goes out of his way to speak to men or elderly women or even respectable girls;—just the gaudy, tawdry kind. We have had several discussions about it,—very friendly ones at first; but the last one was very bitter. The way his mind worked was a revelation to me. He said, among other things, that he had to be polite and speak to any woman who spoke to him. I told him I certainly didn't have to be polite to any man who tried to pick me up; and that a well-brought-up man didn't have to act perfectly enthusiastic over every woman who accosted him; and certainly didn't have to put a sickly grin on his face and start trying to catch the girl's eye, even before she noticed him. I said I didn't know what he did when he was alone; but that it was VERY embarrassing to have him act that way in my company; and that if he was so set on being "polite," he might start by being polite toward me, and not make me ashamed of going out with a man so vulgar,—a man with the "Hyah Babe" attitude toward women, trying to attract the attention of anyone nasty enough to respond. If he were some low bred, uneducated, zoot-suited oaf, he might not know any better. But he isn't. If he had been, I should not have liked him, nor gone out with him in the first place, much less agreed to marry him.

And that's the point. What chance would a marriage have, with a husband acting like that, and the wife feeling and talking about it as I do? At one time, I thought that when he was married, he would stop this "eyeing" all comers. But they say that a man is on his best behavior just before marriage; and that his real character comes out after the honeymoon. So what? I can't think what life would be like without him. Certainly not worth much. And everything else is so perfect. I have even told him that I couldn't marry a man who promiscuously offers himself to all takers with such unbridled enthusiasm. He said, "Honey, those girls mean nothing to me; only kind of exciting; but I can't NOT speak to them when they speak to me." Is that a correct point of view? I feel I can't face a lifetime of that. I haven't put in a lot of things which might make you understand better (some of the things he said in our formerly "friendly" discussions), which show his attiude of mind. After all, it isn't just his ogling of girls on the streets; but the excuses he gives; and this vulgar and disgusting side of his character, so totally unexpected, which frightens me. If he acts like that now, how will he act later? And if he isn't willing to stop it now, to please me,—what can I expect after marriage? Please give me your advice, as the time is so short.

Behavior Suggests Inferiority Complex

DEAR C. C. F.: It's high time you pulled your head out of the sand and took a really good look at the problem confronting you and decided whether (a) to take to your heels for good and all; or (b) to stand your ground and see what, if anything, can be done to rescue your fiance from his increasingly morbid-minded plight. It seems to me very significant that this noxious metamorphosis of personality ("quite contrary to his lifetime behavior"), has developed just in the last year,—a year during which he has doubtless felt (both consciously and unconsciously) acutely defensive about the fact that he is NOT in uniform (the "very creditable reason" for which he cannot, of course, confide in the rank-and-file of metropolitan passersby).

The psychiatrists have a term for the man who promiscuously plays the field of women,—a game which your fiance has (we may assume) engaged only imaginatively thus far. The term is, "sexual athelete;" and the definition, as supplied by Dr. W. Beran Wolfe, is: "One who attempts by the demonstration of sexual virtuosity to indicate his universal human validity." Dr. Wolfe goes on to explain that the striving male flirt or libertine is fundamentally prey to the most profoundly disturbing doubts as to his masculine worth, as a man among men or essentially useful member of society;—and seeks in the chanticleer role to persuade himself and others that he is a compelling "he-man." Dr. Wolfe says of such men that whereas they may become masters in the strategy of approaching and besieging the female, they are the veriest tyroes at the finer art of holding the love of one woman for any length of time. In essence, their conquest-conduct is motivated by fear,—or inferiority feelings.

His Civilian Garb Is Getting Him Down

As a chap who has been given "practically everything" by comfortably well-to-do parents, your fiance obviously had no necessity and probably little opportunity to carve out any strictly individual "successes" for himself, during his growing-up years, such as would have invested him with solid self esteem,—by proving to his own and others' satisfaction that he has what it takes to stand squarely on his own two feet and give good account of himself, in rigorous competition with his fellows. Add to his probably vacuous past personal history the fact that he finds himself today, when "the flower of young manhood" is in uniform, still to all appearances a sideline sitter or "cull" (i. e., something rejected as inferior or worthless),—and you have the makings of a profound sense of self distrust and self deprecation, which (as aforementioned) frequently drives men to seek ego-reassurance in the game of Eros.

If this is the motivation of your beau's behavior, naturally he would be the last person to realize it,—since the conscious mind of the neurotic individual is constantly on the alert to suppress the truth concerning his innermost psychic distress. The neurotic's conscious mind will advance any and every excuse for unstable behavior, rather than 'fess up to and face the real skeleton in the closet. Thus, the evasive nature of his "excuses" to you is perhaps the best explanation he can give,—even to himself,—for his latterday "ogling" of women.

Now, for specific advice: 1. Don't marry the man unless and until he has completely recovered from his "inferiority" seizure. 2. It should be clear from what I have said, that this is a problem for a psychiatrist. The man has no business getting married until he has cleared up those inner misgivings which are causing him to act like a rotter today. He has a moral responsibility to himself and to you (i. e., to his future wife and possible offspring), to establish rational control over his instincts and emotions, as a guarantee of spiritual constancy and social decorum in the role of husband, before getting married. Until he establishes that control, he is an unfit candidate for marriage. His actions as described would desecrate marriage; and his wife's love and self respect would shrivel under mounting shame. 3. Tell him, with firm finality, that you will marry him ONLY ON CONDITION that (a) he enlists a good psychiatrist's help in solving his problem; and (b) the psychiatrist is able to give you positive assurance that he can and will outgrow the habit. 4. Then keep your word. The embarrassment you have known recently as his fiance is the merest sample of the scalding chagrin that would be yours in mounting measure, if you risked marriage with him in his present state. M. H.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

There would seem to be no really valid excuse for feeding a 17-pound child every three hours during the day and then giving a night feeding, too. A diet which would inspire a child to eat so often must be a deficient one.

Mrs. A. O. K. wonders why her baby should seem to suffer pain when he has a bowel movement. "He cries pitifully and it does not seem to be from gas."

She explains her daytime schedule calls for meals at 7-10-12-1-4-7 and then again at 4 a. m., if the baby wakens for it. He gets 26 ounces of fresh milk, 8 ounces of water and 4 tablespoons of corn sirup. He is 7 months old and weighs 17 pounds.

The formula seems to be all right, though 6 ounces of water would make it even better. It isn't easy to determine why the child should suffer pain, though a large, solid movement and a very tight anus might be a combination that would cause pain. Perhaps a change to a more usual schedule of three or four meals a day might work a beneficial change. Also, if the doctor approved, he might use a rectal dilator so as to ease up any unusually tight muscle.

Change from your present schedule to four meals a day and then, if the baby shows any disposition to leave portions of the formula or refuse the solid foods, change to three meals.

Our leaflet, "Feeding, From 2 to 9 Months," may be had by sending a 3-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred, in care of this newspaper.

Market Report On Vegetables And Fruits

As a guide to homemakers for their early-in-the-week shopping, market reporters of the U. S. Department of Agriculture advise that potatoes are now plentiful on the Washington wholesale market. The price has sagged during the last few days, and the quality is generally good. The market includes some quite small potatoes and as a word of caution, avoid the purchase of any that are wet or spongy, even though the skin appears unbroken, for such potatoes are apt to have interior rot or decay.

You can find good quality tomatoes on the market, but they are expensive. Tomatoes are in moderate supply which indicates a sufficient amount but not overly abundant. Look for firmness when buying tomatoes. Even though a tomato is green around the stem end, it can be placed in the sun to ripen, and a good quality maintained. Cabbage supplies are light, and the price has climbed higher during the last few days. The quality is generally good. Choose heads that are heavy, and a small head will be of better quality than a large light one. Snap beans are not quite as plentiful as a week ago, but the supply is sufficient. They include both the round and flat bean, and the quality of both varieties is generally good. The round bean is a little easier to keep crisp and in good condition than the flat. Among both kinds you may find some with insect blight due to the hot weather. Lima beans are in very light supply, their prices rather high, and those available are not of the best quality.

Yellow crook neck squash from nearby sections is on the market in moderate supply. It is low in price and the quality only fair, but with good selection you can find good squash available. Avoid those that are soft and rubbery. Cucumbers are plentiful and moderately priced.

Lafayette Square, 1943

I

In a world of clash and discord, it is a place soft, muted and serene,
Lafayette Square at dusk.
And soldiers and sailors who may soon be off to the blood and sweat of battle,
Find in it a temporary sanctuary,
Of fragrant quietude and romantic murmurs;
A place where sweethearts stroll, and young girls walk together,
Casting shy glances at the loitering, eager-faced boys in uniform.
And youth calls to youth above the call of war or death or duty.

II

There is the smell of freshly cut grass and of white clover,
And from the treetops,
The "good-night" twitterings of birds: and here and there a belated robin
Hurries with its last worm; while pigeons crowd about the servicemen with peanuts,
Boldly and vulgarly concerned with food,
Despite the magic of the moment.

And down where Lafayette, youngest of all the men in bronze,
Stands with his face turned to the horizon, a a young soldier stoops, nut in hand,
Gently and patiently coaxing a suspicious young squirrel to trust him.

III

Brown-faced young men in the white garb of the Navy,
Lie face downward in the grass,
Perhaps they are farm boys homesick for the smell of earth and clover;
Light laughter drifts from where a group of men in duck and khaki
Sit on the grass together with girls in uniform—so trim and fresh complexioned.
And two handsome lads on a bench politely lift their Army caps
And exclaim "Whew" when a pretty young face passes.

IV

This is a place of memory, a place where history hovers,
Where the returning Lafayette was greeted;
Where citizens danced 'til dawn to honor on his birthnight,
The Father of his Country;
Where Madison was welcomed home from Europe,
Where the hilarious mob celebrated the inauguration of Old Hickory,
First President of the people, who still lingers here waving his hat from his bronze charger;
Where Union soldiers camped, where office seekers, tourists long have gathered,
And toward which statesmen, warriors, others of the Nation's great,
Turned seeking peace, escape, or guidance at their windows.

V

It becomes night, the deep blue sky and the stars come closer to the earth.
The moon is suspended,
Like a great red paper lantern at a lawn fete,
The White House columns gray, the monument grows hazier against the sky;
The gracious, full-bosomed trees become dark and mysterious;
The surrounding old houses in which history once was made,
Are shut off by the night; voices are softer, the air more tropical and fragrant;
The past recedes; Lafayette Square no longer belongs to history,
Only to youth and to the moment—and perhaps,
To youth's happy, sustaining dream in an onerous tomorrow.

The berry season is at its peak So are their prices. If you are not too stunned when you go to market and learn that red raspberries run the scale from 39 to 55 cents a pint, and blackraspberries dent your budget to the tune of about 45 cents a quart, while blackberries are slightly more modest in their price—about 39 cents a quart, then you might count them in on the dinner menu if they are a favorite fruit with your family.

That's one shock I experienced recently as concerns food prices. But the incident which made me see "red" was when I learned that IF you wanted to buy some nice, sleek, yellow bananas at 13 cents per pound at a certain market, you would have to make at least one other purchase. So it seems that it boils down now that it is a privilege to be able to buy bananas.

But you can make a few berries go a long way if you combine them with cubes of enriched bread to make Raspberry Fluff. Vanilla wafer crumbs, egg whites, a bit of sugar and butter, plus some red raspberries make a dessert not to be forgotten soon after eating it.

Dinner Menu

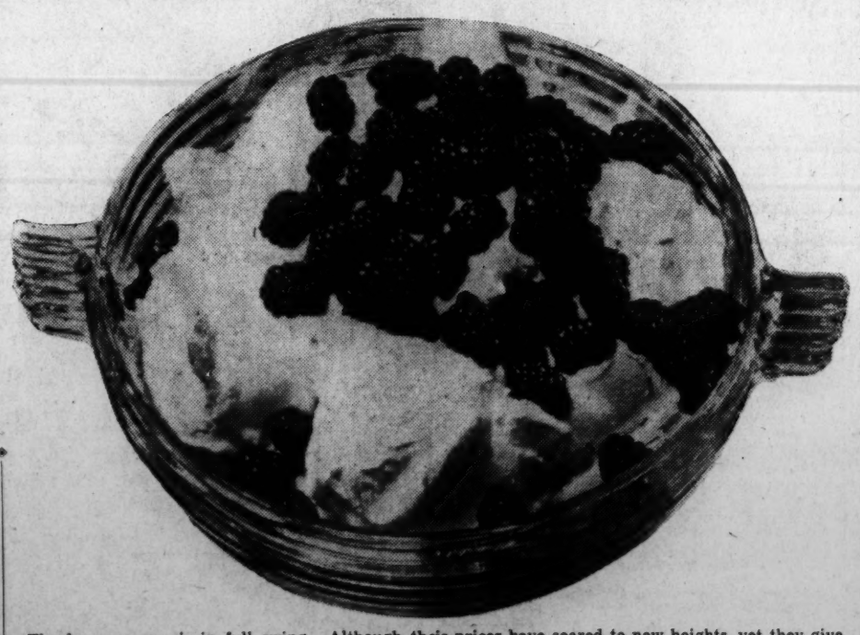
Egg Cutlet With Creamed Peas
Sliced Tomato Salad
Enriched White Bread Butter
Raspberry Fluff Iced Tea

EGG CUTLETS WITH CREAMED PEAS

Heat 1 cup milk in a double boiler. Mix together 3 tablespoons fat and 5 tablespoons enriched flour. Stir into the hot milk, until a smooth thick paste. Add 3 chopped hard-cooked eggs, 1 cup enriched bread cubes, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, ¼ teaspoon onion juice (if desired), ½ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Mix well. Turn out on platter to cool. When cold, shape into cutlets to resemble meat chops, patties, ovals or triangles. Dip in 1 egg which has been beaten, then dip into bread crumbs and fry until well browned, or bake them 30 minutes at 350 degrees. Pour creamed peas around cutlets. Yield: Six servings.

RASPBERRY FLUFF

Combine 2 cups hot milk, 3 tablespoons sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, and ½ teaspoon vanilla. Cool and add 2 slightly beaten eggs. Put 2 cups enriched bread cubes in greased custard cups or ring mold and pour milk mixture over it. Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, 25 minutes. Unmold. Serve hot or cold with berries over top. Yield: Six servings.



The berry season is in full swing. Although theis prices have soared to new heights, yet they give much needed vitamins and minerals. Here are some luscious blackberries topping an ice cream concoction. But they can be baked into nutritious and flavorsome desserts too.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

The trouble with your exercise may be that you work at it too hard at first. If you are not used to any exercise and start out too briskly for your unconditioned muscles, you will give up quickly and maybe for all time.

Here is what you have to expect. After not exercising for years you must allow about three days for getting good and sore and about three more for getting rid of the soreness. Once you have gone through that stage, you are all set.

It will be less painful if you ease into your program. Start with smooth, gentle movements. Raise one arm up, around and back from the shoulder in a long, slow sweep, then the other arm. Stretch and reach. Don't just swing through it.

Lie on your back on the floor but don't try to come up to a sitting position and touch your toes right off. First, just raise your head and look down at your toes. Do this rhythmically, about five or six times, and keep all your muscles except those involved in the movement perfectly relaxed and try to keep the small of your back pressed flat against the floor. As you get into better condition you will be able to come up to sitting position and touch your toes, but for a time you may find it a good idea to anchor your feet under the radiator or a chest of drawers. Ultimately, you want to be able to do that exercise under your own power.

Roll over, face downward on floor, with hands clasped in back, feet anchored under the radiator, and see how high you can raise your head, trunk and arms. Hold it, and lower. That is an excellent exercise for arms, shoulders and stomach.

One of the slow moving exercises for slimming the hips is one of the best. But you have to think about what you are doing. Correct posture is everything in this exercise. Stand erect, roll the hips down and under and pull up with the lower abdominal muscles, but keep shoulders relaxed. Now, hold that posture, contract the hip muscles strongly, and push one leg upward, knee straight, into the hip joint. You should be able to get your foot about two inches off the floor without swaying out to the other side. In fact, the trick is to hold the hips rigid. Now, turn the toes of the lifted foot inward, pigeontoed fashion, and very slowly move the leg out to the side, hold for an instant, return to position and lower to floor. Repeat with other leg. It takes time and thought to do this exercise correctly and if you only repeat it a couple of counts in the day's program, that will be enough for the first week. It is more of a workout than you might think—as your muscles will tell you!

These exercises are fine conditioners for anyone who has not been used to exercise. What's more, they are really streamlining.

The Professor Looks at Stockings

(O. P. A. Regulation M-339)

THE NEWER Jelleff's 1214-20 F Street

Today we present three branded stockings:

They are the well-known Gold Stripe, the makers of which were among the pioneers in developing rayon stockings into good-looking wearable stockings when silk and nylon went out of the picture. We think they did a fine job. Here are three of their numbers:

Gold Stripe Style 728—This is a 100 denier stocking—42 gauge—rather heavy in appearance—with cotton reinforced toe. Statistics say the average American woman is less than 5 feet four inches in height and as this stocking averages 27 inches in length, it will suit her for length. 84c pair

Gold Stripe Style 779—Adjustables—can be adjusted to three different lengths for women of different heights—75 denier, 45 gauge—rayon with cotton reinforced toe. 92c pair

Gold Stripe Style 757—This is a 50 denier, 51 gauge stocking—sheerer than the stockings above—yet the cotton reinforced toe gives it extra wearing qualities—a beautiful stocking in summer shades. $1.05 pair

In spite of the excellent quality of these stockings, in our judgment, the professor says to mark them Grade B. But in a short time, no doubt, some rather minor changes will be made on these styles (minor in our judgment at least) and they will be marked Grade A.

In the meantime, we are glad to be able to offer these stockings to you because no matter what they are stamped, we consider them mighty fine stockings.

We hope the women in the professor's family will try a few pairs, if they have not done so already. We'd like their opinion, too.

Mrs. Emmet Carlyle Gudger has leased her apartment on Crescent Place and has opened her lodge at Lake McDonald, Mont., for the summer. With her is her daughter, Miss Gloria Gudger, who is on vacation from Vassar, and Miss Elinor Carlyle Gudger, who has been modeling in New York.

Capt. and Mrs. William Appleton Aiken and their two children are spending the summer in Middleburg, Va. They have leased Miss Katherine Woodward's home there.

Mrs. Abbey Welch has returned to her home in Annapolis, Md., after a visit to Jacksonville, Fla., where she attended the wedding of her daughter, Lucy Anne, and Ensign Earl Preston Yates of Winston-Salem, N. C. The ceremony, which took place in the chapel of the Naval Air Base, was followed by a reception at the Officers Club. Mrs. Yates is the granddaughter of B. Allein Welch of Annapolis and the late Susan Ogle Welch.

Miss Anne Bryan, daughter of Comdr. and Mrs. Hamilton V. Bryan, is spending several days in New York.

Now installed at The Mill, on the Middle Gate farm of Mrs. Dorothy Radford, in Virginia, are Lieut. and Mrs. Barrington Elliot and their two sons, Bart and Douglas. They will make their home there while Lieutenant Elliot, who has been transferred from Fort Monroe, is on duty in Washington.

Mrs. E. F. Fulton has as her house guest her sister, Mrs. G. W. Vond of San Diego, Calif. Mrs. Vond is the former Miss Virginia McKinney of this city. Her husband is now stationed at Quantico, Va.

The Woman's National Democratic Club has sent out invitations to a 6 to 8 o'clock reception tomorrow in honor of the members of the British Services Club.

Maj. Philip Ershler, who has been stationed in Austin, Tex., is spending the week with Mr. and Mrs. Norman Fischer at the Park Towers Apartments.

Comdr. Fitzgerald Fetes Fiancee At F Street Club

In compliment to his fiancee, Miss Annelise Petschek of New York, Lieut. Comdr. W. H. G. Fitzgerald entertained at a late afternoon party yesterday at the 1925 F Street Club. The bride-elect, who is widely known in Washington, arrived early yesterday for a brief visit. She returned to New York last night.

Plans are being completed for the wedding, which will take place in St. Patrick's Cathedral on July 2, and will be followed by a reception at the Ritz-Carlton. Miss Petschek is the daughter of Mrs. Vera Petschek of New York City and Ernest Friedrich Petschek of Scarsdale, N. Y., formerly of Czecho-Slovakia.

Buffet Supper To Be Fete for Rep. Baldwin

Representative Joseph Clark Baldwin of New York, chairman of the national committee for the National Symphony Orchestra, will be honored by the orchestra's board of directors tomorrow evening at a buffet supper given for him at the 1925 F Street Club in appreciation of his successful efforts to obtain contributions on a national scale for the orchestra. Funds obtained by Mr. Baldwin's committee will be used to extend the National Symphony's length of season and to increase its personnel. They do not become operative until the full goal of the local drive for $115,000, of which $15,000 is still lacking, is obtained.

Some 120 invitations were sent this week by Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, in charge of arrangements for the affair. Included among the acceptances are those of the Ambassador of Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitch; the Netherlands Ambassador, Alexander Loudon; the Swedish Minister and Mme. Bostrom, Hugo Wistrand, Mrs. R. H. Dunlap, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Finkenstaedt, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Dr. Hans Kindler, Mr. and Mrs. B. M. McKelway, Mr. and Mrs. John T. O'Rourke, Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, and Mrs. Mathew John Whittall.

Hosts at the affair will be the following members of the National Symphony Orchestra's board of directors: Corcoran Thom, president; Mr. Howe, vice president; Mr. Finkenstaedt, secretary and assistant treasurer; Miss Mary B. Adams, Mrs. Bliss, Miss Alice J. Clapp, Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong and William Jay Turner, honorary vice presidents; Milton W. King, treasurer; Mrs. Peter Belin, Harold A. Brooks, Mrs. Eugene Byrne, Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Charles W. Eliot 2d, George Angus Garrett, Mrs. C. C. Glover, jr.; Lieut. John Rowland Hill, A. F. E. Horn, Frank Jelleff, David B. Karrick, Mark Lansburgh, Mrs. Reeve Lewis, Mrs. Reeve Lewis, jr., Mr. Archibald MacLeish, Dr. William McClellan, Harry G. Meem, Thomas P. Morgan, jr., Mrs. Parker, Lieut. Col. L. Corrin Strong, Mrs. A. Lloyd Symington and Mrs. Edwin M. Watson.

W. M. Andersons Are Now on Wedding Trip

Now on a brief wedding trip are Lieut. and Mrs. Walter Marion Anderson, jr., whose wedding took place on Saturday at the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church. The Rev. John W. Rustin officiated at the ceremony, which took place at 8 o'clock before an altar banked with white gladioli, carnations and gypsophila.

The bride is the former Miss Jane Pauline Jones, daughter of Cable Bernard Jones of Las Vegas, Nev., and Lieut. Anderson, U. S. N. R., is the son of Capt. Walter M. Anderson (MC) U. D. N., and Mrs. Anderson.

In the absence of her father, Charles E. Perrin of Chicago, Ill., escorted the bride to the altar. Her gown was of white silk marquisette and lace over taffeta, with long sleeves, a tight-fitting bodice and a bouffant skirt, deep ruffled at the bottom with lace inserts and ending in a train. Her fingertip veil of illusion fell from a tiered coronet of lace and she carried a white bible covered with a single white orchid and streamers of stephanotis.

Miss Irene Jacobson, a girlhood friend of the bride, was the only attendant. She wore a pastel blue princess style gown of silk marquisette with wide bands of lace and a matching picture hat. Her shower bouquet was of spring flowers. Lieut. Roger B. Peterson, U. S. N. R., served as best man and the ushers were Lieut. (j. g.) Gerard R. Torborg, jr., U. S. N. R., and Lieut. (j. g.) Harry A. Vosberg, U. S. N. R.

Immediately following the wedding a reception was held at the Kenesaw.

Dinner Given by Eduardo Danis

Eduardo Danis, Minister-Attache of the Spanish Embassy, and Senora de Danis entertained at dinner last evening at the Shoreham and will be hosts at luncheon today at the Mayflower.

Guests last night included the Ambassador of Chile and Senora de Michels, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Col. Pierre Biegbeder of Spain, Senor Ernesto Calvo and Senora de Calvo and Mme. Georges-Picot.

Nancy Curtis Scott And R. C. Dixon Wed in Vermont

Special Dispatch to The Post

Brandon, Vt., June 29.—In a ceremony in the St. Thomas Episcopal Church here Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock, Miss Nancy Curtis Scott became the bride of Rogert Colt Dixon. The Rev. Roy E. Green, rector of the church, officiated. A reception followed at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. James Rittenhouse Scott.

Given in marriage by her cousin, David E. Austen of Washington, D. C., the bride wore a gown of frosted organdy, accented with a short train and a tulle veil caught to a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of orchids, bouvardia and white roses. Miss Patricia Balz of University, Va., was maid of honor, and bridesmaids were Miss Sally Sheffield of Washington and Miss Caroline Dixon, sister of the bridegroom, of Princeton, N. J.

Lieut. (j. g.) Ralph Kaul of Washington, Oliver Huntley of Leicester, Vt., Dean Vittum of Chicago, and Lieut. Charles Helmer of Newport, were the ushers.

The former Miss Scott, the daughter of the late James Rittenhouse Scott, was graduated from St. Anne's School, Charlottesville, Va., and attended Columbia University. She is connected with the British Air Commission here.

Miss Sherard Weds Ensign J. H. Petty

Ensign John Hilliard Petty, jr., U. S. N. R., and his bride, who was Miss Alice Beverly Sherard before her marriage on Saturday, June 26, will make their home in Washington when they return from a wedding trip.

Both the bride and bridegroom are members of prominent Mississippi families identified with the early history of the State, its growth and progress. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Holmes Sherard of Sherard, Miss. Ensign Petty's parents are Mr. and Mrs. John H. Petty of Greenwood, Miss.

The wedding was held in the chapel of Mount Vernon Place Church, with the Rev. John W. Rustin officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a street-length frock of sheer white crepe with a halo hat of white horsehair. Her corsage was of white and purple orchids.

The bridegroom's sister, Mrs. Fred M. Sandifer, jr., of Greenwood, Miss., and Murfreesboro, Tenn., was the matron of honor, wearing an aqua costume with a small ribbon hat of a deeper shade. Her flowers were Talisman roses. Mr. Petty was his son's best man, and the ushers were Lieut. (j. g.) William M. Whittington, jr., U. S. N., son of Representative and Mrs. Whittington, and William H. Harper, jr. A reception followed the ceremony at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mr. Petty, father of the bridegroom, is manager of the Planters' Oil Mill and former president of the National Cottonseed Crushers Association. The bride's father, Mr. Sherard, is owner of one of the most extensive plantations in the South.

June, Traditional Month Of Brides, Is Record-Setter

Marion Owens Is Wed to Lieut. Felix Hourdequin in St. Matthew's Sacristy

June, always the traditional bride's month, started out with a flurry of wartime nuptials and is ending up with a record-setting bang.

Among the last-week-in-June newlyweds are Lieut. and Mrs. Felix Sondern Hourdequin, who are honeymooning at an Eastern seaboard resort after their wedding on Saturday in the sacristy of St. Matthew's Cathedral here.

The bride is the former Miss Marion Elizabeth Owens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Whitfield Owens of Beloit, Wis., and her husband is the son of Mrs. Laura M. Hourdequin of Montclair, N. J., and the late Leon Paul Hourdequin of Brooklyn, N. Y. The Rev. John S. Spence officiated at the 3:30 o'clock ceremony at which the bride was escorted by her father.

She wore a fitted basque gown of white organdy made with a drop shoulder and bishop sleeves. Embroidered medallions followed the round neckline and also trimmed the full bouffant skirt which fell into a long circular train. Her shoulder-length veil of net was held in place by a coronet of medallions and she carried an old-fashioned bouquet of bouvardia and babies'-breath.

The maid of honor, Miss Peggy Koch of Dunkirk, wore a yellow organdy frock and a Juliet cap of fresh daisies that matched her arm bouquet of daisies. The other attendant, Mrs. Benjamin S. Stapleton, jr., of Yorktown, Va., wore an identical ensemble.

Charles L. Woody of New York served as best man, and the ushers were Lieut. Warren H. Ashley, U. S. N. R., and Lieut. (j. g.) Benjamin F. Stapleton, jr., U. S. N. R., of Yorktown, Va., and Lieut. (j. g.) J. Cuthbert Owens, U. S. N. R., of Fort Pierce, Fla., a brother of the bride.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the North Room of the Mayflower. The couple will make their home at the Naval Mine Depot in Yorktown, Va., where the bridegroom is stationed.

Lawson—Laster

Among Saturday's brides was Miss Jennie Melville Laster, daughter of Allen M. Laster of Washington, and Mrs. Annie L. Loving of Alexandria, Va., whose marriage to Corpl. Murhl T. Lawson took place at 7 o'clock in Keller Memorial Church. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Uriah Lawson of Silver Spring. The Rev. Cedric W. Tilberg officiated.

The bride wore a gown of white satin and net made with long sleeves, scalloped neckline and a full skirt with train. Her fingertip veil was held in place by a tiara of seed pearls and her cascade bouquet was of white roses centered with an orchid. Mrs. Frank F. Love, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Her gown of yellow mousseline de sole was fashioned with a long bodice scrolled with lace, a full skirt and and a sweetheart neckline. She carried delphinium and yellow daisies.

Bridesmaids were Miss Myrtle Lawson and Misss Mary Elizabeth Homan, who wore dresses of aqua fashioned like that of the matron of honor.

Charles Hughes was best man, and George Nelson, James McLaurin, Thomas Duffy and Corpl. Leroy Wines were ushers. A reception at the home of the bridegroom's parents followed the ceremony. After a wedding trip to Atlantic City, the couple will make their home with the bridegroom's parents.

Murphy—Stewart

Married in Tacoma, Wash., recently were Miss Laura Catherine Stewart, daughter of David B. Stewart, jr., of Washington, and Lieut. Richard Stock Murphy, U. S. A., son of Richard A. Murphy of Onstead, Mich. The ceremony took place at Christ Episcopal Church.

The bride wore a suit of beige crepe with blue accessories and orchid corsage. Miss Sara Lila Stewart, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a dress of blue crepe with accessories of blue and pink. Her corsage was of roses. The bridegroom's father was best man.

The bride attended American University and was graduated from the Peabody Conservatory of Music in Baltimore, Md. The bridegroom is a graduate of the University of Michigan and received his commission at Fort Sill, Okla. with the Field Artillery.

Alheim—Austin

After a wedding trip through southern Florida, Mr. and Mrs. John Louis Alheim, whose marriage took place on Sunday in Jacksonville, Fla., will make their home in the Cavalier Hotel in Washington.

Before her marriage the bride was Miss Betty Beals Austin, daughter of Mrs. W. L. Austin of Jacksonville. The Rev. J. T. Boone officiated at the 12:30 o'clock ceremony in the home of the bride's mother, after which a wedding breakfast was served.

The bride wore a honey beige dress set off with light luggage tan accessories and a corsage of orchids. Mrs. W. L. Austin served her daughter as matron of honor, wearing rose-colored chiffon in a sister outfit similar to the bride's. Her corsage was of rosebuds and lavender sweetpeas. The other attendant, Mrs. Ora Norvell, a sister of the bride, wore a corsage of Talisman roses on her sky-blue dress.

The bride, who was formerly of Richmond, Va., and New York, was graduated from Southern Seminary at Buena Vista, Va., and from Clark's College in Louisville, Ky. Her husband served at one time as financial adviser to the Lithuanian government. He now has a Government post in Washington.

Stanley Smiths Return

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley H. Smith have returned to their home on Thirty-second Place from Huntington, W. Va., where they went to attend the wedding of their son, Stanley, jr., to Miss Lela Lucille Williams.

Holidays for Diplomats Are Catch-as-Catch-Can These Days

No More Summer-Long Vacations For Hard-Working Envoys and Staffs

By Marie McNair

Time was when telephones jingling at any Embassy after June 1 would be answered with, "Sorry, the Ambassador is away for the summer." But times have changed, and today embassies and legations are running full staffed through three months of almost unbearable heat, and envoys sit at their desks awaiting new crises in world events which may leave them "a man without a country" or spell finis to their careers as diplomats in Washington. For these are indeed parlous times. Summer time was the holiday season before the war. Diplomats and their families packed up and left town, some to go home, others to the mountains or the sea. In recent years Hot Springs, Va., has become the diplomatic summer resort. That's because the Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, and Mrs. Hull were wont to slip off occasionally for a few days' rest at the spa, and diplomats anxious to keep their fingers on the pulse of the international situation followed.

The Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil are "regulars" at Hot Springs; so too, are the Egyptian Minister and Mme. Hassan, who were there for the weekend expect to go back in July for a longer stay.

Hot Springs was the favorite summer resort of members of the Japanese Embassy for a number of years, for most of them were excellent golfers and the course there is one of the best.

The war making European travel impossible, Mrs. Ralph W. Close, wife of the Minister of South Africa, has been unable to visit her daughter, who is in England. Her last trip back was on the Queen Mary's last journey, and war was declared shortly before she landed on Great Britain's shores. Like many others, the Minister and Mrs. Close are making no definite plans for a holiday, but hope to get away for a brief period in August.

It will probably be August, too, before the Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi will make plans for any sort of holiday. The Minister—a camera fan—used to like to spend his vacation on motor tours, kodak in hand all the way. But that was in the gas era—remember? So now Minister Bianchi must dig up his movie reels if he wishes to do any extensive traveling.

In the lush, plush era, Newport, summer capital of society with a capital S, was a favorite spot with several of the European chiefs of mission. The late Hungarian Minister, Count Szechenyi, established the legation there at the Breakers, a handsome villa which belonged to his wife, the former Gladys Vanderbilt. The one-time Greek Minister, Charalambos Simopoulos, and his wife, English-born and a continental to her fingertips, spent many gay days there, and handsome Charles Davila, erstwhile Minister of Rumania, may be remembered for his stark white bathing suit as he strut Baileys Beach, if for nothing else. Juan Riano, long Ambassador of Spain, and Mme. Riano, were among those who took off at the first sign of hot weather for Newport, there to remain until the season waned.

Wisest Policy To Stick Close

These days diplomats realize it is wise policy to stick close to the scene of action so that those who have plans to escape a Washington summer will never be very far away. The Peruvian Ambassador, Don Manuel de Freyre, who spent his summers at Eagles Mere, Pa., thinks he will stay at home this summer, the gas situation and other restrictions being what they are. Turkey is a long distance and a dangerous journey, so that the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun are making no plans for any sort of holiday. The Ambassador never goes away anyway, but it's been five years since Mme. Ertegun has glimpsed her homeland.

The Ecuadorian Ambassador, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, is contemplating going to Panama to see his sons, who are in business there, and if plans materialize will accompany Senora de Alfaro when she leaves about two weeks hence. The Spanish Ambassador, Juan de Cardenas, usually manages to get away for frequent weekends and Senora de Cardenas will spend some time in Massachusetts.

The wedding of her son, Rodolfo Michels, jr., will take Senora de Michels, wife of the Chilean Ambassador, to Mexico this summer, but just when that will be remains to be settled. Young Michels met his fiancee shortly after his arrival in Mexico City, told his mother it was "love in two weeks." His fiancee is Senorita Alicia Villagran, member of a prominent family of Senora, and a real beauty.

"We have no gas," wails Senora de Guachalla, wife of the Bolivian Ambassador, so I think we will stay at home."

But the pretty senora also adds that the new embassy is cool and the garden a blessing, so that the prospect of Washington as a summer resort is far from unpleasant.

Mme. Loudon At North Shore

Up on the North Shore, where the ocean roars in on the long stretches of sandy beaches, is Mme. Loudon, wife of the Netherlands Ambassador, with her young daughter, Harriette Beatrice, and about to leave for that same part of the country is Mme. Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Ambassador, who will go to Wianno on Cape Cod for a visit with friends. With her when she leaves on Wednesday will be her younger daughter, Solveig, while Marjorie, her first born, will be at camp at Roxbury, Vt., for the summer. The Ambassador will join them whenever he finds his duties will permit a brief respite.

The Ambassador of Guatemala and Seonora de Recinos are already in Guatemala preparing for the wedding of their daughter, Beatrice, on July 11, and the Ambassador of El Salvador and Senora de Castro, with their two daughters, Elena and Teresa, are also going home, leaving the first week in July, to be away two months.

The Honduran Ambassador believes in seeing America when he has the opportunity, usually going by motor to far distant points. This year he doesn't know. "The gas situation, you see."

To the mountains of Pennsylvania will go the Minister of Iraq, Ali Jawdat; Mme. Jawdat and their daughter, Miss Selwa Jawdat. They will leave about July 1 and the Minister will return to the legation shortly afterward, joining his family for frequent visits.

The Czecho-Slovakian Ambassador and Mme. Hurban hope to get away in August; the Venezuelan Ambassador and Senora de Escalante are just about as indefinite as to their plans and so are the Greek Ambassador and Mme. Diamantopoulos. Dr. Juan Carlos Blanco, Uruguayan Ambassador, and Senora de Blanco, having endured 14 days of this record-breaking weather, left on Friday to seek a change and are spending a few days at a nearby resort.

Wolf Trap Fete Not Canceled, Only Postponed

Mrs. Jouett Shouse announces the postponement of the annual "have fun" carnival for the benefit of the Institute of Women's Professional Relations, due to the ban on pleasure driving and the desire to cooperate to the fullest extent with present restrictions.

In a statement made at the office of the institute Mrs. Shouse said:

"The Office of Price Administration has requested that the 'wolf trap carnival' for the benefit of the institute be held at some location where the use of rationed gasoline would not be necessary. For this reason we are not canceling the carnival, but postponing it until this ban has been lifted. The institute will continue to cooperate with the Government in securing trained personnel to meet the present emergency, and to augment this service the carnival will be held at the first date designated by the Government agency responsible for gasoline allotments.

Those having tickets can either hold them or send them in for a refund.

Newlyweds to Make Home at El Paso

Lieut. and Mrs. George Stuer Reichenbach, jr., are en route for the bridegroom's station at El Paso, Texas, following their marriage on Wednesday evening in the Walter Reed Chapel.

The bride, who is the former Miss Edith Ellen Yobst, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Yobst, was escorted to the altar by her father. Chaplain John H. Donovan officiated at the ceremony, for which the bride wore a ruffle-trimmed organdy dress and a full-length veil held by a coronet of orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of white orchids, roses and stephanotis.

Miss Vivian Yobst was maid of honor for her sister and the other attendants were Mrs. Henry Moore and Miss Imogene Layman.

Ensign David Fegan served as best man and the ushers were Roy Steagall, Edward Steagall, George Vogel and Melvin Brooks.

Richardson-Dunlop Wedding Here

Married Sunday in the garden of her parents' home at 2101 Yorktown Road Northwest was Miss Marcella Cook Richardson, who was wed to James Robert Dunlop in a 4 o'clock ceremony. The Rev. Armand T. Eyler officiated.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace L. Richardson, was given in marriage by her father. Her gown was of embroidered white organdy bodice with sweetheart neckline and bouffant organdy skirt with short train. Her colonial nosegay was of white orchids and stephanotis. Miss Helen C. Richardson, sister of the bride, was maid of honor.

The bridegroom, son of Mrs. James R. Dunlop of Baltimore and the late Mr. Dunlop, had as his best man John de Wit. John Roper and Lieut. Charles Thompson were ushers. A reception followed the ceremony.

Mr. de Boal Is Honor Guest At Embassy

Pierre de Boal, American Ambassador to Bolivia, who will leave on Friday to return to La Paz, was guest of honor at a farewell party yesterday given by the Bolivian Ambassador and Senora de Guachalla. Sharing honors with Mr. de Boal was his daughter, Miss Mathilde de Boal, who has just graduated from Bryn Mawr and will leave with her father for South America. She will, however, go to Colombia where she has accepted a position as a bio-chemist.

Mr. de Boal came to Washington in the party accompanying the Bolivian President, General Penaranda, on his visit here early in May. He stayed on, was present at his daughter's graduation from college and has been working daily at a desk at the State Department. Mrs. de Boal remained in the Bolivian Capital.

Many of the guests yesterday, a cool drink in hand, wandered out into the garden, just now blooming with bright summer flowers fresher from the early afternoon rain. High-ranking Army and Navy officers, members of the State Department and other Government officials—about 150 in all—were invited to this pleasant party. Among those there were Gen. Blanton Winship, Vice Admiral and Mrs. Alfred W. Johnson, Rear Admiral and Mrs. William O. Spears, Comdr. and Mrs. Herbert Parker, Col. Winant Johnston, Col. and Mrs. Enrique Canova, Col. and Mrs. W. N. Adams, Gen. and Mrs. Stanley D. Embick, Col. and Mrs. Lawrence Higgins, Col. and Mrs. Edward H. Porter.

Others were Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Rockefeller, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Begg, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pearson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Kempter, George T. Summerlin, Dr. L. S. Rowe, Mr. and Mrs. Atherton Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Dawson, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Egger, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Pattee, Capt. and Mrs. Albert E. Schrader, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Nitze, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Matthews, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Finletter, Mr. and Mrs. Hector Lazo.

Pvt. First Class John William McLaughlin, USAAF, and Mrs. McLaughlin, are honeymooning on Long Island following their marriage in St. Paul's Church on Saturday. The bride, who is the former Miss Helen Marie Guinan, will return to Washington to make her home while her husband is stationed at Fort Dix, N. J.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Guinan of Jackson Heights, N. Y., and Mr. McLaughlin is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William D. McLaughlin of Washington. The Rev. Cornelius Dacey officiated at the noon ceremony, at which the bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white organdy and eyelet batiste and a fingertip veil, caught at the center with lilies of the valley. Her prayer book was covered with stephanotis.

Miss Margaret Buford of Eufalfa, Okla., was the maid of honor. She wore a pale blue marquisette dress and carried an old-fashioned bouquet of mixed flowers. William C. Roberts of Wood Acres, Md., was best man for his brother-in-law. The reception followed in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robberts.

The bridegroom, who is the grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas T. Keane of Washington, has recently completed training at Keisler Field, Miss.

In Virginia

Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin has had with her for a visit her sister, Mrs. John Keith of Warrenton, Va. Mrs. Hardin accompanied Mrs. Keith back to Warrenton, her old home, and will spend several months there.

WAAC Officer From 'All-Service Family' Assigned to Duty Here

The growing tradition of an "all-service" family is borne out in the case of Third Officer Elizabeth S. Davies, a former resident of Washington, who has been assigned to duty in the office of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps Staff Director in the Military District of Washington.

The daughter of the late Commander G. W. Smith, U. S. N., Third Officer Davies' husband was the late Ward J. Davies, major in the Air Forces. Her son, Ward J. Davies, jr., is now an ensign on active duty with the Coast Guard. Her daughter, Mrs. Matthew Whalen, is the wife of Major Whalen, who is stationed at Fort Knox, Ky.

Before her assignment here, Third Officer Davies completed a course of instruction at the Adjutant General's School, Fort Washington, Md. Previously she was on duty with a WAAC company in Philadelphia, where her mother, Mrs. G. W. Smith, and her daughter, Miss Elizabeth A. Davies, reside. The WAAC officer now makes her home at 6503 Twentieth Avenue, Green Meadows, Md.

THIRD OFFICER DAVIES

Dr. G. A. Carden And Bride Will Make Home Here

The Cosmopolitan Club in New York was the scene of the 3 o'clock wedding Saturday afternoon of Miss Constance Seeger Sullivan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Sullivan of New York and Boonton, N. J., and Dr. George Alexander Carden, jr., son of Judge and Mrs. George A. Carden of New York. Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white faille trimmed with marquisette. Her veil was of tulle and she carried a bouquet of white orchids and sweet peas.

Miss Nancy A. Sullivan was her sister's maid of honor. She was dressed in green marquisette and Miss Nancy Sullivan Curtis, a niece of the bride and her flower girl, wore peach marquisette. William E. Palmer served as best man.

Following a brief honeymoon, the couple will make their home at 1308 Twenty-seventh Street. Dr. Carden is in Washington with the National Research Council. He is a graduate of Choats School, Yale University, and Yale Medical School. Before coming to the Capital, he was on the staff of the Presbyterian Hospital in New York. His wife was graduated from Brearley School in New York and Bryn Mawr College. For the past year she has been working in a war agency here.

Dutch Envoy Celebrates Royal Event

The Netherlands had cause for double celebration yesterday.

In Washington the birthday of Prince Bernhard and the christening of young Princess Margriet Francisca were celebrated with wartime simplicity. The Dutch Ambassador, Alexander Loudon, asked in the members of the embassy staff for a pre-luncheon reception at 12:30 to toast their prince and his third daughter. Mme. Loudon, who is spending the summer at Nonquitt, Mass., is in Ottawa for the event.

In Ottawa, dignitaries were out in full regalia to attend the christening of the blue-eyed, golden-haired daughter of Crown Princess Juliana. Queen Wilhelmina, accompanied by Foreign Minister E. N. Van Kleffens, arrived in Ottawa several weeks ago to be present at the event. The Dowager Queen Mary of England is a godmother for the little princess and President Roosevelt is a godfather.

The ceremony took place in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church with Dr. Bruggraaf, pastor of the Reformed Church of Huguenot Park and Princess Bay, Staten Island, N. Y., officiating. An informal reception followed for those witnessing the religious services.

Prince Bernhard, on active duty with the Allied Air Forces, arrived in Canada several days ago to attend the christening and to celebrate his birthday with his family.

Two Motorists Fined Total Of 46 Coupons

Two District motorists were fined 24 and 22 gasoline coupons, respectively, yesterday by the District OPA. Five others received lesser penalties and three were told to await further investigation by their ration boards on pleasure driving violation charges.

William Reynolds, 3405 Prospect Avenue Northwest, told Board 20 that he had applied for home-to-office mileage and hence felt justified in taking his car to Baltimore, Md., each weekend as he maintains a home there. He lost two "B" books containing 24 coupons.

Martin E. Christianson, 351 Eleventh Street Southeast, was penalized 22 coupons by Local Board 40 when investigation showed that he no longer was engaged in the essential war work at Camp Springs Air Base, Md., for which his ration had been granted. When he was reported recently for pleasure driving, questioning proved that he is now in unessential employment, OPA said.

Meanwhile investigators reported that 179 alleged cases of unnecessary driving were observed Monday night, boosting the total to 3692 since the ban went into effect in May.

At Board 61, Whittington Street and Lane Place Northeast, charges against two motorists were dismissed. Board 20, in addition to revoking Reynolds' B books, suspended the A book issued to Joseph E. Hilleary, 2 Fowlers Hill Southwest, and told two other motorists to await further investigation. They are Clyde V. McBroom, 4841 Reservoir Road Northwest, and Charles E. Miller, 4000 Beecher Street Northwest.

At Board 10, Fourteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, James Franklin, 1217 Q Street Northwest, forfeited one A coupon, and Edgar Williams, 1312 R Street Northwest, failed to appear for hearing and was notified to send in four A coupons.

Board 31, Thirteenth and Allison Streets Northwest, heard seven cases, and dismissed all of them.

Hutchison Listed Killed In Action

Originally reported a prisoner of war on May 14, Edward Jennings Hutchison, jr., Arlington, Va., native, was yesterday listed as killed in action, by the Navy Department.

HUTCHISON

In listing the death of Hutchison, the Navy reported 2 dead, 10 missing and a change of status from prisoner of war to dead for 11 other men.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Hutchison of 4441 North Sixteenth Street, Arlington, Hitchison was born June 21, 1922. After attending Cherrydale Elementary School and Washington and Lee High School, he was employed by Western Union. He enlisted in the Navy in September, 1940, and the following January was sent to the Hawaiian Islands. In May of 1941, he asked to be transferred to the Asiati Fleet and was stationed on the Canopus, based at Manila.

In addition to his parents, survivors are four sisters, Shirley, Bette, Eleanor and Ann Hutchison, and three brothers, Lynwood, Richard and David Hutchison.

Requiem Mass Set Tomorrow For J. M. Connell

Requiem mass will be said for John M. Connell, 4717 Fifteenth Street Northwest, at St. Paul's Church at 9 a. m. tomorrow following funeral services from his home at 8:30.

He died at Georgetown Hospital Monday following a heart attack last Saturday.

Mr. Connell, 59, was born here and for 29 years was an accountant for the Western Union. He is survived by a son, John M. Connell, jr., a daughter, Mrs. Mary Catherine Dolan, and two grandchildren, Frank J. Dolan, jr., and Eleanore Connell.

His wife, Mrs. Delia M. Connell, died last April 17.

Mr. Connell was a member of Keane Council and a fourth degree Knights of Columbus and active in church affairs. He was for 14 years president of the Holy Name Society of St. Paul's. Interment will be at Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Ex-Publisher Says Viereck Put Up Funds

Sigfrid H. Hauck, former official in the Flanders Hall Publishing Co. of New Jersey, testified at the trial of George Sylvester Viereck in District Court yesterday that the defendant contributed $25,000 to the publishing house which printed several antiwar pamphlets.

Viereck approved contracts and gave many manuscripts for publication by the company, Hauck testified, and lost $18,000 in the venture. Yet all the while, Viereck signed none of the minutes of the company and to the outside world was unknown as backer of the company, Hauck testified.

Viereck is on trial on charge that he failed to register fully with the State Department his activities as an agent of the Reich. This is the third trial, the first resulting in a conviction which was reversed by the U. S. Supreme Court, the second in a mistrial because of technicality.

Hauck told of coming to Washington before the war to discuss the publishing of two anti-interventionist books with Representatives Stephen A. Day (Republican) of Illinois, and then Senator Rush D. Holt (Democrat) of West Virginia, both anti-interventionists before the war.

The names of several other Congressmen were introduced as commending by letter the book, "The One Hundred Families Which Rule the British Empire."

Hauck, under cross-examination, testified that Viereck had written essays in which he objected to totalitarianism in any form.

Two District Men Reported Nazi Prisoners

Messages to the families of Pvt. Frank M. Brosnan and Pvt. Alonzo W. Edwards of Washington have advised them that they are well, though prisoners in Germany. Both men, who originally were reported missing February 17, were among 922 United States soldiers listed as prisoners of Germany by the War Department yesterday.

BROSNAN

At the same time, the War Department announced a group of 267 additional prisoners, 10 held by Germany, 1 by Italy and 265 by Japan.

Brosnan, the son of William J. Brosnan of 2611 Franklin Street Northeast, was born in Washington April 13, 1922. After attending Hine Junior High School, he was employed at the Naval Torpedo Station in Alexandria. He enlisted in the Army on June 11, 1942, and was stationed at Fort Meade, Md., for four months before being sent overseas.

A short-wave radio message, relayed June 19, was sent to the Brosnans by the War Department and four ohter interceptors, who said the message was: "Dear Mom and Dad: I am well and okay here in Bavaria. Don't worry. Will write when I can. . . . Have lost everything. . . . Treated well and food good."

A son of Alonzo H. Edwards of 202 Twelfth Street Southeast, Edwards has also been able to communicate with his family, writing on March 18 that he didn't have to work "too hard" and advising them not to worry about him. Born in Franklin County, N. C., August 24, 1910, he came to the District in 1930. For 11 years he was employed by the Capital Transit Co. as a motorman. He entered the Army in June, 1941, and was released the following October since he was over 28. After Pearl Harbor, he was recalled in January, 1942, and sent overseas in April of that year. He has one brother, Joseph Clayton Edwards, of Washington, and three sisters, Mrs. Mabel Moore and Mrs. Carrie Weaver, both of Washington, and Mrs. Ethel Boone of Spring Hope, N. C.

Byrd Bill Hits Wasteful Use Of U. S. Autos

Use of Government cars to transport Army and Navy "brass-hats" and Federal bureaucrats from "the Shoreham Hotel to their offices" was hotly scored yesterday by Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia, who proposed a $1000 fine or a year in jail to stop "this waste of ?Federal funds and gasoline."

At a hearing on his bill to control use of Government cars held yesterday by a Senate Judiciary Committee, Byrd charged that the Government was burning up more that a million gallons of gasoline each month. He said official travel has not been curtailed in proportion to the extent that ordinary civilian use of cars has been curbed.

Official Use Only

Byrd's measure would outlaw the use of Federal cars for any but official purposes, and specifically bans "the transportation of officers and employes from their domiciles to places of employment.' Cabinet members are excluded from its provisions.

Byrd's bill, introduced as the result of his studies as chairman of the Joint Committee on reduction of nonessential Federal expenditures, provides that United States owned cars in Washington be placed in a pool for the duration of the war. Those not required for replacement purposes would be held in storage, while those in use would bear conspicuous signs designating their use.

The bill's objectives were praised by Clair Roddewig, an attorney for the Office of Defense Transportation, but he asked for an amendment so that use of Government buses transporting defense workers to their jobs in areas where public facilities were inadequate would not be banned.

Byrd told the committee that the bill was approved in principle by OPA Director Prentiss Brown.

The section of the bill establishing a pool was opposed by N. A. Townsend, special assistant to the Attorney General, who said such an arrangement might waste more gasoline than it would save.

Justice, Commerce State Funds Approved

The Senate completed congressional action yesterday on a bill providing 226 million dollars for the State, Justice and Commerce Departments during the fiscal year starting July 1.

The measure includes $29,400,000 for the training of civilian pilots for the Army by the Commerce Department's Civil Aeronautics Administration. Under terms of the bill, the pilots will be called into active duty not later than September 1, 1943.

Election Held By Criminal Justice Group

Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post, yesterday was reelected president of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, which he founded seven years ago.

At a meeting in the Willard Hotel, members of the association named John A. Remon first vice president; Miss Alice C. Werner, second vice president; William Roy Vallance, secretary; Dr. James A. Nolan, assistant secretary, and Vincent Saccardi, treasurer.

Directors chosen for a two-year term ending May 31, 1945, were: Mrs. Anne Archbold, Robert Woods Bliss, Spencer Gordon, Morris Cafritz, James A. Cobb, Sefton Darr, Charles B. Dulcan, sr., Waldron Faulkner, Curtis McCalip, Eugene Meyer, Benjamin McKelway, Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, John A. Remon, Vincent Saccardi, John Saul, G. Howland Shaw, William Roy Vallance and Miss Werner.

Capt. Rhoda Milliken, chief of the Women's Bureau of the Metropolitan Police, told members of the association that the great increase in juvenile delinquency in the District necessitated more intensive study of child care problems, particularly in relation to the postwar world.

Children's offenses common today seem slight, Captain Milliken said, but the danger is in breeding a crop of future serious criminals. Teen-age girls, most of them amateurs, who come under her jurisdiction, cause one of the city's major juvenile problems.

Miss Petrie Wins Beauty Contest of Recreation Group

Margaret Petrie, 4202 Kaywood Drive, Mount Rainier, took first place in a beauty contest which high-lighted the Talent Night program of the Women's Battalion of Recreation Services, Inc., at the Thomson Recreation Center Monday night. At the same time Mary Egan, 3804 Broadbranch Road Northwest, was chosen as the most beautiful hedhead.

Presented to an all-feminine audience, the program also included folk and tap dances, songs and several dramatic skits. Capt. Henry Schauffler, special services officer of Fort Belvoir, served as master of ceremonies.

Runners-up to Miss Petrie were Peggy Pahlow, 3206 Bunker Hill Road, Mount Rainier, Md., and Mildred Kikta, 29 Mississippi Avenue Northwest, who took second and third place, respectively. Joan Kirby, 1405 Kennedy Street Northwest, and Irma Brennan, 1822 Vermont Avenue Northwest, won second and third place in the contest for the most beautiful red head.

Ad Club Members View Pennsylvania-Central Lines Operations at National Airport

Split-second efficiency of one of Washington's war industries was viewed yesterday by 50 members and guests of the Advertising Club as they were taken on a tour of the big Pennsylvania-Central Airlines operation following their luncheon meeting at Washington National Airport.

Before the tour, P.-C. A. president, C. Bedell Monro, presented a silver trophy to John Groves, manager of the airport, for "his efficient management of one of the Nation's busiest and most important air terminals."

Then four P.-C. A. department heads took the visitors for an inspection of its entire war plant, where 200 employes were doing all types of aircraft work, from welding metals in machine shops to dismantling giant cargo planes for overhauling.
